The sale of the Plantation Bitters is without precedent in the history of the world. There is no secret in the matter. They are at once the most speedy, strengthening health restorer ever discovered. It requires but single trial to understand this. Their purity can always be relied upon. They are composed of the cele- rated Calisaya Bark, Cascarilla Bark, Dandelion, hamomile Flowers, Lavender Flowers, Wintergreen, nise, Clover-buds, Orange-peel, Snake-root, Caraway, oriander, Burdook.

S.—T.—1860—X. &c.

They are especially recommended to clergymen, pub- c speakers, and persons of literary habits and seden- ry life, who require free digestion, a relish for food, d clear mental faculties.

Delicate females and weak persons are certain to find these Bitters what they have so long looked for.

They purify, strengthen and invigorate.

They create a healthy appetite.

They are an antidote to change of water and diet.

They overcome effects of dissipation and late hours.

They strengthen the system and enliven the mind.

They prevent miasmatic and intermittent fevers

They purify the breath and acidity of the stomach.

They cure Dyspepsia and Constipation.

Mhey cure Diarrhea, Cholera and Cholera Morbus.

They cure Liver Complaint and Nervous Headache.

They are the best Bitters in the world. They make e weak man strong, and are exhausted nature's great storer.

The following startling and emphatic statements can seen at our office.

Near Acquia Creek, March 4th, 1863.

Owing to the great exposure and terrible decomposi- n after the battle of Antietam, I was utterly pros- ated and very sick. My stomach would not retain dicine. An article called Plantation Bitters, prepar- by Dr. Drake, of New York, was prescribed to give strength and an appetite. To my great surprise ey gave me immediate relief. Two bottles almost al- wed me to join my regiment. * * * * * I have ce seen them used in many cases, and am free to say, hospital or private purposes I know of nothing like em.

Hunnewell's Great Remedies.

WHAT EVERY FAMILY SHOULD HAVE IN THE HOUSE AND WHY;

☞ They should have HUNNEWELL'S UNIVERSAL COUGH REMEDY, because it effectually cures Colds, Whooping and Common Coughs. Sore Throat, Hoarseness, and is the most simple and perfect Soothing Syrup in the world. For old and young, by day and night, it may be used with the greatest freedom, and three-fourths of the deaths by Consumption stopped.

They should have HUNNEWELL'S TOLU ANODYNE, because it is a perfect remedy for Neuralgia, Nervous or Sick Headache, Tooth, and Earache, Pain in Stomach, or Bowels, Genuine Cholera Morbus, Rheumatism, Distress after Eating, Nervousness, Hysteria, and the chief of all causes of disease, and Insanity, Loss of Sleep. Its character, though active, is simple; its action in perfect conformity to nature; its end cure, or relief.

For the pains in Monthly Menstruation a perfect relief, while nature's after work is not disturbed, and one of the most important points in Medicine.

They should have HUNNEWELL'S ECLECTIC PILLS, because with seldom but a single Pill for a dose all derangements of the Stomach and Bowels are cured. They cure Indigestion, Dyspepsia, Headache, when caused by foul stomach, Loss of Appetite, Biliousness, so often and so erroneously treated with Mercurials, Jaundice. For Worms a sure cure.

They act simple, assist nature, do not make a Pill Box of the stomach, as is the most fatal error of taking so many Pills at a dose and then, what is important to every Family and every Purse, one bottle goes as far as two or three of what is ordinarily sold.

The confidence of all is asked to test

NEW YEAR'S ADDRESS

OF THE CARRIERS OF THE

SOUTH DANVERS WIZARD,

JANUARY 1, 1864.

The year is up! its hours have fled,
Old Time his year-glass turning,
Its passing days are marked with red
In blood stains of the worthy dead,
Their patriot ardor burning.

The year is up—the rebel strife
With scenes of woe attended,
The wildering din, the loss of life,
The muffled drum, the screaming fife—
We trust are well nigh ended.

Kind friends, we greet you once again
We have no wish to teaze you,
We only say, with might and main,
In heat and cold, in wind and rain,
We've struggled hard to please you.

We wish you all a happy year
Of joys and blessings many,
Of love from all who hold you dear,
A year of peace and great good cheer,
And not of grief to any.

We've brought the paper to your door
In Summer's sun and Winter's,
We've told the truth, and sometimes more,
Of modern deeds and ancient lore,
Just as it pleased the printers.

We've told you all that's done and said
And who has done the fighting,
The names of those who fought and bled,
The poisoned fangs of Copperhead
The nation's prospects blighting.

Of pleasant scenes of peace and home
The news we've often carried,
Of those who go and those who come,
Of friends in town, and those who roam,
And couples who have married.

We've told you of the Railroad scheme,
Who did the engineering,
Who laid the track, who drove the team,
And how the ladies raised a scream,
When cars were out of gearing.

We might have told who planned the route
The rails in order keeping,
Who viewed the track and laid it out
And knocked the little stones about,
By nice and careful sweeping.

To White the public thanks are due
Who kept the cars from jumping;
He watched the track and swept it too,
And saved the bones of many of you
From hard and heavy thumping.

And yet alas! he got no thanks
For these good operations,
But says he'll let them play their pranks,
For he can go on his own shanks
In spite of corporations.

But Sam is modest and polite,
And does what he's inclined to,
He's slow to boast, but brave to fight,
And always does the thing that's right,
Because he has a mind to.

Few men like him can turn the wheel
That grinds the corn of knowledge;
So gentle friends, you well may feel
The grain he grinds makes better meal
Than much that comes from college.

He does the work, all this is plain
By every thing that's proper,
While others but prepare the grain

'Tis he who prints the words that tell,
And not the penny-a-liner,
He turns the wheel, with Wizard spell
To grind the grain and bake it well,
Our skillful Samuel Quiner.

'Tis thus he makes his mental bread
If well the dough is kneaded;
He has a wizard skill, 'tis said,
That all his patrons may be fed
If once his rules are heeded.

How hard it is you well may say—
(You'd sooner take a whipping.)
To go about at early day
And leave this knowledge on the way—
The weather wet and dripping—

You well may say, how hard our fare,
And not a path of roses,
We have a precious load to bear
And Winter's cold we often share
With dew drops at our noses.

We carriers do our good by stealth
And wear an empty pocket,
We have, alas! no store of wealth
And journey weekly for our health,
But then we have to walk it.

Content we are as good old Grimes
And not disposed to mutter,
But then we want your paper dimes
To help us on in these hard times,
To get our bread and butter.

We leave it to your conscience friends
To give us what you owe us,
And if you think your giving tends
To strike a pang—why, make amends
And pray, do not bestow us.

We would not beg, we do not plead
Content with what you proffer us
You know our wants, just what we need,
We have no churlish miser's greed
But take just what you offer us.

Mayhaps you think 'twould be a crime
And say you hadn't oughter,
So if you at this very time
Should deem it wrong to give a dime
We'll take a paper quarter.

Now gentle friends, long life to you
Your garners running over,
But give us now a dime or two
And you will see a happy crew
As little pigs in clover.

Selected.

Gen. Grant.—We saw Gen. Grant to-day, says a correspondent, "with his usual companion, a half-smoked cigar in his mouth. He looks satisfied with the work performed at Chattanooga. His men say he has but one thing more to do, and that relates to the Army of the Potomac. He must go and fight it to victory, and then his work will be well done, and the rebellion crushed. So far he is justly regarded as our greatest and most successful warrior, and yet his personal appearance don't show it in the slightest degree. See him riding along the street. An old, low, flat-crowned hat, like a hack driver's of a rainy day, covers his head. A long unmilitary sack overcoat envelopes his person, while a pair of brown trowsers coming down over his boots, which look very much like a country boy's Sunday go-to-meeting pair, comprise the uniform of our great General. He has just mounted his horse, and with that inevitable cigar stump in his mouth he jogs off. His stooping form would indicate age, but his face, with his whiskers short cropped, indicate reflection and decision. In fact, to observers, he seems wrapt up in his thoughts, and the staff officer at his side often speaks twice before he gets the General's attention. He is not known to the army, and on ordering some officer to form his regiment on the evening of the fight on the hill, came near drawing out a reply from the officer which would have taken the straps from his shoulders."

☞ Here's the way they get Volunteers in Indiana:—"At a Union meeting at Kingston, Decatur county, recently, Colonel Wilder proposed a collection to raise money for volunteers. One hundred dollars were raised, and a man stepped forward, signed the roll and secured the money. Holding it up he said, 'Here is one hundred dollars for the next volunteer.' Another came who did the same thing, and another, and so on till nineteen men were enrolled, and the money was then voted to the Sanitary Commission."

☞ The brain of a hasty man is like a sooty chimney; it is continually in danger of taking fire from the flames beneath. The brain of a well-ordered and quiet citizen is like a chimney newly swept; the sparks of passion pass through

A PARODY.

The Nashville Union gets off the following capital parody on Halleck's "Marco Bozzaris:"

At midnight in his blackguard tent
"Old Beau" was dreaming of the hour
When Gilmore, like a suppliant bent,
Should tremble at his power.
In dreams through camp and street he bore
The trophies of a conqueror.
In dreams his song and triumph heard,
He sported Gilmore's gold-laced hat,
His red-topped boots, his gray cravat—
As wild his fancy as a bat,
Or "any other bird."

An hour passed on—"Old Beau" awoke,
Half stifled by a "villainous" smoke,
Enough the very devil to choke,
While all around the "stink pots" broke,
And blinded him with sand.
He cursed the "villainous compound"
Which stunk like polecats far around;
Then roared with a wild demoniac shriek—
"Lord, what a smell—the Greek! the Greek!
Put out this villainous Greek fire,
Or in the last red ditch expire!
'Tis sweet to draw one's dying breath
For our dear land, as Horace saith,
But dreadful to be stunk to death!"

A ROYAL SLEIGH RIDE.

BY JOHN S. C. ABBOTT.

Winter has its joys, unsurpassed by any which summer can afford. Who can forget the merry sleigh rides of his youthful days! young men and maidens crowded together, the moonlight, the fring of the forest, the vast expanse of snow, the jingle of the bells, the shouts of laughter, perchance the overturn into the feathery drift, the country tavern with its blazing, crackling fire of wood, the stamping of the young men beating the snow from their boots, the table spread with all luxuries, the music and games, the return long after midnight! Those sleigh rides are among the most joyous of the pleasures of the North, and would reluctantly be changed for any amusement to be found in the land of the orange and the fig.

There was a sleigh ride in Russia, a century ago, of such note in its magnitude and its splendor, as to have been deemed worthy of historic commemoration. Russia's immortal historian, Karamkim, has devoted to its record several pages of its classic beauty, unsurpassed by any in the annals of Greece or Rome.

It was the month of December, 1769. The Empress Catharine II. was upon the throne. Frederic of Prussia and Catherine, with that utter disregard of justice which has so generally marked the diplomacy of cabinets, were conspiring together, for an attack on Poland, that they might divide the kingdom between them. Frederic sent his brother Henry to St. Petersburg, ostensibly for a friendly visit, but in reality to mature plans for the treacherous invasion. The prize they sought was sufficiently gigantic to enlist all the energies of the royal bandits. Catherine gave Henry a reception of pomp and magnificence such as even an imperial court had rarely witnessed before. One of the entertainments with which she honored him was a moonlight sleigh ride.

The sleigh which conveyed Catharine and the Prussian Prince was a beautiful parlor, capacious and furnished with every conceivable luxury. It was covered and enclosed by double glasses, in large plates, that every object without could be distinctly seen. Mirrors were also ingeniously arranged so as to multiply and reflect all the scenes through which they passed. This imperial sledge, with gorgeous decorations was drawn by sixteen horses. A retinue of two thousand sledges of the nobility followed. These were also constructed for the occasion, at a vast expense, and embellished in the highest style of art. The great dignitaries of the empire, ladies and gentlemen, in costume the most showy, crowded these vehicles which were drawn by four, six and eight horses. Expense seemed to have been utterly disregarded in the preparation of the pageant. Every person except the empress and her guest, was dressed in fancy costume and masked.

The night was clear; not a breath of air was stirring, and the full moon rode brilliantly through the starry skies. The road upon which thousands of laborers had been employed, to remove every obstruction, wound charmingly along thro' valleys and forests and mountain gorges. Early in the evening and with military precision, the brilliant pageant swept through the streets of St. Petersburg.—When two miles from the city the train the rainbow never equaled. Even those courtly eyes, accustomed to such shows, gazed with admiration upon the spectacle.

Every mile of the drive was thus marked by some grand structure, which, with its blaze of light outshone the splendor of the moon; and in the ingenuity of its devices, with flames of every hue extorted incessant exclamations of wonder and delight. There were shafts, temples, pyramids, colonades, illuming the wintry scene with effulgence rivaling that of noonday. Opposite each of these structures were ball rooms reared, the sides composed of double glass, so that everything within could be distinctly seen. Here the peasantry were assembled, in each one group of a few hundred, from some particular province of the empire, dressed in the gayest of their provincial garbs, and engaged in their rustic games and dances. The variety of costume and of sports was infinite, and often grotesque and amusing in the highest degree. The sledges passed slowly by, that all might witness the entertaining spectacle, and then with almost the speed of the wind, they passed on to the next theatric show. All the games and national dances were thus witnessed. The national airs were sung or performed by the best trained bands, and all sorts of gymnastic feats, such as vaulting, tumbling, and performances on the tight and slack rope, were exhibited.

Through such scenes, incessantly repeated the imperial pleasure party rode, until a high mountain rose before them, which was opened to their view through a broad avenue out in the forest. The mountain was arranged, with the most amazing skill of fireworks, to represent Mount Hecla in one of the most violent of its eruptions. The earth seemed to quake beneath the terrific explosions.—Vast billows of flame and fiery missiles, of every form and hue, were ejected from its glowing crater hundreds of feet into the air, descending upon the hill sides, and rolling down the craggs in a shower of fire. The spectacle was so sublime as to be almost appalling. In mute astonishment the pleasure party gazed upon the wonderful phenomenon, in which art seemed to outvie, the most mighty of the energies of nature. The region, for leagues around, was illumined with the furtile glare, which sent a thrill of terror to the peasants far away on the distant hill sides and in the valleys.

Again the horses were pushed on, and before the spectators had recovered from the surprise the volcanic mountain had created, the train suddenly entered a Chinese village, which had been reared for the occasion upon the exact model of one of the most picturesque of Chinese towns, and inhabited by crowds of men, women and children, in the garb and engaged in the traffic and sports of the Chinese on a festive day. The long street through which the train passed, was brilliantly illuminated and presented a spectacle as novel as it was entertaining.

The train passed slowly through the street and then found that it was only the majestic portal to the imperial pallace of Tazarkoselo. As the sledges drove to the door, they were speedily emptied of their contents, and the whole courtly throng of between three and four thousand, were sauntering in those saloons which were amply spacious enough to entertain them all. The pallace was lighted with a countless number of chandelier and wax candles. The imperial bands were there, and for two hours the pleasure seekers forgot time in the mazes of the cotillion. In the midst of the exhilerating scene of voluptuous music, illumination and the dance, the heavy report of cannon was heard and instantly every musical instrument was still, every light was extinguished, every voice was hushed, and there was a moment of silence and darkness as that of the tomb.

Suddenly a magnificent display of fireworks, blazed up, extending in front of the windows of the palace, and a brilliant blaze of day succeeded the momentary gloom. As the gorgeous display faded out, there was another report of cannon, and, as by magic, the candles blazed, a sumptuous entertainment was served up. Every luxury which Europe and Asia could afford was supplied for the occasion, and Belshazar's feast was eclipsed.

Dancing was again renewed, and as the dawn of the morning dimly appeared the revelers returned to their homes. This is undoubtedly the most brilliant in some degree eclipsed it, but which we now have not space to record. To enable kings and nobles to indulge in such voluptuousness, the millions of Russia were enslaved, doomed to mud hovels, ignorance, black bread and joylessness from the cradle to the grave.

A Remarkable Memory. — John Franklin was a native of Canaan, Litchfield county, Connecticut. An instance of his remarkable memory, when a lad of seventeen, will show that he was no ordinary boy. Having accompanied the family to the place of worship, the meeting house being enclosed, but neither ceiled nor plastered, the beams and rafters were all exposed to view. John saw that his father sat through the sermon with great uneasiness, and could not define the cause. On returning home, "John," said the father, "it is my duty to give you a severe thrashing, (common in olden times and ought to be in modern) and you shall have it presently, so prepare yourself." "But you won't whip me, father, without telling me what for?" "No, certainly—your conduct at meeting is the cause. Instead of attending to the sermon, you were at the time gaping about as if you were counting the beams and rafters of the meeting house." "Well, father, can you repeat the sermon?" "Sermon! no I had as much as I could do to watch your inattention." "I'll tell you all the minister said if you won't whip me." "No, John, no; but that is impossible." Young Franklin immediately named the text, and taking up the discourse, went through every head of it with surprising accuracy. "Upon my word," said the delighted parent, "I should not have thought it." "And now, father," said John, "I can tell you how many beams and rafters there are in the meeting house."—History of Wyoming.

☞ Miss Cobbe, in an article on "The Humor of Various Nations," in the July number of the Victoria Magazine, tells the following story of an Irish definition of a miracle:

"A priest, in Ireland, having preached a sermon on miracles, was asked by one of his congregation, walking homewards, to explain a little more lucidly 'what a miracle meant.' 'Is it a meracle you want to understand?' said the priest. 'Walk on, then, forninst me, and I think how I can explain it to you.' The man walked on, and the priest came after him, and gave him a tremendous kick. 'Ugh!' roared the sufferer, 'why did you do that?' 'Did you feel it?' asked the priest. 'To be sure I did,' replied the man. 'Well, then, it would have been a meracle if you had not,' returned the priest."—Beader.

☞ The man who pays the largest personal tax in New York city lives in the same house in which he kept a store for some fifty years; he washes himself in a tin pan in the back yard whenever he does wash at all; takes a basket and goes out to buy a little food, which a woman in the house prepares for him.—He sells no goods at present, but adds to his vast wealth daily by lending money on good security, being just as shrewd, keen and close as he ever was, though he is much beyond seventy years of age.—Alas for the poverty of riches.

☞ The hat was passed around in a certain congregation for the purpose of taking up a collection. After making the circuit of the church it was handed to the minister, who by the way, had "exchanged pulpits" with the regular preacher, and he found not a penny in it. He inverted the hat over the pulpit cushion and shook it that its emptiness might be known, then raising his eyes toward the ceiling he exclaimed with great fervor:—"I thank God that I got back my hat from this congregation."

Habits influence the character pretty much as the under-currents influence a vessel, and whether they speed us on the way of our wishes, or retard our progress, their effect is not the less important because imperceptible.

Horace Mann very beautifully remarked that a brother's tender relation to a sister was designed by Heaven as a preparation and a prophecy of that holier relation for which one shall forsake father and mother, and brother and sister.

Surely one of the best rules in conversation is, never to say a thing which any of the company can reasonably wish we had left unsaid; nor can any thing be well more contrary to the ends for which the people meet together, than to part unsatisfied with each other or themselves.

Few parents like to be told of the faults of a child. The reason is obvious. All faults are either hereditary or educational; and in either case to point a finger at a child is, indirectly, to reprove the parent.

☞ How many common figurative expressions in our language are borrowed from the art of carpentry, may be seen in the following sentence: "The lawyer who filled a bill, shaved a note, cut an acquaintance, split a hair, made an entry, got up a case, framed an indictment, empanneled a jury, put them into a box, nailed a witness, hammered a judge, and bored a whole court, all in one day, has since laid down the law and turned carpenter.

Can't take your oath, Sir.—A few days since, in a township of Canada East, north of us, a lawsuit was in progress in which a person was brought forward as a witness. An inquiry as to his residence, etc., drew out the fact that he had gone from the States into Canada, to escape being drafted into the service of his country. "Can't take your Oath, Sir," said the magistrate, and the fellow was left to sneak off under derision.

WEDNESDAY, JANUARY 6, 1864.

OURSELVES.

The pressure of our press-work, and other multifarious duties of Editor and boss combined in the same individual, prevented us from making the appeal to our readers, which is common at this season of the year. Considering the state of public affairs, and that so many of our citizens are abroad in the service of the country, we have no reason to complain of want of patronage to the office or the newspaper. On the contrary, we have found that our people have acted on the sound maxim, to first take care of their own. They have always shown a generous disposition, when "other things are equal," to give our office the preference, which is all we can ask. We thank them for this preference, and shall continue to do all we can to deserve it.

We do not mean to be content with what we have already attained, but to make renewed and greater efforts to raise the character and standing of the paper. Changes have been made the past year in its Editorial department, and it is our intention to make such further changes as shall relieve us so far that we can give more personal and particular attention to the details of the office. As we call upon our citizens for their patronage, we are not unmindful that it is incumbent on us to do all we can to deserve it. To this end, while we shall endeavor to keep the paper up to the same standard as before, we shall also introduce new features, which cannot fail to make it still more worthy of their patronage. We shall endeavor to give it more of life and vitality and cheerful good humor.

——Various,

That the mind of man, fitful and pleased
With novelty, may be indulged.

We intended at this time to make some remarks on the advantages to a community of sustaining in its midst a local press, but these must be deferred to a future time.

☞ The letter of the French literati to the Union League of New York, is the most admirable document in favor of the North that has yet appeared from abroad. Cordiality, sincerity, and good sense are apparent in every line, and give weight to the honest advice which they tender towards the close of the article;—advice which bears the impress of moral and political wisdom, in the main. A question, however, might be raised on that point wherein they seem to discountenance the enforcement of the confiscation act. The confiscation law is as clearly defined as any other, and it would be folly on the part of the government not to avail itself of it for the possession of those estates forfeited by the treason of the owners, which it has the power to seize.

☞ The grand political chowder at Paris, to which the various European governments—called a congress—are invited, seems to be a long while in cooking, and will probably get burnt before the parties assemble. Several difficult conditions are annexed to the invitation, such as for each representative to bring his own spoon, pepper and salt, &c. As a number of the Continental States are exceedingly poor, it will be hard for them to comply with these stipulations.

☞ The Richmond Sentinel publishes a begging appeal to rich Southern families to turn in their gold and silver plate to the rebel treasury for the benefit of the holy cause of independence and to bolster up their rag currency. It is fearful, however, that large numbers of the "chivalry" would play the trick of Ananias and Saphira recorded in the New Testament, undeterred by the fate of those two swindlers.

☞ A new machine is said to be in course of construction for the removal of the rebel obstructions in Charleston harbor. While this is preparing, perhaps it would be well for the besiegers to try the effect of some of the patent medicines of the day, all of which are warranted by numerous reliable testimonials to be infallible in the removal of obstructions.

☞ The wise men of the London Times still continues to prophecy our speedy destruction. They see great signs of it in the President's Message and Proclamation of Amnesty, and consider Grant's victory at Chattanooga almost the last straw on the load which is to break our back. Oh, dear!

☞ The ladies of the Lafayette St. M. E. Church, Salem, have announced that the net proceeds of their late fair to be $700,00

GRAND NATIONAL CONCERT.

The concert of Mr. Watts' Juvenile Class at the Peabody Institute last Wednesday evening, was highly commendable to both scholars and teacher, the pieces being finely rendered and eliciting applauses from the large audience. It was really a pleasing as well as a pretty sight to see so many little ones, with their countenances lit up with smiles, standing before the assembled spectators and singing with a zeal that would do credit to old experienced vocalists.

Miss Evelith of the Zouaves seemed to be the "bright, particular star" of the evening, and her appearance, whether among the "Violets," or in the "Zouave's Camp," was always enthusiastically received. A comic farce, entitled, "The Flower of the Rebel Army," was presented for the first time, and the manner in which it was received will fully justify Mr. Watts in repeating it. The laughable farce, "The Raw Recruits," which was the grand wind-up of the evening, met with the same kind of reception.

As the programme was quite lengthy it will be impossible for us to go into a full detail of all the pieces sung and who sung them; but in writing this account in would be an act of injustice to pass by those little misses who stood up "solitary and alone" before so many, without faltering; and in this connection we will mention Miss Nelson, who sung three pieces, and evinced superior musical talent; so with Miss Manning in "Hunter's Pride;" Miss Adams in "when this war is nearly over;" Miss Farnham, "What is Home without a Baby; Miss Merrill, "Robin Red Breast; Miss Henderson, "To the West;" and Miss Roberts (the smallest bud of all), "O when I was a maiden."

Among the other pieces, by class and chorus, we would make mention of a piece called "John Not," which was not bad; and "Johnny Schmoker," which brought out the good disciplanarian qualities of the teacher. The three Teel sisters looked and sung very prettily together; and there were some good tenor singers from Lynn. The whole affair ended by a grand National Oratorio by the Essex County Zouaves, under the leadership of their gallant captain, Miss Evelith; and thus ended one of the best entertainments we have attended for a long time.

We are happy to learn that Mr. Watts has a much larger class this term, and if we had children large enough we should certainly send them there.

Large Hog.—The provision store of Fairfield & Rayner is at present a great "curiosity shop." They have there the most beautiful specimen of swine's flesh that we ever set eyes on. This fine looking hog weighs when dressed 717 pounds, measuring from tip to tail, nearly seven feet. He is in good proportion and his fat well distributed. This fine fellow was only 18 months old when he came to the knife. It is not often that we can look upon such a handsome specimen of full grown pork, and it is well worth a while to visit him before he is eat up. He was raised by Mr. Joseph Towne of Danvers.

They have another curiosity, in the shape of a mammoth side of beef weighing rising 700 pounds! This is part of the prize ox which drew the firist premium at the late Agricultural Fair at Andover. He was raised by Charles P. Preston, Esq., of Danvers, and gives good evidence of his bringing up. He must have weighed on the hoof, over 2000 pounds. He makes splendid looking beef and every one who sees it, is anxious for a steak or a roaster, Schools.—We learn that Miss Lydia M. Phillips has been appointed teacher in the Primary School in the Rockville District, on Lynnfield street, to fill the vacancy occasioned by the resignation of Miss Hannah E. Gove.

Miss J. S. Tufts, late primary teacher in the Bowditch School, has been promoted to the Intermediate School, and Miss Lord, late assistant in the Grammar School, takes the Primary. Miss Rosa Towne leaves the Intermediate on account of ill health.

Promotion.—We are gratified to learn that our young townsman, Dr. Geo. S. Osborne, late Assistant Surgeon in the First Cavalry, has been appointed full Surgeon of the Fifth. Dr. O. has served under Gen. Averill, and seen much service during the daring raids of that officer.

☞ The Mendelssohn Quintette Club Concert at Mechanic Hall, last Monday evening, was rather thinly attended. We were sorry to see this, for a finer band of musicians are not to be found. The hall was very cold—so much so that a number of the audience were obliged to leave at the intermission.

☞ The deeds of that unregenerate Cromwell, Gen. Butler—some time ago outlawed by Jeff. Davis—will probably enliven the pages of romance some two hundred years hence with as great a charm as those of his brother outlaw of the olden time, Robin Hood.

OUR OWN SOLDIERS.

We trust the suggestion contained in the following communication will not go unheeded. There is a company of our own, the first which went out from us, and one which has one a high reputation wherever it has been stationed, doing honor to their town as well as good service to their country, and why should it not be especially remembered? We hope our patriotic ladies will look to this, and while the General Sanitary Treasury is full to overflowing, let them send out special gifts to our own men, to satisfy them that they are not forgotten at home:—

Mr. Editor,—Have the good and charitably disposed people of South Danvers forgotten that their is a company in the 17th Regiment, hailing from this iown? Nevertheless, such is the fact. These men are but human, and will have cold feet, cold hands, and are cold generally, I should suppose, such weather as we are experiencing—and, I see that it has been almost as severe in the latitude of North Carolina. These men are our real patriots. They enlisted when the country called loud for patriots, and saw the emergency through the clear glass of a nation's want, and before the "green tinge" was given to patriotssm. They are our bone and sinew men, and do not eminate from our mahogany and Brussels boudoirs, but are men of the common walks of life who sacrificed their all to go to war.

Now, let some of our benevolent women lend their time, and collect of the charitable such sums as can be, and let us send these men something feasible in the shape ot socks, mittens, under shirts and drawers—and if they are a month behind New Year, they will be just as acceptable.

ANOTHER WAR MEETING.

Our citizens assembled again for a War Meeting at the Institute, last Monday evening. The Salem Brass Band enlivened the assembly with music, previous to the arrival of the speakers, and at intervals during the speaking. Hon. A. A. Abbott presided, and congratulating our citizens on their attendance in so large numbers, proceeded to introduce Judge Russell, of Boston, who was warmly received, and frequently interrupted in the course of his remarks by shouts of applause. After a brief introduction, he spoke of the duty of a loyal citizen at this crisis; of the injustice of party divisions, and that we should all be of one mind in this cause. In the war of 1812, many thought it unnecessary and might have been better managed, but it was our flag that was attacked, and they must forget all divisions in loyalty to the common country attacked by England. And then England felt the roar of cannon across the waters. We have come, he said, to fill our quota, and further that it should be filled by volunteers, in order to escape the horrors of a draft. We ask them to take the bounty, not as the price of their life, and those men who are unable to go willingly give something to make it easier for them to go. We want volunteers on account of its effect upon the Southern heart. They would never have engaged in this war, had they known the unanimity of the North. Jeff. Davis himself said: "I will hold in the hollow of my hand all the blood that will be shed in this war." Let Massachusetts and all other States make a New Year's present of their quotas to the army, and the hearts of not only the suffering captives in Richmond, but many other loyal men, black as well as white, all over the South, would be encouraged, as they heard the tramp of 300,000 more marching to their deliverance. We want volunteers for its effect upon the heart of Europe. In the beginning of the war we were in doubt about the intervention of England, but now European nations have deserted the South, and they are without a friend. What has caused this change? The noble stand of the working men of England. They have gathered together in London and other cities, by thousands, and have said to us, "Go on; we are with you," and to President Lincoln, "God speed the right." By the light of Gettysburg, Port Hudson and Vicksburg, England has read the Ten Commandments. Show her 300,000 more and she will read the Sermon on the Mount. It was the thought of the vast stake for which we play, that caused our unanimity at the first of the rebellion. He alluded to the patriotism of the Volunteer Militia, in their response to the call of the President. The old Puritan blood that was up will prove what we can do on the battle field; and not only Puritans, but exiles of other nations have sent their best treasures to swell the strength of the army; and Ireland has given us the names of Mulligan, Shields, Corcoran, and our Massachusetts Col. Cass. To fail in this is to hold back the reserve that is to win the battle. The prosperity of this part of the country would depart, and we should see our land "rent with civil feuds, and drenched with fraternal blood." We are enjoying prosperity such as was never before known in civil war. And shall we make return for this by folding our arms, or shall we sacrifice all, our life it may be, to the cause of those at home. He would leave it to the wives and mothers of our brave soldiers, to say whether we should give up now. We must succeed, for God never let anything so precious as patriot blood, be lost. Thousands of brave soldiers from their graves will go with us, and Warren and Prescott will marshall us to victory. We must not be vexed at delay or defeat. The battle of Bunker Hill, the first battle of any importance during the Revolution, was not a victory to the American arms; but Washington, when he heard of it, and heard how bravely the patriots had stood under British fire, exclaimed, "Thank God, the liberties of America are safe!" The speaker referred to some of the many noble deeds of heroism which the war has brought to light—among others of the noble pilot of the Escort, at the time of the siege of Washington, N. C., by the rebels, who, when shot through the brain, still stood by the helm as he guided the boat through the narrow and intricate channel, and lived for twelve minutes upon loyalty alone! We cannot despair because our cause is just—it is the cause of freedom and of man. We have made an alliance with the King of kings, and He will give us success; and when we have come out of this contest, and our music shall be the grand anthem throughout the world, unto thee, O God of our Fathers, shall be all the praise!

Rev. Mr. Thayer, of Salem, late Chaplain of the 40th Regiment, was the next speaker. He said we are here in tranquility; we are without fear of molestation, because there stands between us and the rebellion a living wall, who are pressing forward and crushing it more and more. And the appeal comes to us from them for help, in the dictates of humanity towards the South. Who doubts that the South will derive benefit from the direction of the North, and become more prosperous than ever before? Their voice calls to us, whose triumph would be their ruin. He spoke of the desolation of women and children in the South, bereft of husbands and sons, and who are awaiting the tiampling legions of the Union. They appeal to us, and the slave, to whom only five minutes liberty is enough to cause them to take the musket and fight the liberties of others. And the appeal comes to us from the prisoners at Richmond, and the soldiers now in the field. But the time is coming when this cause shall triumph, and now opportunity is given to take a share in the honor of those who have enlisted in the cause. Now, even at the eleventh hour, you can be pointed out and honored, and, your name will be handed down as a rich legacy to your children.

Mr. Jacob Perley, of this town, was next introduced. He spoke in his usual characteristic style, and kept the audience in continual merriment. He reminded them of the motives which are offered to men to enlist; first, the pay which is now offered, being more than they could earn at home. But if it is worth this to go for a mark to be shot at, it is worth more than this for the privilege of shooting rebels. The speaker said he would give five dollars for every shot at a rebel, and ten for a shot at a rebel officer. Those who are heads of families need not fear but that their families will be taken care of. Another motive is the exigency of the case. If we succumb, one of the terms of the rebels will be that we shall pay all their debt. A muzzle will be placed upon our press, and a padlock upon our lips, and a man would not be allowed to look at a rainbow without asking consent of a slaveholder, or whistle Yankee-Doodle without going down cellar and putting his head in a barrel. Jeff. Davis thought that in six months the war would end. He spoke of the privations of the South. Every thing has converged to the destruction of the Confederacy. How much have they gained in all their victories but the men they lost. Gen. Grant has given Bragg such a blow in the middle of his bread-basket that has knocked him into the middle of next year. Another motive is the love of country for the protection she affords him, on account of her moral worth and free institutions. The speaker spoke of the glorious results that will accrue to us if the rebellion should succumb, and the increase of its commercial enterprise. He alluded to the righteousness of the war, and considered enlisting as a duty we owe to our country and to God. He approved of any method of war, and justified Gen. Gilmore's throwing Greek fire into Charleston in the words of Parson Brownlow of the Knoxville Whig, "Greek fire for the masses; hell fire for the leaders." He was willing that Gen. Gilmore should beat Beauregard's brains out with a Bible, if in no other way, and would justify it on the plea of "preaching Gospel to the heathen." He closed with an allusion to the patriotism of South Danvers, and thought they would not be wanting in this crisis.

Mr. Abbott, in closing the meeting, reminded the citizens that, although the draft might be postponed, as far as any one knew, the time for receiving the extra bounty would expire by Tuesday night, after which the meeting dispersed.

Musical.—William Hayward, the balladist, in company with Ossian Dodge, sail for California on the 23d inst. Our California neighbors will be delighted to see them, still more to hear them. In ballads of a pathetic character, Mr. Hayward is without a rival in the world.—Success attend him.

LETTER FROM WASHINGTON.

Washington, Jan. 1, 1864.

"All is quiet along the Potomac."—The army has probably gone into winter quarters, and no movement of any importance will be made in that direction. Stuart, with his cavalry, has been at his old tricks again, although if his last raid did not amount to much it was no fault of his, but good luck for us. The train of cars which was due at the point where he was waiting to gobble it up, was fortunately delayed over an hour and a half, and so he returned without accomplishing what he set out to.

Butler does not seem to have forgotten his old way of treating rebels, by being on the shelf so many months. It is really refreshing to read the reports which come from his department. He is now separating the chaff from the wheat by administering the oath which the President recommends in his message to all that wish to live and enjoy the blessings of a free government. Those that refuse are sent south to Dixie. Would there was a Butler here, in this city, where, of all places, the loyalty of any one ought not to be held in question for a moment, and rid this city of disloyalty, both in high and low places. I am sorry to say it, the city is full of persons who are ready to toss their hats on every intimation of a defeat, and many of them hold offices too.

Col. Green's Freedman's Village across the river on the Arlington estate is said to be a great success. He has laid out quite a village, and built neat comfortable quarters for Sambo and his family; also a church and school house, and has a corps of teachers to learn them trades. The women are taught the use of the sewing machine, and he purchases cloth at wholesale, while they make up the clothing for themselves and family. He also furnishes laborers for those that are in need of them, and the demand is said to be greater than he is able to supply. A small tax is levied on the monthly salary of all those that are found employment to help to defray the expenses of his scheme. The school is attended daily by a large number of scholars, who are said to be very easy to teach. Each family is allowed a piece of ground to cultivate, and all vegetables which they raise will find ready sale in the Washington market and have a very favorable influence on the same, by keeping the prices somewhere in reason, beside making the Freedmen village self supporting.

The funeral of Gen. Buford last Sunday, was the largest and most impressive military funeral I ever witnessed. Services were held at Dr. Gurley's Presbyterian church, and after the services were over the procession moved. On the right of the line was a regiment of the war-worn veteran invalids, followed by six pieces of Artillery, then came the hearse draped with flags and mourning, accompanied with six Major Generals—Sickles, Doubleday, Casey, Augur, Heintzleman and Stoneman—who acted as pall bearers; immediately following the hearse was the general's horse led by two orderlies; after which was a regiment of Cavalry. The day was perfection and Pennsylvania Avenue was kept clear of all vehicles by a patrol of Cavalry. Flags on both sides were flying at half mast, and the slow step and solemn music of the band, made the avenue look like mourning, indeed.

A New Year's Gift.

Our population has again been put under obligations to Mr. Peabody by a munificent donation of books, numbering 2144 volumes. These were received from London and discharged from the steamer on New Year's Day. One third of these volumes are intended for the Branch Library in Danvers, an equitable division being provided for in the letter of bestowment by Mr. Peabody.

This collection is miscellaneous in its character, being a part of a private library selected by H. G. Somerby, Esq., whose good taste in literature as well as art, may be safely relied on. This new proof of Mr. Peabody's interest in his native town, is not only gratifying for its increased means of usefulness, but as a graceful intimation that his fellow townsmen still retain a warm place in his regards.

Municipal Election in Salem.

On Monday last Mayor Wheatland was re-elected Mayor of Salem by a small majority of 45 over Mr. Gillis, the Republican candidate, and he owes his election to Republican votes. The Republicans have both branches of the city council. Mr. Wheatland has proved himself an excellent chief magistrate of the city over which he has presided faithfully, and with much of grace and dignity. There was no personal objection to him, and he would probably have had almost unanimous support if he had not also had the fatal support of all the copperhead interest in Salem,—an interest in which, it is believed, he has no sympathy.

Salem Directory for 1864.—This valuable work for business men has been issued by Whipple & Smith, Salem. It is a thick book of 364 pages, and contains much useful matter of a statistical character.

THE MONSTER ORGAN.

[The Washington Star contains the following amusing account of the great organ, over—or rather under—which our Boston friends have been glorifying of late:—]

Boston has been greatly excited lately over the inauguration at the Music Hall, in that city, of the largest organ in the world, built expressly for "the hub" by Welcher, of Wurtemburg.

The pressure of war news has prevented us heretofore from noticing the Organ of organs in appropriate terms, but we now propose to give the readers of the Star some ideas of the powers of the "Great Instrument." We make up our account from the Boston papers and magazines, taking the precaution, of course, to prune down their partial and doubtless high-colored statements to the bounds of credibility.

This monster organ, then, is equal in power to a choir of six thousand throats. Its longest windpipes are 235 feet in length (requiring the erection of a tower for their special accommodation,) and a full sized man can crawl readily through its finest tubes. Eight hundred and ninety-five stops produce the various changes and combinations of which its immense orchestra is capable. Like all instruments of its class, it contains several distinct systems of pipes, commonly spoken of as separate organs, capable of being played alone or in connection with each other. Four manuals or hand keyboards, and two pedals or foot keyboards, command these several systems—the solo organ, the choir organ, the swell organ, and the great organ, and the piano and and forte pedal organ.

Dr. Holmes (O. W.) says it was at first proposed to move the sixty-five pairs of bellows, designed to fill the monster instrument, by water-power derived from the Cochituate reservoirs, but it has been found more convenient to substitute two nine-horse power self-regulating Ericsson engines as motive power. Dr. Holmes states that these engines keep an even stroke and work admirably. He adds that no discription will do justice to this stupendous instrument.

It requires six able-bodied organists to manipulate this immense musical machine, and those engaged at the inaugurations at the Boston Music Hall, were J. K. Paine, organist of West Church, Boston; Eugene Thayer, of Worcester; B. J. Lang, of the Old South Church; Dr. Tuckerman, of St. Paul's Church; J. H. Wilcox, of the Church of the Immaculate Conception; and G. W. Morgan, of Grace Church, New York. They were selected with reference to avoirdupois as well as musical qualifications, their weight ranging as follows:

Paine, 180 pounds; Thayer, 220 do.; Lang, 175 do.; Tuckerman, 213 do.; Wilcox, 192 do.; Morgan, 245 do. Total, 1, 225.

When in the grand crescendo passages, these six organists rose simultaneously from their seats, and receding a couple of paces, rushed forward in line, throwing their collective weight of over twelve hundred pounds upon the pedals, the musical explosion—for by no other name can it be designated—was terribly grand.

Through inadvertence, the roof trap-doors of the Music Hall had not been raised, and the first effect of this great detonation of sound was to lift the heavy tin roof from the wall-sockets some fifteen feet into the air, holding it suspended there until the immense volume of sound had forced a passage beneath it.

It is proposed to avert similar accidents by placing an immense sound-escape chimney over the Musical Hall, after the style of the draft chimney to a furnace, but Mr. Holmes who has given much attention to acoustics, suggests—perhaps not altogether seriously—that the condensed sound thus vented may fall upon the city in solid chunks, doing great damage.

Outside the building the effects were quite as remarkable. It was noticed that the spires of the different churches in the city vibrated over an arc of several degrees, the weather-vanes upon them dipping and oscillating in the most singular manner, from the same cause. The walls of houses throughout the city were sensibly shaken, furniture displaced, etc., causing many timid persons to rush to the street, thinking it an earthquake.

In the towns immediately adjoining Boston, the concussion also was supposed to be an earthquake. At Newburyport it was thought that the sound indicated a heavy naval engagement off Boston harbor. At Salem a jarring concussion and report was experienced resembling in sound a heavy burden train passing over a trestle-work bridge. At Jamaica Plains it was thought to proceed from a thunder-storm in the direction of Boston, and, curiously enough, the barometer fell several degrees at that point; and the same fact was noticed at Natick, Lynn, and as far distant as Taunton.

The water receded from Boston harbor in a wave of considerable magnitude, and in its retrograde and return, swamped, stranded, and keeled over several vessels, doing no little damage to the commercial interest.

Gold fish in globes, and fish of all kinds in aquariums, were instantly killed; and what for a time, was unexplainable was the fact that they sank immediately, until it was ascertained by Dr. Holmes that their bladders had been burst by the concussion, when, of course, being minus their floating-apparatus, they went down like lead. Dr. Holmes states also the remarkable fact that numerous dead bodies of drowned persons were brought to the surface in the harbor and in Charles River by the same concussion. A singular effect was produced by the pulsation of sound from the crescendo detonation passing along the telegraph lines from Boston in various directions, and which travelled a distance of from one hundred and fifty to two hundred miles over some wires, or until considerable bodies of running water were encountered, over which, from some unexplained cause in acoustics, the eolian tone—which is described as a wild, uncanny wail—would in no instance pass. Dr. Holmes humorously notes that the same fact is recorded of witches—i. e., that they cannot pass over streams of running water! Another curious feature of this phenomenon was the fact that the musical tone swelled and contracted in regular crescendos and diminuendos at equal intervals along the wires. Thus at Worcester, which is forty-five miles from Boston, the sound was barely perceptible, while at Springfield, just double the distance, the tone approached to a shriek in volume.

Dr. Holmes thus explains this interesting fact. It is well known among musicians that the vibrations upon the string of a violin, harp, or any stringed instrument, do not take the shape of a single pulsation with its maximum expansion at the centre of the string; but are divided along the string, in numerous sm pulsations or crescendos crossing each ot regular diminuendo intervals, at which points the string is nearly or quite motio The knowledge of this curious law of vib really affords a solution, says Dr. Holm the mystery of the telegraphic crescendo noticed.

Dr. Holmes, who, in company with M Lincoln, a delegation of the Boston City C ils, and a body of leading savans of the va persuasion, made an interesting pede tour through some eight or ten miles main pipe of the monster organ before set up, has written a graphic description trip, and of the organ as a whole. The found no difficulty in walking quite through at least six miles of the major and got through the smaller Eolian tubes comfortably on their hands and knees. description of the great instrument h peared in book form under the apropos "Soundings from the [illegible]antic."

NEW YEAR'S [illegible]ETING.

In the town once famed for witches,
Solemn days of great delusion—
Witches, ugly old and wrinkled,
Witches crying out, accusing
In this city that we spake of Grown up now to great dimensions,
On the banks of the North River,
On the border of the harbor,
Where the codfish and the cunners.
Where the pollock and the flounders
Have their sport beneath the waters—
In this city now peaceful,
On the borders of the river
Is a place if you will listen
You will hear what we shall tell you.

In the street which is the longest,
In the narrow street called Essex,
Stands a block of ancient buildings,
Buildings long to trade familiar,
Here in this familiar building
Is a mart for goods and trafic
Is a place where all the ladies
Come to see the choicest Trimmings,
Come to buy the finest worsteds,
Feast their eyes on brilliant Ribbons,
Flowers, Embroideries, Insertings,
Laces, Edgings, Veils and Collars,
Sontags, Nubias, Hoods and Gaiters
Gloves and Hosiery, Combs and Perfun
Fancy Goods and Gifts for Christmas,
New Year's Gifts and Gifts to lovers,
Gifts to sisters, Gifts to brothers,
Gifts to children, Gifts to mothers,
Gifts to all the loved and loving.

Here they come like rush of waters,
Up and down the street called Essex,
Like a streamlet like a river,
Side by side or all together,
Straight they onward go in numbers
Firm in faith pursuing bargains,
On they go and never doubting
Till they find the great Emporium,
Find the store of J. P. Peabody's.

See them come from Northern Salem,
See them come from old Nauvou;
Come they too from Southern Salem,
Come from all about the common,
Come in throngs the up-in-towners,
Come they too from other townships,
Come in cars by steam or horses,
Come in buggies, come in busses,
What a crumbling, what a surging!
What a mighty rush of ladies
Coming through the narrow Essex,
Where are found the choicest bargains
At the mart of J. P. Peabody's—

Patrons, all, we kindly thank you,
Thank you for your pleasant visits
Kindly thank you for your calling,
Calling often and your buying;
Feeling strongly you'll believe me
When we say we thank sincerely,
Many years we trust are waiting,
Happy years of thrift and blessing
For your forms and minds adorning.

Come again we now entreat you
Here in Salem calm and queenly
To the block of ancient buildings
On the street that's long and narrow,
Street of shops and trade and cheapness
Come and leave your books and needles,
Leave your puddings, leave your batter,
Leave your dinner, leave your supper,
Leave the the corn broom and the duster
Leave the kitchen and the parlor,
Leave your husbands and your brothers;
Take your wallets, take your purses,
Take your bank bills and your greenback
Take your mother and your sisters,
Robe yourselves to go a shoping
At Peabody's, Two Hundred Twenty.

We will give the best of bargains,
We'll display the cheapest linens,
We will show the nicest collars,
We will show you, we will tell you
Through the press each fresh arrival,
Goods that come from o'er the water,
Goods from Gotham, goods from Boston,
Strong in fabric, good in cheapness—
In the papers we will tell you,
Tell of goods in our collection.
Read the list with care and ponder.
Read the open lines with candor,
Hasten then and do your shoping,
At the Store Two Hundred Twenty.

Thanks again and choicest blessings
Happy years of gay adorning,
Peace and joy and high aspiring,
Pleasures rich and no alloying,
These and all that's worth desiring
May you have in rich bestowing,—
Frequent calling, often buying,
Where you'll find the best displaying—
At Peabody's Two Hundred Twenty.

THE SANITARY COMMISSION.

Chaplain Quint, in a letter to the Congregationalist, speaks in the highest tearms of our Sanitary Commission; and knowing that everything said or written about this benevolent and patriotic enterprise is always interesting to our readers, we subjoin a few extracts:

The more I see and hear of this institution, I am amazed at its wonderful efficiency. I regard it as chief, not as exclusive. But chief it is. I lately saw and heard more of its doings. Perhaps your readers do not know its plan beyond Washington, and you will allow me to outline it as it is in our army—merely for furnishing supplies.

The central agency is, of course, at Washington. Here supplies are accumulated; and large deposits are necessary for any emergency. In the army, each corps is supplied with a Relief Agent, who lives in the corps. He moves with it. He has a four-horse wagon, supplied with sanitary stores,—articles additional to those furnished by Government.—These wagons are generally with the ambulance train, and the Relief Agent has discretionary power to dispose of his articles. He issues them to Field Hospitals on requisitions from the medical officers there. New supplies are constantly sent, so as to have plenty on hand.

That this system ensures success there can be no doubt. I think I wrote you that at Chancellorsville the hospitals were well supplied with even luxuries, by the Commission, while the battle was still in progress. I am now told, on most reliable authority (that of the surgeons,) that on the Thursday and Friday, the great days of the Gettysburg battles, the Sanitary Commission were distributing their stores under fire. In two corps (one is ours) that this was done, clear evidence also exists in the receipts given by the surgeons at the battle-ground.

One great reason why the Sanitary Commission works so well is, that it works in and by means of the regular authorities. It does not set itself up as independent of the medical officers. It distributes through the surgeons.—The wisdom of this plan is evident at a glance, The surgeons know what is needed, and how to use it. An indiscriminate administering of relief by independent helps, is subversive of all order. A case just in point happened—no matter where, but I know. A soldier had turned the critical point of disease, and was doing well. A benevolent individual, distributing supplies out of a basket, gave this soldier some pickles—and I know not what else—which he ate. The surgeon discovered it, and informed the philanthropist that the charity had probably ensured the death of the patient. In fact, it did—within forty-eight hours.

The independent system showed itself in hospital at Gettysburg. In one corps hospital (I have the best authority for this) some five or six men were discovered drunk. Inquiry was made, and it was found that certain individuals who had come as volunteer laborers, or what that excellent book Hospital Transports calls "an indiscriminate holiday scramble of general philanthropy," (I quote from memory,) had been giving away liquor at random to whomsoever wanted it, with the result here mentioned.

The Sanitary Commission has shown true wisdom, also, in its plan of employing regular and permanent agents. Sudden spasms of work do little. The Commission knows that. It takes time for men to learn their business.—When taught, one man is worth twenty temporary volunteers.

The Sanitary Commission works through the proper channels. There is, therefore, no outside work which in the matter of supplies can rival it, in cheapness, directness, or usefulness. It does a work which fathers and mothers and wives at home ought to be thankful for. It ministers to the helpless. It succors where suffering and death would often be the result of absence of succor.

☞ At the last meeting of the National Loyal Union League, in this place, there was a very interesting discussion upon the following question: "Ought the Southern rebel States to be re-admitted into the Union, without a condition precedent, that slavery should be abolished in said States."

The next question for discussion is this: "Is the course which the English Government has maintained towards this country during the rebellion satisfiable."

☞ At a meeting of the retail liquor dealers of New York, held on Friday night, a resolution was adopted affixing the following prices: Brandy 10 to 16 cents per glass; gin and rum 10 cents; inferior quality from 6 to 8 cents; soda, ale and porter (bottled) 5 cents; ale 10 to 12 cents per quart.

☞ Foyatter, the French sculptor, who made the equestrian statue of Joan of Arc at Orleans and the Spartacus in the garden of the Tuileries is dead. He was esteemed and patronized by Louis Phillippe. He was found dead in his studio, grasping his chisel. He was buried with it in his hand.

☞ Jeff. Davis' plantation has been turned into a contraband camp. Perhaps in a few years Jeff. will be applying for the overseership of contrabands.

☞ The Indians in Arkansas have all abandoned the rebel cause. They show more wisdom than the white men who cling to its declining fortunes.

☞ Of 800 horses purchased in New York for the army and sent to Fortress Monroe a few days ago, 700 were condemned as worthless.—That is the way Uncle Samuel's money goes.

☞ Jenny Lind has lost her voice. At a late concert in England, it was painfully apparent that the notes of the "nightingale" had failed. This is a loss to the world.

☞ It is rumored that Morgan is to make another rebel raid North. He better go to Ohio again.

Morocco Finishers—Attention!

There will be an adjourned meeting of the Morocco finishers of South Danvers, next Thursday evening, January 7th, at the room formerly occupied by Joseph Morrison on Central street.

☞ A punctual attendance is requested.

☞ Browning & Long's "Inauguration of the New Year" will be found full of interest for the Ladies.

Manchester Daily Mirror.—The editor of this lively paper has consolidated the Mirror with the American, of that city. The Mirror has always been a live loyal paper, and brother Clark, for his enterprise and energy, well deserves the success attending it.

☞ The Legislature of Alabama has voted that the beautiful carpets that cover the floors of the Senate chamber, hall of Representatives, and all offices and committee rooms in the elegantly furnished Capitol at Montgomery, be cut up and given to the soldiers of the army for blankets.

☞ The greatest waterfall in the world has been discovered in Oregon. The entire volume of Snake river pours over a precipice, one hundred and ninety-eight feet high—thirty-eight feet higher than Niagara. Snake river is full as large as the Niagara, and the cascade is in one solid sheet, or body.

☞ Dr. H. Halsted, of Round Hill Water Cure, Northampton, Mass., has so far perfected his "Motorpathic system" of treatment, that many cases of incipient prolapsus uteri, kindred weaknesses and ulcerations can be cured by one consultation and the following of his instructions. The plan and remedies for self or home treatment are potent and restorative. They dispel pain and weakness in the back, strengthen the nerves, tone the stomach, and obviate indigestion and constipation.

Confirmed cases and bed-ridden patients can be so much relieved from one visit as to give them faith of ultimate recovery at his institution. Water treatment may be used to tone the system or it may not; but supporters, caustic, or harsh treatment, never. The organ, once only, motorpathicly adjusted, no ordinary exertion will displace it; and after a short treatment its healthy condition becomes fixed and permanent.

This method is so simple and reliable that it is working a revolution in the treatment of woman's diseases. Physicians are cordially invited to test its value. Their attention is also called to his treatment for neuralgic and spinal difficulties by which the vital forces are renewed, strength and elasticity restored, and broken down constitutions renovated. The names of thousands of invalids who have been cured at his institution are on record with a history of their sufferings. Further information will be given if desired.

MME. DEMOREST'S MIRROR OF FASHIONS,

PUBLISHED QUARTERLY, AT 473 BROADWAY, N.Y.

The special object and aim in the publication of this magazine is to present Judicious, Reliable, and Practical Information in all matters pertaining to ladies' and children's dress.

Information of the greatest possible importance to Milliners, Dress-makers, and every lady who wish to know the prevailing modes in New York and Paris.

To all enterprising ladies, and industrious mothers, we shall endeavor to furnish many useful and practical suggestions in relation to the proper combination of colors, choosing materials, including cutting and making dresses, and children's clothes, which of necessity must occupy a much larger portion of a woman's time, when no reliable authority is at hand to be consulted—suggestions which cannot fail to prove a source of much gratification, economy, personal refinement, and home comfort.

Do not fail to bear in mind that we furnish, in value, during the year, more than $8 in full-size patterns alone; while in plates, engravings, reliable information on fashions, more than can be secured in any or all the other fashion magazines put together, and yet the yearly subscriptions being only $1, with the extra fifty cents worth of full-size patterns sent as a premium, makes the yearly subscription to cost really only fifty cents, independent of the Carte de Visite. Do not fail to subscribe for the Mirror, if you wish to secure it promptly as it is sent in advance to subscribers.

Now is the time to buy your Crockery.—First quality of White Granite Ware, marked down and selling at 20 per cent less than cost, by C. T. Southwick, House of Equity, No. 1 Lowell Street.

☞ SHAKE AND BURN! Shake and Burn!! Shake and Burn!!!

This is the life of agony endured by the sufferer from Fever and Ague. He wanders like an uncertain shadow, never knowing what moment he may be prostrated, and therefore disinclined to give any serious attention to business. This is the condition of thousands in town and country. It is no exaggeration to say that Fever and Ague kills more people than any twenty other diseases in America. For a sure and speedy cure of this terrible affliction, we take great pleasure in recommending HOSTETTER'S STOMACH BITTERS, which have already achieved a wide reputation for rapid and powerful effects in renovating the system prostrated by this disease.

For sale by Druggists and dealers generally, everywhere. 1 mo dec 9th.

Interesting.

INAUGURATION
— OF THE —
NEW YEAR.

THE success attending their determination of selling

"First Class Goods at the Lowest Prices," having, during the past year, been so great, Messrs. BROWNING & LONG have decided to offer for the opening of the New Year very decided inducements.

Appreciating the increase of patronage, they now offer a chance to their customers to secure anything from their very extensive Stock at prices

MUCH BELOW THE MARKET VALUE.

During the next TEN DAYS, they will make an allowance of 10 PER CENT.

ON ALL PURCHASES,

being determined to open the Spring Season with a

FRESH STOCK,

they will now close out desirable Goods at

VERY LOW PRICES.

Appreciating the kindness and liberality bestowed upon them, the steadily increasing patronage, they tender to the Ladies of Salem and vicinity their thanks.

Endeavoring by Special Inducements and fixed determination to please, they hope to meet a continuance of past favors.

Respectfully,

BROWNING & LONG.

BELL'S SPECIFIC PILLS.—WARRANTED IN ALL CASES.—Can be relied on! Never fail to cure! Do not nauseate! Are speedy in action! No change of diet required! Do not interfere with business pursuits! Can be used without detection! Upward of 200 cures the past month—some of them very severe cases. Over one hundred physicians have used them in their practice, and all speak well of their efficacy, and approve of their composition, which is entirely vegetable and harmless on the system. Hundreds of certificates can be shown.

BELL'S SPECIFIC PILLS are the original and only genuine Specific Pill. They are adapted for male and female, old or young, and the only reliable remedy for effecting a permanent and speedy cure in all cases of Spermatorrhea, or Seminal Weakness, with all its train of evils, such as Urethral and Vaginal Discharges, Gleet, the Whites, Nightly or Involuntary Emissions, Incontinence, Genital Debility and Irritability, Impotence, Weakness or Loss of Power, Nervous Debility, &c., &c., all of which arise principally from Sexual Excesses or Self-Abuse, or some constitutional derangement, and incapacitates the sufferer from fulfilling the duties of married life. In all sexual diseases, as Gonorrhea, Gleet, and Strictures, and in Diseases of the Bladder and Kidneys, they act as a charm! Relief is experienced by taking a single box.

Sold by all the principal druggists. Price $1.

They will be sent by mail, securely sealed, and confidentially, on receipt of the money, by

J BRYAN, M. D,
No. 76 Cedar street, New York,

Consulting Physician for the treatment of Seminal, Urinary, Sexual, and Nervous Diseases, who will send, free to all, the following valuable work, in sealed envelope:

THE FIFTIETH THOUSAND.—DR. BELL'S TREATISE on Self-Abuse, Premature Decay, Impotence and Loss of Power, Sexual Diseases, Seminal Weakness, Nightly Emissions, Genital Debility, &c., &c., a pamphlet of 64 pages, containing important advice to the afflicted, and which should be read by every sufferer, as the means of cure in the severest stages is plainly set forth. Two stamps required to pay postage.

December 9, 1863—1 yr.

IMPORTANT TO LADIES.—DR. HARVEY'S FEMALE PILLS have never yet failed in removing difficulties arising from obstruction, or stoppage of nature, or in restoring the system to perfect health when suffering from Spinal Affections, Prolapsus, Uteri, the Whites, or other weakness of the Uterine Organs. The Pills are perfectly harmless on the constitution, and may be taken by the most delicate female without causing distress—the same time they act like a charm by strengthening, invigorating and restoring the system to a healthy condition, and by bringing on the monthly period with regularity, no matter from what causes the obstruction may arise. They should, however, NOT be taken during the first three or four months of pregnancy, though safe at any other time, as miscarriage would be the result.

Each box contains 60 Pills. Price $1.

DR. HARVEY'S TREATISE on Diseases of Females, Pregnancy, Miscarriage, Barrenness, Sterility, Reproduction, and Abuses of Nature, and emphatically the Ladies' Private Medical Adviser, a pamphlet of 64 pages, sent free to any address. Six cents required to pay postage.

The Pills and book will be sent by mail when desired, securely sealed, and prepaid, by

J. BRYAN, M. D., General Agent,
No. 76 Cedar street, New York.

TERRIBLE DISCLOSURES—SECRETS FOR THE MILLION!—A most valuable and wonderful publication. A work of 400 pages, and 30 colored engravings. DR. HUNTER'S VADE MECUM, an original and popular treatise on Man and Woman, their Physiology, Functions, and Sexual Disorders of every kind, with Never-Failing Remedies for their speedy cure. The practice of Dr. Hunter has long been, and still is, unbounded, but at the earnest solicitation of numerous persons, he has been induced to extend his medical usefulness through the medium of his "Vade Mecum." It is a volume that should be in the hands of every family in the land, as a preventive of secret vices, or as a guide for the alleviation of one of the most awful and destructive scourges ever visited mankind. One copy, securely enveloped, will be forwarded free of postage to any part of the United States for 50 cents in post office stamps or 3 copies for $1. Address, post paid, DR. HUNTER No. 3 Division Street, New York. je 3—1y

A LECTURE on the NATURE, TREATMENT and RADICAL Cure of Spermatorrœa or Seminal Weakness, Involuntary Emissions, Sexual Debility, and Impediments to Marriage generally, Nervousness, Consumption, Epilepsy and Fits; Mental and Physical Incapacity, resulting from Self Abuse, &c.,—By ROBT. J. CULVERWELL, M. D., Author of the Green Book, &c.

The world-renowned author, in this admirable Lecture, clearly proves from his own experience that the awful consequences of Self-abuse may be effectually removed without medicine, and without dangerous surgical operations, bougies, instruments, rings, or cordials, pointing out a mode of cure at once certain and effectual, by which every sufferer, no matter what his condition may be, may cure himself cheaply, privately, and radically. This lecture will prove a boon to thousands and thousands.

HOSTETTER'S CELEBRATED STOMACH BITTERS.

A pure and powerful Tonic, corrective and alterative of wonderful efficacy in disease of the

Stomach, Liver and Bowels.

Cures Dyspepsia, Liver Complaint, Headache, Debility, Nervousness, Depression of Spirits, Constipation, Colic, Intermittent Fevers, Cramps and Spasms, and all Complaints of either Sex, arising from Bodily Weakness whether inherent in the system or produced by special causes.

Nothing that is not wholesome, genial and restorative in its nature enters into the composition of HOSTETTER'S STOMACH BITTERS. This popular preparation contains no mineral of any kind, no deadly botanical element; no fiery excitant: but it is a combination of the extracts of rare balsamic herbs and plants with the purest and mildest of all diffusive stimulants.

It is well to be forearmed against disease, and, so far as the human system can be protected by human means against maladies engendered by an unwholesome atmosphere, impure water and other external causes, HOSTETTER'S BITTERS may be relied on as a safeguard.

In districts infested with Fever and Ague, it has been found infallible as a preventive and irresistible as a remedy and thousands who resort to it under apprehension of an attack, escape the scourage; and thousands who neglect to avail themselves of its protective qualities in advance, are cured by a very brief course of this marvelous medicine. Fever and Ague patients, after being plied with quinine for months in vain, until fairly saturated with that dangerous alkaloid, are not unfrequently restored to health within a few days by the use of HOSTETTER'S BITTERS.

The weak stomach is rapidly invigorated and the appetite restored by this agreeable Tonic, and hence it works wonders in cases of DYSPEPSIA and in less confirmed forms of INDIGESTION. Acting as a gentle and painless appetient, as well as upon the liver, it also invariably relieves the CONSTIPATION superinduced by irregular action of the digestive and secretive organs.

Persons of feeble habit, liable to Nervous Attacks, Lowness of Spirits and Fits of Languor, find prompt and permanent relief from the Bitters. The testimony on this point is most conclusive, and from both sexes.

The agony of BILIOUS COLIC is immediately assuaged by a single dose of the stimulant, and by occasionally resorting to it, the return of the complaint may be prevented.

As a General Tonic, HOSTETTER'S BITTERS produce effects which must be experienced or witnessed before they can be fully appreciated. In cases of Constitutional Weakness, Premature Decay and Debility and Decrepitude arising from OLD AGE, it exercises the electric influence. In the convalescent stages of all diseases it operates as a delightful invigorant. When the powers of nature are relaxed, it operates to re-enforce and re-establish them.

Last, but not least, it is The Only Safe Stimulant, being manufactured from sound and innocuous materials, and entirely free from the acid elements present more or less in all the ordinary tonics and stomachics of the day.

No family medicine has been so universally, and, it may be truly added, deservedly popular with the intelligent portion of the community, as HOSTETTER'S BITTERS.

Prepared by HOSTETTER & SMITH, Pittsburgh, Pa.

Sold by all Druggists, Grocers and Storekeepers everywhere.

HELMBOLD'S GENUINE PREPARATIONS.

COMPOUND FLUID EXTRACT BUCHU, a Positive and Specific Remedy for diseases of the Bladder, Kidneys, Gravel, and Dropsical Swellings.

This Medicine increases the power of Digestion, and excite the Absorbents into healthy action, by which the Wtaery or Calcareous depositions, and all Unnatural Enlargements are reduced, as well as Pain and Inflammation.

HELMBOLD'S EXTRACT BUCHU.

For Weaknesses arising from Excesses, Habits of Dissipation, Early Indiscretion of Abuse, attended with the following symptoms:—

Indisposition to Exertion,	Loss of Power,
Loss of Memory,	Difficulty of Breathing,
Weak Nerves,	Trembling,
Horror of Disease,	Wakefulness,
Dimness of Vision,	Pain in the Back,
Universal Lassitude of the Muscular System,
Hot Hands,	Flushing of the Body,
Dryness of the Skin,	Eruptions on the Face,
Pallid Countenance.

These symptoms, if allowed to go on, which this medicine invariably removes, soon follows

Impotency, Fatuity, Epileptic Fits,

In one of which the patient may expire.

Who can say that they are not frequently followed by those "Direful Diseases,"

"INSANITY AND CONSUMPTION."

Many are aware of the cause of their suffering; BUT NONE WILL CONFESS THE RECORDS OF THE INSANE ASYLUMS.

And Melancholy Deaths by Consumption bear ample witness to the Truth of the assertion.

The Constitution once effected with Organic Weakness requires the aid of Medicine to Strengthen and Invigorate the system,

Which HELMBOLD'S EXTRACT BUCHU invariably does. A Trial will convince the most skeptical.

FEMALES—FEMALES—FEMALES.

In many Affections peculiar to Females the EXTRACT BUCHU is unequalled by any other remedy, as in Chlorosis or Retention, Irregularity, Painfulness, or Suppression of Customary Evacuations, Ulcerated Scirrhous state of the Uterus, Leuchorrhœa or Whites, Sterility, and for all complaints incident to the sex, whether arising from indiscretion or Habits of Dissipation, or in the

DECLINE OR CHANGE OF LIFE.

Take no more Balsam, Mercury, or unpleasant Medicines for unpleasant and dangerous diseases.

HELMBOLD'S EXTRACT BUCHU AND IMPROVED ROSE WASH CURES

SECRET DISEASES

In all their Stages,	At little Expense.
Little or no change in Diet.	No inconvenience.
And no Exposure.

It causes a frequent desire and gives strength to Urinate, thereby Removing Obsructions, Preventing and Curing Strictures of the Urethra, allaying Pain and Inflammation, so frequent in this class of diseases, and expelling all Poisonous, Diseased and wornout Matter.

Thousands upon Thousands who have been the Victims of Quacks, and who have paid heavy fees to be cured in a short time, have found they were deceived, and that the "POISON" has, by the use of "Powerful Astringents," been dried up in the system, to break out in an aggravated form, and perhaps after Marriage.

Use HELMBOLD'S EXTRACT BUCHU for all affections and diseases of the URINARY ORGANS, whether existing in MALE or FEMALE, from whatever cause originating and no matter of HOW LONG STANDING.

Diseases of these Organs requires the aid of a DIURETIC. HELMBOLD'S EXTRACT BUCHU IS THE GREAT DIURETIC, and is certain to have the desired effect in all Diseases for which it is Recommended.

Evidence of the most reliable and responsible character will accompany the medicine.

TAKE NOTICE.

THAT Dr. Ham's Dyspepsia Remedy has been before the public for the past ten years. And in that time the people who have used it will vouch for the benefit they have derived from it. The character of his article and its reputation can also be obtained from the dealers who sell it, or have sold it for any length of time, to both of those, Dr Ham refers and is willing to stand the test. And also challenges any new compound to produce the same results, let alone delicacy of flavor, of his INVIGORATING SPIRIT, which for ITS EFFECTS UPON THE BILE, A TORPED LIVER, LOW SPIRITS, or when the blood is affected as seen by SKIN DISEASES or its ACTION UPON THE KIDNEYS, in fact for any person who is run down by the wear and care of this world will find relief in this old and well tried remedy.

Astonishing.

TO Dr. Ham, who has modsstly put before the public his DYSPEPSIA REMEDY for ten years past, to look back and see the number of tremendous articles within that time, that have sprang up like a rocket, and gone down like the stick which guides it in its glorious assent. Some come out and claim to tell the public they use unknown Barks from South America, with any quantity of rum from the West Indias, &c. Dr Ham takes this opportunity to refer to the MEDICAL FACULTY here and everywhere that his article is in use, as to its qualifications, and challenges any one to produce a person, male or female, who has used it as directed, that will not speak favorable of it for DISORGANIZED STOMACH, Dyspepsia, loss of appetite, want of action of the Kidneys, as well as many other complaints that humanity are afflicted with.

To Ladies.

DR. HAM'S Dyspepsia Remedy is just the thing you require to remove the langour caused by weakness and debility; it invigorates the system, causes the blood to take new life in its varied course through the system, in fact it gives tone to the system and will relieve and remove the thousand irregularities that from various csuses you are afflicted with. For Dyspepsia it is a never failing remedy, it has stood the test of years, and we have yet to hear of its failing to give relief to the afflicted thousands who have received health and happiness by its use.

To Gentlemen.

DR. HAM knows that you do not always pay much attention to the many different articles put before you in the paper, but we would refer you to our agents who you will find are the respectable merchants and dealers, in regard to the Invigorating Spirit; some of them have sold it for years, and know well the reputation it has amongst those who have used it in assisting nature to eradicate diseases. It will renovate the system, as it acts directly on the blood, removing all obstructions to the general health, will cure Liver Complaints, Dyspepsia, Nervous Affections, Sour Stomach, Headache, Weakness, Loss of Appetite, as well as obstruction in the Kidney, Bladder or Urinary Organs. Try it. We will guarantee you will be satisfied with the result.

[From the Richmond Whig.]

The Charleston Courier makes a timely suggestion recommending the attention of our government to naturalization and cultivation of Calisaya, for preservation of the health of our soldiers. This ticle has a peculiar effect upon the liver, and guards system against disease by exposure and irregular t. It is said that the great success of the Planta- n Bitters of Dr. Drake, which, previous to our happy difficulties was found in most Southern lies, was owing to the extract of Calisaya Bark ich it contained as one of its principal ingredi- ts.—"In confirmation of this, we have heard one our most distinguished physicians remark, that enever he felt unwell from ordinary dietetic or nospheric causes, he invariably relieved himself Plantation Bitters. Now that these Bitters can- be obtained, a substitute should be prepared.— understand our government has opened negotia- ns with Dr. Drake, through a secret agent, but h what truth we do not kdow." * * * * *

Hunnewell's Great Remedies.

WHAT EVERY FAMILY SHOULD HAVE IN THE HOUSE AND WHY;

☞ They should have HUNNEWELL'S UNIVERSAL COUGH REMEDY, because it effectually cures Colds, Whooping and Common Coughs Sore Throat, Hoarseness, and is the most simple and perfect Soothing Syrup in the world. For old and young, by day and night, it may be used with the greatest freedom, and three-fourths of the deaths by Consumption stopped.

They should have HUNNEWELL'S TOLU ANODYNE, because it is a perfect remedy for Neuralgia, Nervous or Sick Headache, Tooth, and Earache, Pain in Stomach, or Bowels, Genuine Cholera Morbus, Rheumatism, Distress after Eating, Nervousness, Hysteria, and the chief of all causes of disease, and Insanity, Loss of Sleep. Its character, though active, is simple; its action in perfect conformity to nature; its end cure, or relief.

For the pains in Monthly Menstruation a perfect relief, while nature's after work is not disturbed, and one of the most important points in Medicine.

They should have HUNNEWELL'S ECLECTIC PILLS, because with seldom but a single Pill for a dose all derangements of the Stomach and Bowels are cured. They cure Indigestion, Dyspepsia, Headache, when caused by foul stomach, Loss of Appetite, Biliousness, so often and so erroneously treated with Mercurials, Jaundice. For Worms a sure cure.

They act simple, assist nature, do not make a Pill Box of the stomach, as is the most fatal error of taking so many Pills at a dose and then, what is important to every Family and every Purse, one bottle goes as far as two or three of what is ordinarily sold.

Original Poetry.

OLD AND NEW YEAR.

Dear Old Year, adieu! thy short reign is through;
We never shall see thee again;
There's many, alas! in the year that's just past,
To whom thou'st brought sorrow and pain.

Dear Old Year, farewell!—with sorrow we dwell
On thy season so quickly departed;
To many now here, thou'st brought not a tear,
While many thou'st left broken hearted.

* * * * * * * * *

We welcome thee here, thou merry New Year,
Tho' thy locks are white as the snow;
But quickly we trace, on thy sunny young face,
A welcome wherever we go.

We welcome thee here, thou happy New Year,
Thy heart is o'erflowing with mirth;
In thy short earthly reign, may thou scatter no pain
To us mortals, who dwell on this earth!

We welcome thee here, with a hearty good cheer,
In thy garments so snowy and white,
May thy heart keep for aye, as pure as to-day,
And ever be merry and light.

* * * * * * * * *

Once again, Sixty-Three, a farewell to thee,—
How quickly thy short reign is o'er!
Until we arrive at the year Sixty-Five,
We'll welcome the year Sixty-Four. ⁂

Selected.

THE SCOUT'S LAST MESSAGE.

BY LIEUT. MAX MARTINGALE, U. S. A.

Samuel Cox was one of my bravest scouts. He enlisted at Memphis, Tenn., and was about twenty-six years of age, tall and very powerful. He possessed a reckless nature, which would exhibit itself in a very short time, if he should chance to have nothing to do for several days; and in order to prevent this, I had to invent something for him to engage in.

When I said "reckless," I did not mean to insinuate that he was of that particular stamp which frequent bar-rooms, billiard rooms, etc., and which are termed reckless by the public; nor do I mean that his recklessness itself was visible when he was idle; rather that a marked air of uneasiness pervaded his whole frame; he was always on the qui vive for a mission which would incur danger; and though young and partially inexperienced, yet he was "Sauviter in modo fortiter in re." (Gentle in manner, but resolute in deeds.)

I liked him to say the least. I chose him to perform many daring deeds oftener than I did others, and of it he seemed conscious, although no look or word of pride ever escaped him. When preparing for a dangerous mission, he preserved that same nonchalant air which was his peculiar characteristic; but let him once get into an exciting affair, and his eyes will sparkle, his broad bosom heave with intensity, while either his hands or his mouth will be twitching with a nervousness which is startling.

Well one warm afternoon during the month of August last, I chose Cox to accompany me upon a spying adventure along the banks of the Yazoo river; as there were two guerrilla camps to be passed, we armed ourselves more fully than usual. Cox seemed to be in a sorrowful mood that afternoon; a depression of spirits was the cause to which I attributed it, and for some time thought no more of it. As night came on, we embarked in a small Indian canoe and proceeded up the river for several miles.—The almost impenetrable darkness shielded us from observation, should any wandering guerrillas happen to be around and thus we paddled silently along, until we reached the mouth of a small creek, five miles from our camp, and four from the rebel Colonel——'s. Here we landed and commenced to pick away cautiously forward, through the dense underbrush and low woods which lined the river bank at that point. We preceeded in this manner for nearly three miles; but when the dusky figure of the rebel sentinel warned us that we were within a mile or less of the camp, we sank to our hands and knees, in order to approach him unawares.

"I'll quietly shut off his wind, dress myself in his clothes, and when the corporal of the guard comes around, I'll slip into the camp, learn what I can, and then slip out. If you will remain here, I'll return to this precise spot." So saying, Cox left me alone, while he crawled forward towards the unsuspecting sentinel. Hardly had he gone five rods, ere he turned about and came back.

"Lieutenant," said he, his usually clear voice choked with emotion, "if I fail in this errand, will you send these to my wife and child in Memphis?" and as he spoke he drew a package from his bosom and gave it to me. "Something tells me that I will sacrifice my life in this mission; that a rebel ball shall cut short my existences in the end, and that my eyes shall behold my dear wife no more."

"Don't go, then, by all means," I replied, laying my hand upon his arm.—"Let us return to the camp; I am no man to force another to his death."

"I know it, lieutenant," returned he, starting away again. "But this may be all imagination. Were I to know, that by sacrificing my life to the knife of a savage, I would render my country any valuable service, God knows that I would do it in a minute!" and he was gone before I could reply.

Noble man! Thy words were full of generous and noble meaning; and though thy manly form is now mouldering in an early grave, thy memory shall live forever among the records of the brave in that Great Book in heaven, if not on earth!

From my position, at the foot of a small pine tree, I could not obtain a very good glimpse of the country before me. Accordingly I clambered into the branches of the tree, and by parting them before me I could obtain an unobstructed view,—that is, as well as the darkness would permit. The form of the sentinel was just discernable through the gloom; pacing back and forth upon his lonely beat. But suddenly he stopped. I stretched my ears to listen, and distinctly I heard the low words:

"Who goes there?"

Twice this was repeated; and the last time the sentinel moved forward to the spot from whence he supposed the mysterious sound proceeded. Scarcely had he done so, when a dark form sprung upon him from one side, and a glittering knife entered his heart with the rapidity of lightning. It was Cox, the scout; and arraying himself in the dead man's clothes, he pushed the dead body under some bushes, and took his post. So quickly had this change been wrought, that, had my eyes been turned during the transaction, and then turned back again, I could not have told the difference between the two sentinels!

It was now about eleven o'clock; at twelve the relief guard came, and with mingling emotions of joy and fear, I beheld Cox march back to their camp, while another person took his place. I soon lost sight of him in the deep; and then anxiously awaited his return.

I believe I have not fully stated the cause of this perilous mission as yet; but as I am now at leisure, I will do so.

A rumor,—whether to be believed or not, I did not know—was beginning to circulate in the camp, to the effect that a celebrated guerrilla Colonel, named——with a force of five hundred men, was to march through the Upper country of Mississippi, on a grand foraging expedition, and obtain enough provisions, etc., to last them through the winter. In order to do this, it would be necessary for them to come in uncomfortable proximity to our little band of one hundred sharpshooters; especially when we were unprepared for them. So our Colonel appointed me and any companion I might choose, to go up the Yazoo river to their camp, and by a dint of cautious manœuvering obtain such intelligence as I could, relative to the report, so that he might be prepared. I started at once, as the reader is aware; but before we landed, Cox made me promise that he should do the spying etc., urging as a decisive plea, that he was better acquainted with the country than I.

So far all went well; how was it to end. We shall see.

One long hour was dwindling away, but I had neither seen nor heard anything from Cox. The fear that he had been discovered and imprisoned came over me; and so strong did it become, that I left my perch, and dropped to the ground noiselessly. At the foot of the tree, I waited nearly half an hour; until chafed with a feverish impatience, I could stand it no longer, but determined to go and hunt him up. Cautiously, very cautiously, I went to the spot, crawling on my hands and knees towards the sentinel.—For a long time I did not even look up to see where I was going; my mind was filled with a thousand bitter fancies, and I cursed myself over and over again for letting Cox go alone. In this way I went forward until I thought I was pretty close to the sentinel; but when I lifted my head to see him, judge of my surprise to behold him—gone! But while I was ruminating upon this strange event, a rustling in the bushes close by startled me. In an instant it flashed upon me that he had seen me, and was playing the same game; so I crouched close down beneath a clump of elders, and awaited his coming. In a few moments he came feeling carefully along; and when he was directly opposite me, I sprang out and confronted him. We clinched; there was a deadly struggle, a groan, a gasp; and then I rose from the dead body of the sentinel, with a small flesh wound in the arm.

Again I made my way forward, and this time towards the camp fires of the enemy, which were in plain sight, about a quarter of a mile distant, and through a small piece of woods. As there was no sentinel between me and the trees, I rose to an upright position and continued on until the one within the shadow of the woods became visible; then I resumed the creeping posture as before. In a few moments, I came upon a slight eminence covered with low underbrush, and once on the top, I plainly beheld the camp of the rebels. It was not very large considering the number of its occupants, and was situated in a large depression at the entrance of the grove, instead of beyond it as I had supposed; two fires had been built in front of the officers' tents, and around were congregated quite a number of men, and among them, Colonel——.

I saw a deal of gesticulating and running, here and there, heard several angry contending voices, and noticed that it seemed to be centred upon one person, who sat in the midst of the crowd. As they were all about him, I had no opportunity to "sight" him; but suddenly they parted as if a thunderbolt had fallen in their midst, and as they did so, the light fell on the stern features of Samuel Cox! He had been discovered, and they were trying him as a spy! The cause of the sudden starting soon became apparent; Cox had sprung to his feet, holding a revolver in one hand, and with the other he swept up the contents of a small deal table, by which were seated the rebel Colonel, a captain, and a lieutenant,—thrust them into his bosom, and with a regular Indian yell, dashed through the astonished crowd, over the bushy ground directly towards me!

Seeing the exciting state of affairs, I sprang to an upright position, and shouted, "This way, Sam! this way! I'll back you!"

He saw me, and as he came up, he gave me the papers, saying: "Take them, lieutenant; they are the plans, etc., of the rebels. If I fall, you can carry them to our Colonel; tell him how I died."

"Don't go under now, Cox," I replied, cheerfully, "See, they are after us; come, follow me!" and as I spoke, I darted away,—Samuel close behind,—followed by a crowd of mad yelling demons.

The sentinel fired a shot at us, likewise the crowd, which had no effect, save a few whistling balls by our ears, as I could see. Two, three and four long miles flew beneath our feet, and as I had taken the direction of our canoe, the waters of the dark river soon burst upon our view.

Dashing down to the spot, where lay the canoe, we jumped in, and were pulling down the river, the ashen ours bending until they almost snapped under the pressure.

Our pursuers came running down to the bank, where we were last seen, to find their prey gone, just as we turned a bend in the river. All their important maps, plans, etc., were in the hands of their enemy, and taken from their very midst by a daring spy!

They returned in chagrin, and no very amiable mood, to their deserted camp.

"Let me do the rowing, Cox; you are tired from excitement and running if nothing else. Our pursuers have gone back, so there is no danger," said I, after we were nearly a mile on our journey. "You are very pale; come and sit in the stern while I row."

He obeyed, mechanically, sitting down in the small stern of the canoe, which I was propelling through the water at a leisurely speed.

Suddenly his pale face assumed a ghastly hue; and his breath came quick and short, while he gasped forth the words:

"Lieutenant, row hard! hard! harder! I must reach the camp before I die! Oh God! row hard, W——."

"Die! what mean you?" I asked with unfeigned astonishment!

"Three of those bullets went clear through my breast! and I am dying! I have stood up against death as long as I can! Oh, Lucy, my wife, my wife!" was Cox's reply.

Reader, did I bend those ashen oars any? or was the canoe more than twenty-five minutes in going over the intervening four miles? Ask the grand old trees along the river bank, what lone canoe shot past them like a meteor, on that night! or, ask the sharpshooters of Col. M——'s division, in the Army of the Wast, at what terrific speed the little vessel shot up to the bank, ploughing up the gravel in its headlong career! Reader, I believe I rowed some that fatal night.

Beneath a stately oak, that grew a few rods from the river bank, lay the dying spy,—Samuel Cox. His curly head was pillowed by a knapsack, while a spread blanket formed the only bed that we had for him. The sharpshooters were standing around, weeping, and others viewing their comrade with sorrowful countenances; a chaplain was kneeling beside the scout, offering up a heartfelt prayer in his behalf, while our surgeon was bathing his temples with water, thus easing him in his last moments.

It was a scene worthy of the pencil of Raphael or Scott. When the chaplain ceased, Cox rose to a sitting posture, and in feeble tones, addressed a few encouraging words to his friends. Said he, at the conclusion, pointing to me:

"Do not blame him for anything whatever; he gave me my own way in the matter—it is not his fault."

Here he stopped for breath, and then proceeded in short sentences:

"Boys, don't any of you ever give up the glorious Union on any plea; for anything on earth! Let the fiercest tortures be plied upon your body before you will say one word against it! I have suffered much at the hands of secessionists in East Tennessee, all because I loved our mighty Union, one out of many. Boys, under any circumstances, 'Don't give up the Ship,' though every man perish!"

"Lieutenant," he continued, calling me to his side, and placing a miniature and a locket and chain in my hands, "send these to my poor wife at Memphis. Write her the particulars of my—my—my—death! Will you?"

"I will, Cox, I will," I answered, my voice husky with emotion.

He was going fast, his eyes were becoming glazed, and his breath hard and short. Once he rallied, and shouted to us all in tones which we never can forget:

"DON'T GIVE UP OUR UNION—Never! NEVER! NEVER!"

And falling back upon his pillow, Samuel Cox, the Spy and Scout,—was dead!

We buried him 'neath the tall, waving oak, which was a symbol of himself, just as the golden summer sun was sinking in the west. We left the spot with soft steps, and returned to our camp. Darkness came on over the grave; all was still, save the quiet rippling of the river, and the mournful sighing of the wind in the top of the oak. A holy calm pervaded the whole scene, and the soft zephyrs "sang sweetly together" over the Patriot's lonely grave.

"Hollow ye the lonely grave,
Make its caverns deep and wide;
In the soil they died to save,
Lay the brave men side by side!
Side by side they fought and fell,
Hand in hand they met the foe;
Who has heard his grandsire tell,
Brave strife, or deadlier blow!

"Wake your mournful harmonies,
Your tears of pity shed for them;
Summer dew and singing breeze
Shall bewail and requiem!
Pile the grave mound broad and high
Where our martyred brethren sleep,
It shall point the pilgrim's eye
Here to bend and here to weep!"

I have little more to add. The rebels never attempted their intended raid. As all their plans, intentions, etc., were in the possession of their enemies, they knew that we would be prepared for them, and they excused themselves, very wisely too!

To the brave scout we were indebted for it all; and we could only say, "Requiescat in Peace!"

OUR COUNTRY'S CALL.

BY JOHN PIERPONT.

Men who plough your granite peaks,
O'er whose head your eagle shrieks,
And for aye of Freedom speaks,
Hear your country's call!
Swear each loyal mother's son,
Swear "Our country shall be ONE!"
Seize your sword, or bring your gun,
Bayonet and ball!

For the land that bore you—Arm!
Shield the State you love from harm!
Catch, and around you spread, the alarm!
Hear, and hold your breath!
Hark! the hostile horde is nigh!
See! the storm comes roaring by!
Hear and heed our battle cry—
"VICTORY OR DEATH!"

Sturdy landsmen, hearty tars,
Can you see your stripes and stars
Flouted by the three broad bars,
And cold-blooded feet?
There the the rebel banner floats!
Tyrants, vanquished by your votes,
Spring, like bloodhounds, at your throats;
Let them bite your steel.

With no traitor at their head,
By no braggart coward led,
By no hero caught abed
While he dreams of flight;
By no "Young Napoleons'"
Kept at bay by wooden guns,
Shall our brothers and our sons
Be held back from fight!

Like a whirlwind in its course
Shall again in rebel force
Jackson's foot on Stuart's horse,
Pass our sleepy posts,
Roam, like Satan, "to and fro,"
And our laggard let them go?
No! in thunder answer "No!
By the Lord of Hosts!"

With the Lord of hosts we fight,
For his Freedom, Law and Right—
Strike for these, and his all-might
Shall with victory crown
Loyal brows, alive or dead,
Crush each crawling Copperhead,
And in bloody battle, tread
This rebellion down!
Talk of "Peace" in hours like this?
'Tis Iscariot's traitor kiss!
'Tis the old Serpent's latest hiss!
Foil his foul intrigue!
Plant your heel his head upon!
Let him squirm—his race is run;
Now, to keep your country one,
Join our Union League!

HOW COULD I?

BY ANNIE BIGELOW.

He carried my satchel to school,
And me through the drifts carried, too;
Could I think why he hugged me so close?
If I couldn't, how could I? could you?

At eve he tied under my chin
My hood with its bright ribbons blue;
Why he gazed in my face could I tell?
If I couldn't, how could I? could you?

He told me my eyes were so black,
The brightest of any he knew;
I blushed and looked down; could I help it?
If I couldn't, how could I? could you?
He left on my cheek a warm kiss,
Then off with the lightning speed flew;
If I could I'd have scolded and stamped;
If I couldn't, how could I? could you?
'Twas long years ago, and since then
He has spoken words loving and true;
I only leaned close to his breast,
For how could I help it? could you?

TO CATCH RATS.—When a house is infested by rats which refuse to nibble at toasted cheese and the usual baits, a few drops of the highly-scented oil of rhodium, poured on the bottom of a cage trap, will almost invariably attract it full of the "mischievous rodents" before morning. We have known this to be tried with the most extraordinary success.—Where a trap, baited with all manner of edibles had failed to attract a single rat, the oil of rhodium caused it to be completely crowded night after night, until the house was cleared of the noisome visitors. The same oil of rhodium is used by some keepers of rat pits, who, when their hands are smeared with it, do not hesitate to take the animals up by the dozen out of bags, fearless of bites.

FILLING THE QUOTA.

If the citizens of South Danvers fail of filling their quota, it will not be from want of effort to enlighten the public mind on the importance of enlistments. Measures were taken early after the call of the President, to choose a Committee on Recruiting—and an excellent selection was made. Through their exertions, meetings of citizens were held, called War Meetings; martial music and speakers of great power and eloquence were provided, and everything was done to notify and bring out the people to these assemblages. Here they listened to the most patriotic appeals, not only from civilians of greater or less eminence, but to those wearing the uniform of the Union and doing good service in the field. These meeting were held in our largest halls, which were well filled, and the appeals of the speakers were responded to with great applause. Personal appeals were also made to individuals who, it was thought, had felt the importance of the object, and the result has been the enlistment of about fifty of the fifty-nine, which constitutes our part of the number required. We trust that these efforts will yet bear fruit in the enlisting of the nine remaining, so that our full quota will be raised without resort to the draft.

Patriotism, as well as town pride, we trust, will prompt our people not to relax their exertions to have the full number made up before the time, now extended, shall have passed.

The time will come when the events now transpiring will harden into history, and we hope that our town, which has so fair a record in its early history for patriotism in the two wars with England, will shine forth still brighter in the history of the present war. We have much already for gratulation in the numbers who have gone out from us to do battle for the good cause, and now, when one strong and final effort is to be made to conquer a quick and honorable peace, we look for new accessions to the army of the Union.

In the light of future history it is proper to make honorable mention of those who have made exertion and sacrifice at home for the cause. The names of those who have been foremost will always receive honor, and the active exertions of the Recruiting Committee will be held in grateful remembrance. Where all have done so well, it may seem invidious to mention names, but there is one who has been so prominent, and has so thrown his whole soul into the work, valuing neither time, effort or money to carry it forward, that the truth of history requires his recognition. It is owing to Stephen Blaney, Esq., perhaps, more than to any other, that the recent efforts have been made, or forwarded, and we cannot forbear to put the fact on record, even at the risk of his disapprobation.

In doing this we would not detract one iota from the merit of many others who have displayed a like interest and zeal in the good cause. God grant that these exertions may bear the fruit of a glorious success and the dawning of a speedy and happy peace and a consolidated Union.

PEABODY INSTITUTE.

The lecture before the Institute, last week, was delivered by J. H. Siddons, Esq., of Cambridge, his subject being the Wits and Humorists. It consisted of remarks on some of the comic writers, with selections from their writings, read by himself and his niece, Miss Comerson. Dickens, Sheridan, Whittier, Hood, Jerold and Shakspeare, were among the authors thus illustrated, and in every instance with excellent effect. There was a naturalness of manner, divested of the appearance of theatrical display, which made the entertainment unexceptionable to the most fastidious, and at the same time brought out the meaning and effect of the words of the writers. It is to be regretted that the inclemency of the weather prevented the presence of a full audience, as those who were present exhibited tokens of great satisfaction and delightful appreciation of the evening's entertainment.

Rev. Alfred P. Putnam, of Roxbury, and formerly of Danvers, lectured last evening, his subject being "The River Nile."

Death of Mr. Cummings.—Mr. John Cummings, one of the men injured at the explosion of the boiler at Messrs. Jacobs & Son's morocco factory, died last Friday evening after much suffering by lock jaw, occasioned by his wounds. Mr. Cummings was an industrious man, and much respected by those who knew him. This is the third death caused by that appalling accident.

☞ The fat cattle which were exhibited by C. P. Preston, at the Fair of the Essex Agricultural Society, last September, and were awarded the first premium, were slaughtered last week, by Mr. Thomas, of this town, and weighed, when dressed, 3,258 ponnds; live weight, 4,720 pounds.

SOUTH DANVERS VOLUNTEERS.

Timothy H. Lord,
Eben S. Daniels,
Charles O. Maxfield,
Joseph F. Dakin, 17th Reg't.
Abraham Barrett, " "
Henry B. Skinner. " "

Total fifty-four. Some of these did not "pass muster."

A new Temperance Lecturer.—Mr. Caswell, from Canada, has been lecturing in Salem on the subject of Temperance, and he is highly praised in the Salem papers for his zeal and eloquence in the cause. We heard him on Sunday evening last, at Mechanic Hall, lecture to a large audience, and although he was apparently under some restraint on account of the proprieties of the Sabbath, yet his address was most able and eloquent, and calculated to do great good. It is a long time since we have had a good rousing Temperance meeting. Mr. Caswell is the man to bring out a good audience and give them good instruction.

Ladies' Soldiers' Aid Society.—In a letter just received from the Sanitary Committee, a request is made that the South Danvers ladies would assist in preparing a supply of mittens to meet the large and urgent requisitions for them, at this inclement season.

Contributions of mittens will be gladly received, and all ladies who are willing to knit, will be furnished with yarn, if desired, by calling on Mrs. Henry Cook, or Mrs. W. H. Little, or at the meeting of the Soldiers' Aid Society, on Thursday afternoon, at Sutton's Hall.

☞ The editor of one of the Richmond papers was lately horribly shocked at meeting with a life of Oliver Cromwell, for sale in that city. The biography of that sturdy old democrat and scourge of the English cavaliers could not be expected to be very agreeable reading for their descendants in this country. How would Parton's life of General Butler answer?

☞ What with re-enlistments in the old regiments, and the rapid filling up of the quotas, the probabilities are—that a rather big pile of men will be precipitated on the South next spring. Let the live avalanche descend swift and resistless, like the land slide at the Willey Notch, so that the rebels shall remember the ides of March, April or May, 1864.

☞ The pirate Braine, while on his flight to Halifax, was stopped and captured by a Yankee Pitcher. The travels of many people have been finished forever by jugs and tumblers, but pitchers have, hitherto, been considered comparatively harmless.

☞ Dr. Gwinn is said to have embezzled $70,000 of the public Treasury money. If this is so, he should be compelled to take 70,000 of his own pills, by way of punishment.

LOYAL LEAGUES.

Mr. Editor,—The Statesman seems to be very much troubled about Loyal Leagues, and in each of the last three or four issues has a fling at them, or those whom they suppose are connected with them. There is nothing strange in this. A paper whose chief supporters are in favor of secession, or at least for peace at the expense of honor, cannot be supposed to look with favor upon an organization based upon the immutable principles of Union and Liberty. It certainly must look with dismay upon an organization which, with its thousands of councils scattered throughout the Border States, aye, and the Rebel Slave States themselves, and, by its effective system of discipline, is doing more for the cause of the Union and Liberty than all other agencies combined. The Statesman has seen the decisive effect of the Loyal Leagues upon the recent elections in New York, Pennsylvania, Iowa, Minnesota, Illinois and Ohio, where they consigned that precious traitor, Vallandigham, to such an infamous obscurity, that no one knows, or even cares, where he now is—whether alive or dead, drunk or sober.

Perhaps the Statesman objects to the Union League because it is a secret organization. If so, I would say with the Apostle, "Out of thine own mouth will I judge thee;" for do not the direct and indirect supporters of the Statesman's policy maintain a secret organization, which is an offshoot merely of the Knights of the Golden Circle? I will do them the justice to say they pretend to be National, but every one, but a political dunce, must see that it is impossible for any opposition to sustain itself for any length of time on the mere question of the proper method for carrying on the war, and the opposition must necessarily take up the issue of peace through Secession and Southern Independence. The Loyal Leagues maintain the cause of a united country, and freedom throughout all her borders.

Republican.

☞ The Confederate Navy consists, according to their own official report, of 383 commissioned officers, 191 petty officers and 877 seamen, or about two officers to every three men. The fact suggests the idea of the old Spanish proverb, which says—

> "If you're seignior and I'm seignior,
> Then who's to pull the boat ashore?"

☞ A copperhead poet feeling a little ashamed of himself, thus indites a verse and inscribes it to Father Abraham—

> We're coming, Father Abraham
> From Ohio's hills and lakes,
> An humble set of Democrats,
> With tails between our legs.

☞ John Hughes, D. D., Archbishop in the Catholic church of the see of New York, died in that city on Saturday evening, aged 66 years. At the time of his decease he was the foremost man of the Catholic church in America, and was not without a name for ability, learning and zeal, throughout the world.

☞ It is predicted by some inspired scribbler, that Jeff. Davis and a few other rebel leaders will cut their throats after the final collapse of their enterprise. This would be a grand finale to the rebellion, but is too good a thing to expect.

☞ The Devil is not always so black as he is painted. From a recent letter it appears that the Federal prisoners in Texas have been generally well treated by the rebel authorities, and are now paroled and sent to Vicksburg.

☞ The Salem leg is highly spoken of, and is, no doubt, a good invention. Heretofore unfortunate people who had been deprived of their natural limbs, have been obliged to hobble about on sell 'em legs.

☞ Mrs. President Lincoln was supposed to be as resolute and determined for the Union as her husband, but it is said that she showed the white feather—in her hair, Christmas Day.

☞ It is reported that Jeff. Davis shed tears upon hearing of Grant's victory at Lookout Mountain. He couldn't have had more than half a cry, being a one-eyed man.

☞ We learn from the Boston Journal that Andrew Bragg was fined at the Police Court for stealing a watch. It is not known whether he is a brother to Gen. Bragg of the rebel army, or not.

☞ An insane man was lately captured at Hartford, Conn., who was ascertained to be such by his undertaking to edit a newspaper.

☞ A Bullock is elected Speaker of the House of Representatives. There will probably be some bellowing from him.

☞ The Richmond Examiner calls 1863 a year of gloom. Next January it will probably call 1864 a year of doom.

☞ The Mississippi river is again completely obstructed—by ice. Gen. Shaw will be sent in the spring to clear it.

STANZAS
DEDICATED TO——,
(On the Death of J. B. Peabody, Esq.)

I heard the news and I hastened home, and entered the dear old hall!
But the loving form that I used to greet came not at my earnest call!
Where was he now, with his manly form, with his fine and noble brow?
Who was first to greet with a welcome kiss, but alas, he came not now!
In yonder room he was lying low, in a calm and death-like sleep,
And his loving heart, so large and true, had already ceased to beat!
Softly I entered the darkened room and lifted the sacred pall,
And sadly I kissed that silent brow, so loved and so dear to all.
They had closed his lids, with their love-lit smile, and smoothed back his silken hair,
And folded the robes of spotless white around him with tenderest care;
How calmly he slept! no trace of care or sorrow was on him now,
The angels had kissed them, one by one, away from his marble brow.
How calmly he slept! like a weary child taking a long repose;
Peaceful that sleep, so calm and deep, of whose waking no mortal knows.
We thought of him now, as of one gone home, freed from the shackles of earth,
To enter a higher and happier state, and of a heavenly birth.
We shall miss him now, when the board is spread in this sad and silent home—
We shall miss him, too, in his study chair, thro' the weary years to come;
But when years shall pass, and we all go home to that world so bright and fair,
He will be first, with his loving smile, to come forth and meet us there.

North Andover, January, 12, 1864.

Trained Horse.—A street exhibition of a trained horse took place in the Square on Saturday afternoon. It was the property of Mr. Rockwell, of Broome County, N. Y., who had taught him to be docile, submissive, and intelligent beyond all pre-conceived ideas of horse-culture. He took him from Mr. Simond's stable, when the hour of exhibition had arrived and an audience had gathered, having nothing of harness but a surcingle round his neck, with rings to hold the shafts of the sleigh. He then mounted, holding in his hand a long whip; by the motions of which, without bit of bridle or anything of the kind, he guided him whither he listed, with all gentleness and precision, no word being uttered, nor blow struck.

The Chelsea Telegrah, in noticing his performances in that place, says: "Mr. Rockwell professes, like Rarey, to be able to subjugate all unruly horses, however vicious. Mr. Forristall's old termagant mare, that kicks and bites and behaves as ugly as she knows how on all occasions, was placed at his disposal.—He exorcised the evil spirit out of her in about three minutes. He approached her with a small rope, which he put in her mouth like a bit, and drew her neck up tight. He then mounted, changing his seat from neck to rump, and dangling his feet under her legs and tail without once provoking a kick. He also curried her with an iron currycomb, an operation which she never before permitted, but which she bore with gentle resignation. He treated another vicious horse with like success."

We understand that Mr. Rockwell has secured a class in South Danvers.

An act of Justice.—The acquittal of George T. Bailey, of Malden, of the charge of murdering young Converse in the bank of that town, was very gratifying to the people, who never had any doubt of his innocence. As soon as he was discharged in the Police Court of Charlestown, he was taken by his friends to the hotel, where dinner had been prepared. Then a sleigh, drawn by six horses, was in readiness; and escorted by forty of the leading citizens, he was carried back to his home. At Malden over two thousand people assembled to greet him; flags were raised, guns fired, cheers given, and bells rang. Nor would the people be satisfied with seeing him at his house; they demanded and held a public meeting at the Town Hall, where speeches were made by Rev. Mr. Greenwood, Coroner Hill, and others, and Mr. Bailey returned his thanks for the interest they manifested in his case. A resolution was passed declaring their conviction of his entire innocence, and complimenting him as an upright, honorable and honest citizen; and to show their further sympathy, they voted to raise funds to pay all the expenses he had been at, and that the various flags in town be displayed in honor of his acquittal.

☞ The State Reform School at Westboro', is crowded with 340 pupils—50 more than the house can well accommodate. The cost averages $114.25 per head. At least three hundred and fifty-six of the boys, who have been inmates of this institution, are now patriotically serving or have served their country, either in the army or navy, and many of them have risen to posts of honor.

☞ The Nautical School for Boys is declared a success. The lads are healthy and well behaved. The expenses for the year were $25,500; and in that time 62 boys shipped in the Navy, 47 in the merchant service, and 62 were discharged to learn trades. The present number is 162.

Can Streams rise higher than their Fountains?

It is generally conceded to be a truth that the present generation is far in advance of those of former centuries,—that the science of true civilization and improvement has reached a higher grade than in the march of previous months and years.

But yet there are those who are so completely wedded to the institutions and observances of the days—who are so entirely conformed to the codes, according to which they have been reared—that any improvement upon the ancient customs are regarded with a jealous eye. Then compare the ways and doings of the present time with the ways of their youthful years and, with countenances aghast and mind disturbed at the discovery of the great deviations during the decades that measure off their span of existence, ask within themselves: Is it a fact that the age is improving? Can streams rise higher than their fountains? Very suggestive indeed! Yes, devoted student of the old, dispensation of slowly moving progress, you have brought forth a decidedly bright idea from that thick skull of yours.

Streams can and do rise higher in these days than the fountains from which they sprung. Their beginning was in a sluggish, stagnant pool; but, as they flowed onward, they increased, and now it has astonished this old-fashioned and stunted intellect. It is far beyond the grasp of your idea, but it is moreover true; and the nineteenth century thunders forth and reiterates its lofty announcement, of which it is itself a living embodiment. Streams in their onward course are able to rise far higher than their fountains.

Danvers, January, 1864.

Danvers.—The Bowditch Club of that town, will hold a meeting at the Town Hall on Thursday evening, at which the public are invited. The exercises will be of a literary character, and will consist of the reading of the "Bowditch Gazette," of which J. A. Welch is editor; Recitation by A. W. Trask; and a debate upon the following resolve:

Resolved, That Abraham Lincoln should be re-elected to the Presidency of the United States.

The disputants assigned for the opening of this debate are W. E. Putnam and Alfred Porter in the affirmative, and John W. Porter and H. L. Hadley in the negative Exercises of this nature are both interesting and profitable; and we doubt not there will be a large attendance.

☞ Among the places worthy of a visit in Washington, is a hospital for horses, which is a vast establishment.—In the stables connected with the building are horses suffering from wounds of every description, some with broken ribs, some with wounds from shots and shell, some with saber cuts and bruises, others galled and worn out by over work. It is estimated that in six months nearly fifty thousand horses have been treated in this hospital, of which over one half were reissued to the army.

☞ We noticed a few days since, that our neighbors in Newbury, in their anxiety to add one more towards their quota of soldiers, had removed a house, in which dwelt a man ready to volunteer from West Newbury to their own town. Their labor proved vain, for the man after being presented was rejected for physical disability. He has got his house removed for nothing, and they may have "caught a Tartar.—Newburyport Herald.

☞ Secretary Stanton has ordered all the rebel prisoners in the United States to be sent within Gen. Butler's jurisdiction—to Point Lookout—and has declared that not one of them shall be exchanged except through Gen. Butler, who, while outlawed by Jeff. Davis, has a check on the rebel President in the fact that Davis has been outlawed by President Lincoln's Proclamation.

Hides.—The importation of hides was largely increased in 1863. The number at Salem was 191,595, which was 30,000 over last year; and at Boston 722,888, which was 265,000 over last year; and at New York 1,798,944, which was 25,000 over last year. The business in hides is in a measure passing from Salem to Boston.

☞ Three fathers went up the Cumberland river in the same boat, the other day, with three metallic coffins, to bring away the bodies of their sons who had fallen in the battle of Stone river. As they stepped ashore at Clarksville, they met their boys jolly and hearty, with as little idea of going into a burial case as into a copperhead convention.

☞ Sergeant Plunkett of the 21st Massachusetts Regiment, who lost both of his arms at the battle of Fredericksburg, while bearing forward the flag of his Regiment after six men had been successively shot down beneath its folds, was recently married in Worcester, to Miss Nellie Lorrimer.

☞ A man in an adjoining town broke off an engagement to marry on accidentally losing a part of his fore finger, on the ground that he would never be able to support a family. The man was some sixty years old and the lady fifty, the courtship has run on for a quarter of a century.

☞ Gov. Andrew's message occupied two and a quarter hours in its delivery, and a portion of it was skipped at that.

AN INCIDENT OF THE LATE FAIR IN BOSTON.

A correspondent of the Albany Evening Journal furnishes that paper with the following incident, which occurred during the recent Fair, in Music Hall, in Boston:—"As I stood to-day looking at the bristling piles of bayonets that rise on either side of the great organ, and are surmounted by the blood-stained banners of the Massachusetts regiments, I was conscious of a stir and murmur in the crowd that caused me to turn and look behind me. A pale and haggard countenance lit by eyes of wonderful power and expression, met me, and I drew back instinctively to make room for their possessor. He was 'only a private,' but had enlisted in the 6th Massachusetts the very next day after the President's call for troops in 1861—had been wounded in that ever-memorable passage through the city of Baltimore; but had continued in the service, until finally, at Fredericksburg, his leg was shot away and his lower jaw was torn and horribly disfigured by a Minnie ball.

"Now, dying with consumption, he had come home, and 'could not die in peace,' he said, until he had been carried to the hall to look at the tattered and bloody flag under which he had fought so long. He was supported by two men, and slowly and painfully made his way up to the platform where it hung, waving solemnly as if pronouncing a benediction on the poor pilgrim who had given his life in its holy service. As he reverently lifted his cap and saluted it, it required no prophetic vision to see the martyr's crown already descending on that young head; and many a heart in that vast crowd was baptized anew in the flood of patriotic devotion that welled up into 'eyes all unused to tears.'

"A few feet from him stood Edward Everett, the scholar, the statesman and patriot, whom New England delights to honor; but in the great book of records who shall say that the name of this poor common soldier may not shine as brightly, if it cannot hold as lofty a place?"

☞ On Friday a man applied for aid to the authorities of Boston, who said he had been an editor of a paper at Montgomery, Ala., till within a few months, when his business having been ruined by the secession, he came through the lines to the North, and reached Boston two or three days since, without money or friends. Friday or the day before he fell upon the ice and dislocated his shoulder. He was sent to Tewksbury, and will undoubtedly find a a Massachusetts Alms House preferable to the State House in Alabama.

☞ At the Western Sanitary Fair, now being held at Cincinnati, one of the curiosities for sale is a cane cut from the tree under which Generals Grant and Pemberton arranged the terms of the surrender of Vicksburg. Also, two gold vest buttons, a coral ring, match safe and scissors, from the house of Jeff Davis, in Jackson, Miss.

☞ Two deacons were once disputing about the proposed site for a new graveyard, when the first remarked, "I'll never be buried in that ground as long as I live." "What an obstinate man! said the second; if my life is spared, I will."

☞ Joseph Shoemaker of Indiana, 105 years old, was seen by the editor of the Republican, of that town, hard at work chopping cord wood, a few days ago.—He had cut and stacked eight or ten cords during the summer.

☞ Vermont has raised her quota of troops under the last call, and has a surplus without counting re-enlistments.—To the young farmers of the Green Mountain State the large bounties were a great temptation.

☞ A writer in Blackwood's Magazine says that Gen. Lee is the handsomest man he ever saw—fifty-six, tall, broad-shouldered, and very well set up. The Boston Post thinks "that last phrase is equivocal."

☞ The Eastern Railroad for 1863 exhibits for gross earnings $812,557; for working expenses $421,963; leaving for net income $390,594, equal to $8.25 per cent. upon the cost.

☞ The Quakers from different States of the Union, have delegates at Washington now, asking exemption from military duty. If they gain that point there will be large additions to their societies.

☞ The federal loss at Chancellorsville was 28,000 men. The rebel loss was greater still, for they lost Stonewall Jackson, who was worth more than any 28,000 met in their armies.

☞ Two trains on the Cincinnati and Dayton Railroad collided on Tuesday, by which three passengers were killed, 35 severely and 20 slightly wounded.

☞ In all our armies only 20,000 three years' men have their terms expire before July.

☞ The interest on 7-30 treasury notes is to be paid in legal currency—not specie.

INTERRUPTION TO REBEL FESTIVITIES.

A correspondent writing from Natchez Missouri, gives the following account o a bold descent made recently upon party of rebels who were participating a a military ball on Black River:

Col. Farrar, commanding at Vidalia learned one day through a lady, that military ball was to be given that nigh at a Mr. Johnson's plantation, on Blac River, 33 miles distant. Unfortunately the Colonel's mounted force was on th Natchez side, having been scouting, an it was then too late to cross them to th Louisiana side

Determined not to let such an oppo tunity slip, he hastily mounted ten me of the 30th Missouri, and twenty-five the 2d Mississippi Artillery, A. D., the on duty at that post, and with them though not an invited guest, started f the scene of festivity. The route pu sued led directly through the swamp which being partially covered with wate rendered a rapid movement almost in possible. Nothing daunted, the litt band pushed on, and by 4 A. M., ha approached within half a mile of th house. Here dismounting, they move cautiously along the unguarded road within a few rods of the scene of mi and merriment. The brilliant ligh which gleamed from the windows, a the sweet cadence of the music, to that all went merry within. To ru through the gateway and surround t mansion, was the work of a moment.

Col. F. and Capt. Orgue dashing the house, pistol in hand, demanded th surrender of every Confederate officer an soldier there. They did this, will yo believe it, oh reader, followed by a squa of the rebels' own countrymen an brothers from the 2d Mississippi Hea Artillery of African descent! Of cours the Confederacy surrendered. Now, th colonel, who is reputed to be as gallan as he is brave, not wishing to mar en tirely so festive an occasion, kindly re quested the guests to continue the danc

The music once more struck up; an not yet being too old for such enjoymen the Colonel himself led upon the floor fair and blushing daughter of the South and with her was soon lost in the dizzy mazes of the waltz. Daybreak warne the little party of the danger of delay The prisoners were hastily mounted o their own good steeds; adieus wer given to their sorrowing friends, and eac with a sable guard by his side, com menced their northern journey. At A. M., the little party had safely re turned to Vidalia, accomplishing a marc of sixty-six miles in fifteen hours. Th is a good joke on the Confederacy, an pays them for a similar trick played o some of our boys a year or so since, bac of Memphis. Not the most agreeabl part of the joke, so far as the seces were concerned, was marching them through the city of Natchez between dozen negro guards. Said one of them "Can't we have a white guard, Colonel?" "No," said he, "the negroes took you and it is right that they should guar you."

☞ The re-enlistment of veterans i the Army of the Potomac continues t be large. The same is true in all th departments. The soldiers want to se the war through; and they mean to d their part to wind it up the comi season.

☞ There is such a desire among th Irish to come to this country, that ther are not emigrant ships enough to brin the hundreds who are waiting for th opportunity. It is said that the board ing houses in Liverpool are full of peopl waiting for passage.

☞ In Paris a physician had his wife life insured for $100,000, and of cours she died very suddenly soon after. legal investigation is taking place.

☞ The Lewiston Journal says th old maids of that town are "loyal—to man." Probably; only they can't fin him. And that's what's the matter.

☞ The Richmond Whig says Slaver has stabbed itself to death; it has sinne against the light, committed the unpar donable sin, and must die.

☞ The loss of men in the loyal army since April, 1861, is given at 219,399 That is less than the increase of our pop ulation by emigration.

☞ The Richmond Whig, in referring to Gen. Butler, says:—"This cross-eye Yankee has in him the cunning of the Evil One."

☞ In some of the regiments of th army, grammar classes have been form ed. One chaplain writes that his clas numbers thirty.

☞ In Salem the deaths during the year 1863 were 385; males 203, female 182. Twenty-seven of the deceased were over 80 years of age.

☞ London thieves have taken t dropping vitriol into ladies pockets. hole is soon burned and the thief 'finds a purse in the street!

☞ The State Liquor Agency has supplied more towns, and sold more rum than ever before. The sales amounted to $150,000 for 1863.

☞ Refugees from the South say that President Lincoln's amnesty is well receivd in those parts and having a good influence. We shall see in the spring.

☞ The London Times says that Heenan's health had suffered from the severe training before his fight with King.

The man who doth no paper take,
Grudging two dollars once a year,
Will never a good husband make,
Because his wife can never know what is going on in the world, and his children will very ignorant appear.

The last line is rather long for a good jingle, but the moral is sublime.

THE POT PIE.—All learned texicologists and chemists appear to have forgotten the important fact that if a pot pie is made without a hole in the crust to let out certain eminations from the meat, colic, vomiting, and other symptoms of slight poisoning will occur. I have known two instances of large parties being affected in this manner from eating pot pies that had no hole in them.—Lancet.

The Mexican affair cost France 210,000,000 of francs.

☞ Woman has this great advantage over men—she proves her will in her lifetime, whilst man is obliged to wait till he is dead.

☞ Smith married a handsome, but taciturn, woman, and now reads a celebrated line from Keats, as follows: "A thing of beauty is a jaw forever."

Agents and Canvassers Wanted!

A Splendid Opportunity for active parties to canvass for a pair of unusually popular Engravings, just issued. The Departure of the Pilgrim Fathers for America; and The Landing of the Pilgrims in America. Price so low that every Family will purchase.

Address, for terms.

CALDWELL, & CO.,
82 Cedar Street, New York.

TWO ELEGANT WORKS OF ART,
Just Issued!

The Departure of the Pilgrim Fathers for America, and The Landing of the Pilgrims in America.

Each Engraving 26 x 34 inches, price only $1,50 each, by mail. These constitute the finest pair of companion Engravings ever published in the United States. They were engraved by the most eminent steel plate Engraver in this country, JOHN C. McRAE, of New York City, and for artistic skill and high beauty were never excelled. Mr. McRAE is great in whatever he attempts, but in these gems he has outdone himself. He was determined to render them enduring monuments of his skill, and no pains or expense have been spared to make them perfect works of Art, and to far excel any similar works ever issued in this country. They are of the same size, and in every respect equal to, the elegant English Engravings of the same subjects, which cannot be bought in this country for less than twelve dollars and fifty cents, each copy.

We have undertaken a gigantic enterprise, and one in which we earnestly invite the cooperation of all lovers of the beautiful in Art. We must sell fifty thousand copies of each of these magnificent Engravings, and to accomplish this have placed the price low enough to bring them within the reach of every one.—Will you help us? And in so doing confer a life long pleasure on yourself! Such a great value in Art for so little money, was never before offered, and nothing short of a very large sale will remunerate us. Such Splendid Parlor Gems are usually published at $5 or $10 each, but we have determined to appeal to the public, to sustain us in our efforts to bring them within the reach of every family in the land.

The great historical value of these pictures—their great elegance and beauty, will render them of incalculable value to every home.

All honor to the "Mayflower Puritans"—the brave and true.

What sought they thus afar?
Bright jewels, bright jewels of the mine?
The wealth of seas, the spoils of war?—
They sought a faith's pure shrine!
Oh! call it holy ground,
The spot where first they trod—
They have left unchanged what there they [found—
FREEDOM TO WORSHIP GOD!

This is the life of agony endured by the sufferer from Fever and Ague. He wanders like an uncertain shadow, never knowing what moment he may be prostrated, and therefore disinclined to give any serious attention to business. This is the condition of thousands in town and country. It is no exaggeration to say that Fever and Ague kills more people than any twenty other diseases in America. For a sure and speedy cure of this terrible affliction, we take great pleasure in recommending HOSTETTER'S STOMACH BITTERS, which have already achieved a wide reputation for rapid and powerful effects in renovating the system prostrated by this disease.

BELL'S SPECIFIC PILLS —WARRANTED IN ALL CASES.— :—Can be relied on! Never fail to cure! Do not nauseate! Are speedy in action! No change of diet required! Do not interfere with business pursuits! Can be used without detection! Upward of 200 cures the past month—some of them very severe cases. Over one hundred physicians have used them in their practice, and all speak well of their efficacy, and approve of their composition, which is entirely vegetable and harmless on the system. Hundreds of certificates can be shown.

BELL'S SPECIFIC PILLS are the original and only genuine Specific Pill. They are adapted for male and female, old or young, and the only reliable remedy for effecting a permanent and speedy cure in all cases of Spermatorrhea, or Seminal Weakness, with all its train of evils, such as Urethral and Vaginal Discharges, Gleet, the Whites, Nightly or Involuntary Emissions, Incontinence, Genital Debility and Irritability, Impotence, Weakness or Loss of Power, Nervous Debility, &c., &c., all of which arise principally from Sexual Excesses or Self-Abuse, or some constitutional derangement, and incapacitates the sufferer from fulfilling the duties of married life. In all sexual diseases, as Gonorrhea, Gleet, and Strictures, and in Diseases of the Bladder and Kidneys, they act as a charm! Relief is experienced by taking a single box.

Sold by all the principal druggists. Price $1.

They will be sent by mail, securely sealed, and confidentially, on receipt of the money, by

J. BRYAN, M. D,
No. 76 Cedar street, New York,

Consulting Physician for the treatment of Seminal, Urinary, Sexual, and Nervous Diseases, who will send, free to all, the following valuable work, in sealed envelope:

THE FIFTIETH THOUSAND.—DR. BELL'S TREATISE on Self-Abuse, Premature Decay, Impotence and Loss of Power, Sexual Diseases. Seminal Weakness, Nightly Emissions, Genital Debility, &c., &c., a pamphlet of 64 pages, containing important advice to the afflicted, and which should be read by every sufferer, as the means of cure in the severest stages is plainly set forth. Two stamps required to pay postage.

December 9, 1863—1 yr.

IMPORTANT TO LADIES.—DR. HARVEY'S FEMALE PILLS have never yet failed in removing difficulties arising from obstruction, or stoppage of nature, or in restoring the system to perfect health when suffering from Spinal Affections, Prolapsus, Uteri, the Whites, or other weakness of the Uterine Organs. The Pills are perfectly harmless on the constitution, and may be taken by the most delicate female without causing distress—the same time they act like a charm by strengthening, invigorating and restoring the system to a healthy condition, and by bringing on the monthly period with regularity, no matter from what causes the obstruction may arise. They should, however, NOT be taken during the first three or four months of pregnancy, though safe at any other time, as miscarriage would be the result.

Each box contains 60 Pills. Price $1.

DR. HARVEY'S TREATISE on Diseases of Females, Pregnancy, Miscarriage, Barrenness, Sterility, Reproduction, and Abuses of Nature, and emphatically the Ladies' Private Medical Adviser, a pamphlet of 64 pages, sent free to any address. Six cents required to pay postage.

The Pills and book will be sent by mail when desired, securely sealed, and prepaid, by

J. BRYAN, M. D., General Agent,
No. 76 Cedar street, New York.

☞ Sold by all the principal druggists.

TERRIBLE DISCLOSURES — SECRETS FOR THE MILLION!—A most valuable and wonderful publication. A work of 400 pages, and 30 colored engravings. DR. HUNTER'S VADE MECUM, an original and popular treatise on Man and Woman, their Physiology, Functions, and Sexual Disorders of every kind, with Never-Failing Remedies for their speedy cure. The practice of Dr. Hunter has long been, and still is, unbounded, but at the earnest solicitation of numerous persons, he has been induced to extend his medical usefulness through the medium of his "Vade Mecum." It is a volume that should be in the hands of every family in the land, as a preventive of secret vices, or as a guide for the alleviation of one of the most awful and destructive scourges ever visited mankind. One copy, securely enveloped, will be forwarded free of postage to any part of the United States for 50 cents in post office stamps or 3 copies for $1. Address, post paid, DR. HOSTETTER'S
CELEBRATED
STOMACH BITTERS.

A pure and powerful Tonic, corrective and alterative of wonderful efficacy in disease of the

Stomach, Liver and Bowels.

Cures Dyspepsia, Liver Complaint, Headache, Debility, Nervousness, Depression of Spirits, Constipation, Colic, Intermittent Fevers, Cramps and Spasms, and all Complaints of either Sex, arising from Bodily Weakness whether inherent in the system or produced by special causes.

Nothing that is not wholesome, genial and restorative in its nature enters into the composition of HOSTETTER'S STOMACH BITTERS. This popular preparation contains no mineral of any kind, no deadly botanical element; no fiery excitant: but it is a combination of the extracts of rare balsamic herbs and plants with the purest and mildest of all diffusive stimulants.

It is well to be forearmed against disease, and, so far as the human system can be protected by human means against maladies engendered by an unwholesome atmosphere, impure water and other external causes, HOSTETTER'S BITTERS may be relied on as a safeguard.

In districts infested with Fever and Ague, it has been found infallible as a preventive and irresistible as a remedy and thousands who resort to it under apprehension of an attack, escape the scourage; and thousands who neglect to avail themselves of its protective qualities in advance, are cured by a very brief course of this marvelous medicine. Fever and Ague patients, after being plied with quinine for months in vain, until fairly saturated with that dangerous alkaloid, are not unfrequently restored to health within a few days by the use of HOSTETTER'S BITTERS.

The weak stomach is rapidly invigorated and the appetite restored by this agreeable Tonic, and hence it works wonders in cases of DYSPEPSIA and in less confirmed forms of INDIGESTION. Acting as a gentle and painless apperient, as well as upon the liver, it also invariably relieves the CONSTIPATION superinduced by irregular action of the digestive and secretive organs.

Persons of feeble habit, liable to Nervous Attacks, Lowness of Spirits and Fits of Languor, find prompt and permanent relief from the Bitters. The testimony on this point is most conclusive, and from both sexes.

The agony of BILIOUS COLIC is immediately assuaged by a single dose of the stimulant, and by occasionally resorting to it, the return of the complaint may be prevented.

As a General Tonic, HOSTETTER'S BITTERS produce effects which must be experienced or witnessed before they can be fully appreciated. In cases of Constitutional Weakness, Premature Decay and Debility and Decrepitude arising from OLD AGE, it exercises the electric influence. In the convalescent stages of all diseases it operates as a delightful invigorant. When the powers of nature are relaxed, it operates to re-enforce and re-establish them.

Last, but not least, it is The Only Safe Stimulant, being manufactured from sound and innocuous materials, and entirely free from the acid elements present more or less in all the ordinary tonics and stomachics of the day.

No family medicine has been so universally, and, it may be truly added, deservedly popular with the intelligent portion of the community, as HOSTETTER'S BITTERS.

Prepared by HOSTETTER & SMITH, Pittsburgh, Pa.

Sold by all Druggists, Grocers and Storekeepers everywhere.

HELMBOLD'S
GENUINE PREPARATIONS,

COMPOUND FLUID EXTRACT BUCHU, a Positive and Specific Remedy for diseases of the Bladder, Kidneys, Gravel, and Dropsical Swellings.

This Medicine increases the power of Digestion, and excite the Absorbents into healthy action, by which the Wtaery or Calcareous depositions, and all Unnatural Enlargements are reduced, as well as Pain and Inflammation.

—:o:—

HELMBOLD'S EXTRACT BUCHU.

For Weaknesses arising from Excesses, Habits of Dissipation, Early Indiscretion of Abuse, attended with the following symptoms:—

Indisposition to Exertion,	Loss of Power,
Loss of Memory,	Difficulty of Breathing,
Weak Nerves,	Trembling,
Horror of Disease,	Wakefulness,
Dimness of Vision,	Pain in the Back,
Universal Lassitude of the Muscular System,
Hot Hands,	Flushing of the Body,
Dryness of the Skin,	Eruptions on the Face,
Pallid Countenance.

These symptoms, if allowed to go on, which this medicine invariably removes, soon follows

Impotency, Fatuity, Epileptic Fits,

In one of which the patient may expire.

Who can say that they are not frequently followed by those "Direful Diseases,"

"INSANITY AND CONSUMPTION."

Many are aware of the cause of their suffering, BUT NONE WILL CONFESS THE RECORDS OF THE INSANE ASYLUMS.

And Melancholy Deaths by Consumption bear ample witness to the Truth of the assertion.

The Constitution once effected with Organic Weakness requires the aid of Medicine to Strengthen and Invigorate the system.

Which HELMBOLD'S EXTRACT BUCHU invariably does. A Trial will convince the most skeptical.

—:o:—

FEMALES—FEMALES—FEMALES.

In many Affections peculiar to Females the EXTRACT BUCHU is unequalled by any other remedy, as in Chlorosis or Retention, Irregularity, Painfulness, or Suppression of Customary Evacuations, Ulcerated Scirrhous state of the Uterus, Leuchorrhoea or Whites, Sterility, and for all complaints incident to the sex, whether arising from indiscretion or Habits of Dissipation, or in the

DECLINE OR CHANGE OF LIFE.

—:o:—

Take no more Balsam, Mercury, or unpleasant Medicines for unpleasant and dangerous diseases.

HELMBOLD'S EXTRACT BUCHU AND IMPROVED ROSE WASH CURES

SECRET DISEASES

In all their Stages, At little Expense.
Little or no change in Diet. No inconvenience.
And no Exposure.

It causes a frequent desire and gives strength to Urinate, thereby Removing Obstructions, Preventing and Curing Strictures of the Urethra, allaying Pain and Inflammation, so frequent in this class of diseases, and expelling all Poisonous, Diseased and wornout Matter.

Thousands upon Thousands who have been the Victims of Quacks, and who have paid heavy fees to be cured in a short time, have found they were deceived, and that the "POISON" has, by the use of "Powerful Astringents," been dried up in the system, to break out in an aggravated form, and perhaps after Marriage.

—:o:—

Use HELMBOLD'S EXTRACT BUCHU for all affections and diseases of the URINARY ORGANS, whether existing in MALE or FEMALE, from whatever cause originating and no matter of HOW LONG STANDING. Diseases of these Organs requires the aid of a DIURETIC. HELMBOLD'S EXTRACT BUCHU IS THE GREAT DIURETIC, and is certain to have the desired effect in all Diseases for which it is Recommended.

Evidence of the most reliable and responsible character will accompany the medicine.

A LECTURE on the NATURE, TREATMENT and RADICAL Cure of Spermatorrœa or Seminal Weakness, Involuntary Emissions, Sexual Debility, and Impediments to Marriage generally, Nervousness, Consumption, Epilepsy and Fits; Mental and Physical Incapacity, resulting from Self Abuse, &c,—By ROBT. J. CULVERWELL, M. D., Author of the Green Book, &c.

The world-renowned author, in this admirable Lecture, clearly proves from his own experience that the awful consequences of Self-abuse may be effectually removed without medicine, and without dangerous surgical operations, bougies, instruments, rings, or cordials, pointing out a mode of cure at once certain and effectual, by which every sufferer, no matter what his condition may be, may cure himself cheaply, privately, and radically. This lecture will prove a boon to thousands and thousands.

SPEED, COMFORT AND SAFETY!

FOR NEW YORK.
Norwich Steamboat Train.
The only Boats Landing at Jersey City.

CABIN Passage, $5.00; Deck Passage, $4.00. The new and elegant sixteen wheel cars of the steamboat express train leave the Boston & Worcester Railroad Station, Albany Street., at 5½ P. M., daily, connecting with the new steamers, (built expressly for this line,) CITY OF BOSTON, Capt. WILCOX, Mondays, Wednesdays, and Fridays; CITY OF NEW YORK, Capt. JEWETT, Tuesdays, Thursdays and Saturdays, which (before proceeding to their Pier, No. 39 North River,) will touch at the wharf of the New Jersey Railroad at Jersey City, (Sundays excepted) thus enabling Southern Passengers to make sure connections with the First Southern Train, and at the same time avoid the great annoyance of the Ferry and Hack transportation in the crowded streets of New York. This insures ample time for Breakfast before the trains leave. Conductors D. F. WALLER and W. F. BARTON accompany the passengers through.

Through tickets to Philadelphia, Baltimore and Washington can be had at 79 Washington Street, Boston. WM. DICKEY, JR., Agent.

Boston, January 7, 1863.*

FOR NEW YORK via FALL RIVER AND NEWPORT. Cabin passage $5.00; Deck, $4.00. Cars leave the Depot of the Old Colony and Newport Railway, corner of South and Kneeland streets, at 5.30 P. M., daily.

For steamer BAY STATE, Capt. W. Brown, on Mondays, Wednesdays and Fridays.

For steamer EMPIRE STATE, Capt. B. Brayton, on Tuesdays, Thursdays and Saturdays.

Passengers by this route can take the 4.10 P. M. Express Train, and arrive in Fall River one hour before the Steamboat Train, having time to secure State Rooms and make their preparations for the passage.

Passengers by this line going to Philadelphia, Baltimore, Washington, &c., can connect with the New Jersey or Camden and Amboy Railroad. Baggage Checked through.

☞ A baggage master accompanies the passengers through to New York. Tickets, Berths and Staterooms secured at the O. C. & Newport R. R. Station.

TAKE NOTICE.

THAT Dr. Ham's Dyspepsia Remedy has been before the public for the past ten years. And in that time the people who have used it will vouch for the benefit they have derived from it. The character of his article and its reputation can also be obtained from the dealers who sell it, or have sold it for any length of time, to both of those, Dr Ham refers and is willing to stand the test. And also challenges any new compound to produce the same results, let alone delicacy of flavor, of his INVIGORATING SPIRIT, which for ITS EFFECTS UPON THE BILE, A TORPED LIVER, LOW SPIRITS, or when the blood is affected as seen by SKIN DISEASES or its ACTION UPON THE KIDNEYS, in fact for any person who is run down by the wear and care of this world will find relief in this old and well tried remedy.

Astonishing.

TO Dr. Ham, who has modestly put before the public his DYSPEPSIA REMEDY for ten years past, to look back and see the number of tremendous articles within that time, that have sprang up like a rocket, and gone down like the stick which guides it in its glorious assent. Some come out and claim to tell the public they use unknown Barks from South America, with any quantity of rum from the West Indias, &c. Dr Ham takes this opportunity to refer to the MEDICAL FACULTY here and everywhere that his article is in use, as to its qualifications, and challenges any one to produce a person, male or female, who has used it as directed, that will not speak favorable of it for DISORGANIZED STOMACH, Dyspepsia, loss of appetite, want of action of the Kidneys, as well as many other complaints that humanity are afflicted with.

To Ladies.

DR. HAM'S Dyspepsia Remedy is just the thing you require to remove the langour caused by weakness and debility; it invigorates the system, causes the blood to take new life in its varied course through the system, in fact it gives tone to the system and will relieve and remove the thousand irregularities that from various csuses you are afflicted with. For Dyspepsia it is a never failing remedy, it has stood the test of years, and we have yet to hear of its failing to give relief to the afflicted thousands who have received health and happiness by its use.

To Gentlemen.

DR. HAM knows that you do not always pay much attention to the many different articles put before you in the paper, but we would refer you to our agents who you will find are the respectable merchants and dealers, in regard to the Invigorating Spirit; some of them have sold it for years, and know well the reputation it has amongst those who have used it in assisting nature to eradicate diseases. It will renovate the system, as it acts directly on the blood, removing all obstructions to the general health, will cure Liver Complaints, Dyspepsia, Nervous Affections, Sour Stomach, Headache, Weakness, Loss of Appetite, as well as obstruction in the Kidney, Bladder or Urinary Organs. Try it. We will guarantee you will be satisfied with the result.

General Depot, 62 Liberty Street, New York. Sold by Weeks & Potter, 154 Washington Street, M. S Burr & Co., 26 Tremont Street, G. C. Goodwin & Co., 11 Marshall Street, Boston; and in South Danvers by George E. Meacom, T. A. Sweetser, D. P. Grosvenor, Jr., Main Street; and by Druggists everywhere.

Important to the Afflicted.

DR. DOW continues to be consulted at his office, Nos. 7 and 9 Endicott street, Boston, on all diseases of a

PRIVATE OR DELICATE NATURE.

By a long course of study and practical experience of unlimited extent. Dr. D. has now the gratification of presenting the unfortunate with remedies that have never, since he first introduced them, failed to cure the most alarming cases of

GONORRHŒA AND SYPHILIS.

Beneath his treatment, all the horrors of venereal and impure blood, Impotency, Scrofula, Gonorrhœa Ulcers, pain and distress in the regions of procreation, Inflammation of the Bladder and Kidneys, Hydrocele, Abcesses, Humors, frightful Swellings, and the long train of horrible symptoms attending this class of disease, are made to become as harmless as the simplest ailings of a child.

SEMINAL WEAKNESS.

Dr. D. devotes a great part of his time to the treatment of those cases caused by a secret and solitary habit, which ruins the body and mind, unfitting the unfortunate individual for business or society. Some of the sad and melancholy effects produced by early habits of youth, are Weakness of the Back and limbs, Dizziness of the head, Dimness of sight, Palpitation of the heart, Dyspepsia, Nervousness, Derangement of the digestive functions, Symptoms of Consumption, &c. The fearful effects on the mind are much to be dreaded; loss of memory, confusion of ideas, depression of spirits, evil forebodings, aversion of society, self-distrust, timidity, &c., are among the evils produced. Such persons should, before contemplating marriage, consult a physician of experience, and be at once restored to health and happiness.

Patients who wish to remain under Dr. Dow's treatment a few days or weeks, will be furnished with pleasant rooms, and charges for board moderate.

Medicines sent to all parts of the country, with full directions for use, on receiving description of your cases. Dr. Dow has also for sale the French Capottes, warranted the best preventive. Order by mail. 3 or $1 and a red stamp.

CAUTION

TO FEMALES IN DELICATE HEALTH.

DR. DOW, Physician and Surgeon, 7 and 9 Endicot street, Boston, is consulted daily for all diseases incident to the female system. Prolapsus Uteri, or fall ing of the Womb, Fluor Albus, Suppression, and other menstrual derangements, are all treated upon new pathological principles, and speedy relief guaranteed in a very few days. So invariably certain is the new mode of treatment, that most obstinate complaints yield under it, and the afflicted person soon rejoices in perfect health.

Dr. Dow has no doubt had greater experience in the cure of diseases of women and children, than any other physician in Boston.

Boarding accommodations for patients who may wish to stay in Boston a few days under his treatment.

Dr. Dow, since 1845, having confined his whole attention to an office practice, for the cure of Private Diseases and Female Complaints, acknowledges no superior in the United States.

N. B.—All letters must contain four red stamps, or they will not be answered.

Office Hours from 8 A. M. to 9 P. M.

CERTAIN CURE

IN ALL CASES, OR NO CHARGES MADE.

Dr. Dow is consulted daily, from 8 a. m. to 8 p. m., as above, upon all difficult and chronic diseases of every name and nature, having by his unwearied attention and extraordinary success gained a reputation which calls patients from all parts of the country to obtain advice.

Among the physicians in Boston, none stand higher in the profession than the celebrated DR. DOW, No. 7 Endicott street, Boston. Those who need the services of an experienced physician and surgeon should give him a call. P. S.—Dr. Dow imports and has for sale a new article, called the French Secret. Order by mail. Two for $1 and a red stamp.

HEIMSTREET'S
INIMITABLE HAIR RESTORATIVE.
IT IS NOT A DYE,

But restores gray hair to its original color, by supplying the capillary tubes with natural sustenance, impaired by age or disease. All instantaneous dyes are composed of lunar caustic, destroying the vitality and beauty of the hair, and afford of themselves no dressing. Heimstreet's Inimitable Coloring not only restores hair to its natural color by an easy process, but gives the hair a

Luxuriant Beauty,

promotes its growth, prevents its falling off, eradicates dandruff, and imparts health and pleasantness to the head. It has stood the test of time, being the original Hair Coloring, and is constantly increasing in favor. Used by both gentlemen and ladies. It is sold by all respectable dealers, or can be procured by them of the commercial agent, D. S. Barnes, 202 Broadway, N. Y. Two sizes, 50 cents and $1.

HAGAN'S MAGNOLIA BALM.

This is the most delightful and extraordinary article ever discovered. It changes the sun burnt face and hands to a pearly satin texture of ravishing beauty, impar ing the marble purity of youth, and the distingue appearance so inviting in the city belle of fashion. It removes tan, freckles, pimples and roughness from the skin, leaving the complexion fresh, transparent and smooth. It contains no material injurious to the skin. Patronized by Actresses and Opera Singers It is what every lady should have. Sold everywhere.

The sale of the Plantation Bitters is without precedent in the history of the world. There is no secret in the matter. They are at once the most speedy, strengthening health-restorer ever discovered. It requires but a single trial to understand this. Their purity can always be relied upon. They are composed of the celebrated Calisaya Bark, Cascarilla Bark, Dandelion, Chamomile Flowers, Lavender Flowers, Wintergreen, Anise, Clover-buds, Orange-peel, Snake-root, Caraway, Coriander, Burdock,

S.—T.—1860—X. &c.

They are especially recommended to clergymen, public speakers, and persons of literary habits and sedentary life, who require free digestion, a relish for food, and clear mental faculties.

Delicate females and weak persons are certain to find in these Bitters what they have so long looked for.

They purify, strengthen and invigorate.
They create a healthy appetite.
They are an antidote to change of water and diet.
They overcome effects of dissipation and late hours.
They strengthen the system and enliven the mind.
They prevent miasmatic and intermittent fevers
They purify the breath and acidity of the stomach.
They cure Dyspepsia and Constipation.
Mhey cure Diarrhea, Cholera and Cholera Morbus.
They cure Liver Complaint and Nervous Headache

They are the best Bitters in the world. They make the weak man strong, and are exhausted nature's great restorer.

NEAR ACQUIA CREEK, March 4th, 1863.

Owing to the great exposure and terrible decomposition after the battle of Antietam, I was utterly prostrated and very sick. My stomach would not retain medicine. An article called Plantation Bitters, prepared by Dr. Drake, of New York, was prescribed to give me strength and an appetite. To my great surprise they gave me immediate relief. Two bottles almost allowed me to join my regiment. * * * * * I have since seen them used in many cases, and am free to say, for hospital or private purposes I know of nothing like them.

REV. E. F. CRANE, Chaplain.

Letter from the Rev. N. E. GILDS, St. Clairsville, Pa.:

GENTLEMEN:—You were kind enough, on a former occasion to send me a half dozen bottles of Plantation Bitters for $3 50. My wife having derived so much benefit from the use of these Bitters, I desire her to continue them, and you will please send us six bottles more for the money inclosed.

I am, very truly, yours,
N. E. GILDS, Pastor Ger. Ref. Church.

SOLDIERS' HOME, SUPERINTENDENT'S OFFICE,
CINCINNATI, OHIO, Jan. 15th, 1863.

* * * * * * * *

I have given your Plantation Bitters to hundreds of our noble soldiers who stop here, more or less disabled from various causes, and the effect is marvelous and gratifying.

Such a preparation as this is I heartily wish in every family, in every hospital, and at hand on every battle field.

G. W. ANDREWS, Superintendent.

Dr. W. A. CHILDS, Surgeon of the Tenth Vermont Regiment, writes:—"I wish every soldier had a bottle of Plantation Bitters. They are the most effective, perfect, and harmless tonic I ever used."

WILLARD'S HOTEL,
WASHINGTON, D. C., May 22d, 1863.

GENTLEMEN:—We require another supply of your Plantation Bitters, the popularity of which daily increases with the guests of our house.

Respectfully, SYKES, CHADWICK & Co.
&c., &c., &c., &c., &c.

Be sure that every bottle bears the fac simile of our signature on a steel plate label, with our private stamp over the cork.

☞ The extraordinary success of Dr. Ham's Invigorating Spirit, seems to stir up an army of Tonics, Bitters, and Cure Alls; but as a general thing they are like the Morning Glory—look very fine in the morning but wilt before the day has past. The Dr [illegible] before the public for years; his Dyspepsia Remedy has been tested and not found wanting; it acts on the Liver, Stomach, Head and the whole system; it is good at all times and for everybody.

Hunnewell's Great Remedies.

WHAT EVERY FAMILY SHOULD HAVE IN THE HOUSE AND WHY;

☞ They should have HUNNEWELL'S UNIVERSAL COUGH REMEDY, because it effectually cures Colds, Whooping and Common Coughs Sore Throat, Hoarseness, and is the most simple and perfect Soothing Syrup in the world. For old and young, by day and night, it may be used with the greatest freedom, and three-fourths of the deaths by Consumption stopped.

They should have HUNNEWELL'S TOLU ANODYNE, because it is a perfect remedy for Neuralgia, Nervous or Sick Headache, Tooth, and Earache, Pain in Stomach, or Bowels, Genuine Cholera Morbus, Rheumatism, Distress after Eating, Nervousness, Hysteria, and the chief of all causes of disease, and Insanity, Loss of Sleep. Its character, though active, is simple; its action in perfect conformity to nature; its end cure, or relief.

For the pains in Monthly Menstruation a perfect relief, while nature's after work is not disturbed, and one of the most important points in Medicine.

They should have HUNNEWELL'S ECLECTIC PILLS, because with seldom but a single Pill for a dose all derangements of the Stomach and Bowels are cured. They cure Indigestion, Dyspepsia, Headache, when caused by foul stomach, Loss of Appetite, Biliousness, so often and so erroneously treated with Mercurials, Jaundice. For Worms a sure cure.

They act simple, assist nature, do not make a Pill Box of the stomach, as is the most fatal error of taking so many Pills at a dose: and then, what is important to every Family and every Purse, one bottle goes as far as two or three of what is ordinarily sold.

The confidence of all is asked to test
Hunnewell's Universal Cough Remedy.

Selected Poetry.

A DEAD YEAR.

BY JEAN INGELOW.

I took a year out of my life and story—
A dead year, and said, "I'll hew thee a tomb!
'All the kings of the nations lie in glory;'
Cased in cedar, and shut in a sacred gloom;
Swathed in linen, and precious unguents old;
Painted with a cinnabar, and rich with gold.

"Silent they rest, in solemn salvatory,
Sealed from the moth and the owl and the flitter-mouse—
Each with his name upon his brow,
'All the kings of the nations lie in glory,
Every one in his own house;'
Then why not thou?

"Year," I said, "thou shalt not lack
Bribes to bar thy coming back;
Doth old Egypt wear her best;
In the chambers of her rest?
Doth she take to her last bed
Beaten gold, and glorious red?
Envy not! for thou wilt wear
In the dark a shroud as fair;
Golden with the sunny ray
Thou withdrawest from my day;
Wrought upon with colors fine,
Stolen from this life of mine;
Like the dusty Lybian kings,
Lie with two wide open wings
On thy breast, as if to say,
On these wings hope flew away.
And so housed, and thus adorned,
Not forgotten, but not scorned,
Let the dark forevermore
Close thee when I close the door;
And the dust for ages fall
In the creases of thy pall;
And no voice nor visit rude
Break thy sealed solitude."

I took the year out of my life and story,
The dead year, and said, "I have hewed thee a tomb!
'All the kings of the nations lie in glory;'
Cased in cedar, and shut in sacred gloom;
But for the sword, and the sceptre, and diadem,
Sure thou didst reign like them."
So I laid her with those tyrants old and hoary,
According to my vow;
For I said, "The kings of the nations lie in glory,
And so shalt thou!"

ROSES A LUXURY OF THE ANCIENTS.—To enjoy the scent of roses, at meals, an abundance of rose leaves was shaken on the table, so that the dishes were completely surrounded. By an artificial contrivance, roses, during meals, descended on the guest from above. Heliogabalus, in his folly, caused roses to be showered down upon guests in such quantities that a number of them, being unable to extricate themselves, were suffocated in flowers. During meal times, they reclined upon cushions stuffed with rose leaves, or made a couch of the leaves themselves. The floor, too, was strewn with roses, and in this custom great luxury was displayed. Cleopatra, at an enormous expense, procured roses for a feast which she gave to Antony, had them laid two cubits thick on the floor of the banquet room, and then caused nets to be spread over the flowers, in order to render the footing elastic. Heliogabulus caused not only the banquet rooms, but also the colonades that led to them, to be covered with roses, interspersed with lilies, violets, hyacinths and narcissi, and walked about upon the flowery platform.

AN ARKANSAS HERO.

Some three or four years after the admission of Arkansas into the Union, a young man, whom we shall call Arthur Granger, a native of Ohio, went to Little Rock to set up the practice of law. He was then about three-and-twenty years of age, small, slender, and effeminate-looking, with light hair, almost beardless face and dark blue eyes. His dress, though not exactly foppish, was altogether too fine, neat and precise to suit the taste of men who had always seemed prepared for roughing it in the back woods, as most of them had done at one time and another; and he was moreover a stranger from the North, who had perhaps come to display his learning and pick up their money; so that, from the very first, he was regarded with suspicion, aversion and contempt.

The first six or eight months he got no practice whatever, notwithstanding he was regular at his office, or the court-room, watching, waiting, hoping; and he was about to give up in despair, and to go to some other locality, when one day a tall, lank individual came shuffling into his apartment, and, after surveying him keenly from head to foot, said, as he helped himself to a seat:

'See here, young hop-thumb, is there anything in you?'

'Yes—my breakfast,' replied the young lawyer, with a quiet smile.

The latter stared at him a few moments and seemed undetermined whether to consider the reply a joke or an insult,—he finally grinned at it, and proceeded:

'I mean, do you know anything?'

'O, yes, sometimes,' answered the lawyer, pleasantly. 'I know the difference between chalk and cheese,—a horse and horse-block.'

'Can you write?'

'I have written my name before now.'

The stranger drew a newspaper from his pocket, opened it deliberately, pointed out an article, handed it to the young man, and said:

'Read that!'

'Aloud?'

'Yes.'

The young lawyer complied, and read a tirade, of the most scandalous and scathing nature, against one Miles Gregory, the Democratic candidate for the State Legislature.

'Well,' demanded the stranger, when he had finished the article, 'what do you think of that?'

'It is pretty severe.'

'I believe you. Do you 'spect thar's another man in the State of Arkansas that can write as scorching a thing against the Whig candidate?'

'If there were facts to justify it, I doubt not such an article might be produced,' replied the young lawyer.

'To thunder with your facts,' cried the other excitedly; 'facts ha'n't got nothing to do with politics! thar's no facts in that; it's all lies, from beginning to end! I'm Miles Gregory, and I ought to know. I'll give fifty dollars to anybody that'll write as savage a thing as that agin Joe Perrin.'

'When do you want it?'

'Now—to-day.'

'Without regard to facts?'

'They haven't got nothing to do with it, I tell you.'

'Very well, if you will call in a couple of hours I will show you something to match it.'

'If you'll do it or half on't,' said Miles Gregory, rising to leave, 'I'll put you in a way to make a fortune.'

He went out and returned at the appointed time, and the young lawyer had the article ready. Without descending as low as the model in vulgar epithets, it was even more terrible in its withering sarcasm. Gregory could hardly contain himself while the young lawyer was reading it, and as soon as he was done he bounded from his seat with a yell of triumph, and, seizing the delicate little hand of the writer, almost crushed it between his great bony fingers.

'You've done it, young man,' he cried with an oath, 'and you'll soon have something better to do than sit here staring at blank bills. Here is your money—the only difference is, I've concluded to make it a hundred instead of fifty—but that's my business, so none of your nonsense.'

He rushed out with a triumphant laugh, leaving the young lawyer to ruminate upon his first fee, and the possible consequences of becoming a conspicuous individual in that fighting region.

The next week the article appeared in the Democratic paper, and created quite a sensation. One political party was delighted, and another chagrined. Who was the author? Nobody knew. The quid nuncs were puzzled. Every known writer's style was duly considered, but something in the article differed from each. Could it be that a new Junius had come among them? The Democrats were anxious to find out, to do honor to their champion; and the Whigs that they might contrive a way to silence him. Nobody suspected the beardless lawyer. In fact, if he had openly avowed, the chances were that he would have been kicked for a boasting liar.

Three individuals only knew anything about it—the writer, the candidate, and the proprietor of the paper in which it appeared. To the latter, indeed, was due the fact that the secret had been kept so close. The moment he read the article he acknowledged the power of the writer and demanded his name. Gregory gave it, surprised. He had seen the puny lawyer, he said, but never dreamed there was any such stuff in him.

'How did you find him out, Gregory?'

'By a blunder. I got into his office by mistake, and then something just kind of struck me to try the thing on a sort of experiment, you know.'

'Does any one else know anything about it?'

'Nary a one.'

'Then see here—this must be a secret of honor between us I am going to secure that young man to write leaders for me—he is worth his weight in gold—but nobody must know who he is, and I am almost certain he will never be suspected. Remember, Gregory, if the secret gets wind I shall blame you.'

'All right, I'm dumb.'

That very day Authur Granger was secured at a handsome salary, to write such articles as the editor required from week to week; and it was further arranged that the matter should be kept a profound secret; and to avoid suspicion the parties were only to meet when absolutely necessary, and then either clandestinely or openly as strangers.

The effect of the first article we have already mentioned; but when, the succeeding week, some three or more of the same stamp appeared, if anything more caustic and cutting, directed against the whole party and individual members besides, the excitement increased, curiosity became eager, and wonder grew apace. And each succeeding week only added fuel to the flame. The Democrats grew triumphant and the Whigs furious; and when, the parties being nearly equally divided, the former carried the election by a respectable majority, the latter grew desperate, and raved like madmen, denouncing the unknown writer as a liar and a coward, and making a standing offer of a thousand dollars to any one who would disclose his name.

'If you are discovered, Granger, you will have to quit this region on short notice,' said the proprietor of the Democratic paper to the lawyer, during one of their stolen interviews.

'Why so?' asked the latter, quietly.

'Because your life will be in danger.'

'Will they murder me?'

'At least they will insult and challenge you, and you will have to either run or fight.'

'Suppose I fight?'

'And be killed?'

'I must take my chance of course. I shall be entitled to the choice of weapons at least.'

'What then? What can you do?—You are not heavy enough for the bowie, and your antagonist will be a dead shot.'

'By your leave he may be shot dead himself.'

'Ah! can you shoot!'

'With one of my hair triggers I can snuff a candle at ten paces.'

'You amaze and delight me. Where did you learn to handle the pistol with so much skill?'

'For the last two months I have been practising daily in the woods just out of the town, preparing for such a crisis in my fate, which I have all along foreseen.'

'By heavens!' exclaimed the other, grasping the young man's hand with increased admiration, 'I am just beginning to know you, and I am proud of your acquaintance. To tell you the truth, I never supposed there was any more fight in you than in a girl of sixteen; and for a young man to be challenged in this region, and refuse to fight, is to be forever disgraced; not even the genius of a Shakspeare, with the wisdom of a Solomon, could give you any more influence over these people; therefore I believed you would be compelled to leave the State.'

'Mr. Bradley,' rejoined the young man, 'I hope and pray it may never be my fortune to meet an antagonist on the so-called field of honor;—but even should such be the case, mark me—I may fall, but he will die. Let us change the subject.'

The crisis came. Accidentally the secret was discovered, and in less than twenty-four hours Arthur Granger received three challenges to mortal combat from different parties. He called upon Mr. Bradley, his employer, to act as his friend and second, and assured him that he was ready to fight them all.

'My dear friend,' said the journalist, 'this is a serious business. These men are all practised duelists, and considered dead shots. They intend to kill, that is certain; and, to be candid, I see little hope of your escaping all three. I am not sure that I should accept more than one challenge at present.'

'Oh yes—all,' returned the young man, positively. 'Please arrange the first affair for sunrise to-morrow morning—second for half an hour later still. If I escape the first, I shall be in time for the second; and if the second, the third will not be kept waiting. If I fall before I give either a chance, of course I shall be excused.'

The meetings were arranged according to the wish of Granger, and at the appointed hour he was on the gronnd with his friend; and so were his antagonists with theirs—and so in fact, was half the excited town of Little Rock, who had come out to witness the fight, see fair play, and, if need be, take a hand on both sides—a part as friends and foes.

The preliminaries being arranged, the principals of the first duel were placed ten paces apart. There were a few moments of breathless suspense, and the signal was given. In an instant the arms of the combatants were raised like two levers of iron, and the next there was a blended report. Young Granger stood firm, with the blood trickling down his face from a slight furrow in his forehead, ploughed by the ball of his antagonist, who already lay stretched out on the earth, shot through the brain.

'Hit, but not hurt!' said the young lawyer, coolly running his finger across the wound, as his excited friends rushed up to him.

Such skill and courage were enough for even fighting Arkansas. A hundred stalwart men gathered around our delicate little hero, and swore his life should not be put in jeopardy again to please himself or anybody else; and placing him upon their shoulders they bore him off into the town in triumph, his two waiting antagonists nowise regretting the whim of the spectators, that had saved them from standing before such a fatal marksman.

From that day forth the star of Arthur Granger was in the ascendant. He subsequently married a lady of fortune, and rose to the highest honors the State could give him.

Though the names given above are all fictitious, there are many persons living in the North who have heard the voice of Arthur Granger in the halls of our National Congress.

SWINE.—The high price of corn will reduce the number of pigs in this country, keeping down the price of pork for the present, but giving it an upward look for the future. Recently 122,000 hogs were received in the single city of Chicago, to be slaughtered. The Chicago Tribune says:—

"Only think of what a grunting and squalling 122,000 hogs, if all put in one field, would make; the confusion of Babel was nothing in comparison. Allowing each hog to measure six feet, and all strung out in one continuous line, they would form a hog telegraph 140 miles long, and the grunt uttered forth here would be answered in Kalamazoo far in advance of the mails; and if each hog were made up into sausages, and all joined together in a continuous line, they would make 5,800 miles of 'bolognas,' enough to girt the continent from San Francisco to New York, and give besides a small piece to grace the head of every beer barrel on the route."

MASONIC LOVE AND DISUNIONISM.

Since the war commenced, we have heard of many instances of kindness exhibited on the part of Masonic brethren. These acts have occurred on the fields of battle, in the hospitals, and in the dungeons of the Southern Confederacy, as well as in the prisons of the loyal North. Men who have fought against each other on bloody fields have allowed their revengeful passions to vanish at a word or sign, uttered or made by a Masonic brother, after the strife was over, or while it continued; and many a delicacy, has the Union man received at the hands of the Confederate, while languishing in a Southren prison, simply because brothers do not always forget their obligations; and it is one of the charms of Masonry that such should be the case.

A few evenings since we heard an officer, now in high command in the armies of the West, relate some of his experiences when thrown in contact with Southern Masonic brethren, and we may as well state, in this connection, that the gentleman from whom we received our information declared that he never was deceived or betrayed by a Masonic brother. But we will let him tell his own story, which was as follows:

"I had command of a station on the Mississippi, not far from Vicksburg, but before that place was taken. Two of my regiments were colored troops, and made good soldiers, after they had received the necessary amount of drill and discipline. Of course, having negro troops at the station was sufficient to render it a marked place in the minds of the rebels, and one morning they came down upon us, two or three to our one; but we beat them back, and after they had retired, a negro brought me word that a secessionist was scouting on the banks of the river and desired to speak with the commanding officer. I sent out and had the fellow brought in. He was the worst looking man that I had ever seen—ill clad, hungry and dirty; yet that man was a Mason, a companion, and a templar, and at the commencement of the rebellion was an eminent lawyer in Arkansas. He was a Union man, but had been driven into the rebel ranks, and had taken the first opportunity to desert.

"Well, I questioned that brother on subjects which I was well acquainted with, and the answers I received were perfectly correct; and then I touched on other matters and learned that throughout Arkansas there were secret societies, formed for the purpose of restoring the Union, and only hoping for an opportunity to do so, for certain death awaited them if their organization was discovered. The intelligence which he brought was so important, that I took the brother to General Grant, and every word which he uttered was credited and acted upon, and the results were sufficient to justify us in the course which we had taken.

"But I will give you another instance of the benefits of Masonry," continued the officer. "One of my surgeons was captured by a gang of Texan rangers.—They put a rope around his neck, and were about to hang him to the limb of a tree, when the surgeon made the grand hailing sign, little thinking that it would avail him, or be recognized; but to his surprise, the leader of the gang answered the sign, removed the rope from his neck, saved his life, treated him like a brother, and sent him into camp unharmed."

These are but two of the incidents which Masonry has produced during the war. No doubt thousands of others could be cited. It is pleasant to know that men, although enemies on the field, still remember their obligations when the strife is over. May such always be the case.—Flag of our Union.

LESSONS IN MUSIC.—What is a slur? Almost any remark one singer makes about another. What is beating time? Singing so fast that time can't keep up with you. What is a rest? Going out of the choir to get some refreshments.

☞ "Bill you scamp, if you had your due, you'd get a good whipping." "I know it daddy, but 'bills' are not always paid when they are due." The agonized father trembled lest his son should be suddenly snatched from him.

OUR BEST PARLORS.—Don't keep a solitary parlor, into which you go but once a month, with your parson or sewing society. Hang round your walls pictures which shall tell stories of mercy, hope, courage, faith and charity. Make your living room the house. Let the place be such that when your boy has gone to distant lands, or even when, perhaps, he clings to a single plank in the waters of the wide ocean, the thought of the old homestead shall come to him in his desolation, bringing always light, hope and love. Have no dungeon about your house—no room you never open—no blinds that are always shut.

☞ An incident growing out of this "cruel war" is related by the Chicago Post. A young man came from New York to Chicago, and fell in love. His cruel "parient" opposed the proceeding but the day was set; when, alas! the young man was drafted. The old man would not let him have the $300; so the lover had to go. The expectant wedding party assembled and waited, until a messenger arrived and told the sad tale of national and patriarchal despotism. It was then that the fiery spirit of the expectant bride flashed out in startling splendor. Looking through her tears, she nobly exclaimed:

"I don't keer a durn; there's a smart chance of other fellers in the world, I reckon. Dod rot his pictur, let's have some grub!"

☞ A London professor lectured recently on adulterations of food. He handed round coffee, which was pronounced excellent, then told the audience that they had been regaled with a mixture of bullock's blood, chicory, sheep's liver dried, and old coffee-grouts. He gave them capital porter, too, made of spirits of wine, gum arabic and burnt sugar.

☞ A physician examining a student as to his progress, asked him, "Should a a man fall into a well forty feet deep, and strike his head against one of the tools with which he had been digging, what would be your course if called in as a surgeon?"

The student replied, "I should advise them to let the man lie, and fill up the well."

☞ Law is like a country dance—people are led up and down it till they are tired. Law is also like a new fashion, people are bewitched to get into it. It is also like bad weather; most people are glad when they are out of it.

The Wizard.

WEDNESDAY, JANUARY 20, 1864.

LOOK OUT FOR YOUR OWN.

This is a good sentiment for a community, as well as for an individual. Those places thrive best where the people have a pride in the prosperity and up-building of their own neighborhood. Always let home labor, skill and trade have the preference over that of other places. So far as this, it seems to be at most a right to be claimed. It is only when there are positive advantages to be gained by trading elsewhere that a man should forsake those who are striving for a living in their own town or village. We know very well that the facilities for travelling tempt people to the great centers of trade to buy, and they often do this without reflection, and often without any special benefit. They fancy that goods must be cheaper and work done better, merely because of the distance they go. Why is it that a good Dry Goods store cannot be well sustained here? It is just because people prefer to run to Salem after everything they want in that line. They waste, by this means, both money and time, and Poor Richard says time is money. They pay 10 cents for fares, to buy a yard of tape, and lose or break up a half days' time. They should reflect that this course puts themselves and their neighbors to much inconvenience, for they thus discourage people who would be glad to keep up a good assortment at home.

The same reasoning will apply to mechanical business, and those who are thus among us striving to build up the place and improve their own condition, should have every encouragement to do so. Let our people bear these things in mind.

Our people should especially refrain from encouraging the vagrant pedlers who bring goods to their doors. There are pedlers of paper and stationery who ought to have the go-by, however Learned they may be.

Pictures.—In no way can we make our homes look more cheerful than by adorning the walls of our rooms with handsome pictures. They are always more attractive to a visitor than any other furnishing of a room, and the eye of the stranger is always first directed to these gems on the walls.

A fine opportunity is now offered to procure two splendid gems of art at a merely nominal price. They are the two beautiful historical pictures of the Departure of the Pilgrims from Europe, and their Landing in America. Mr. F. Poole has the agency for these and other splendid engravings, and subscriptions will be received at this office.

Legislative.—The House has made choice of Rev. David Bremmer, of Rockport, (Orthodox) for Chaplain. The committees were announced on Tuesday of last week. Wm. H. Little, of South Danvers, is Committee on County Estimates, and Chas. P. Preston, of Danvers, on Agriculture. Among the petitions we notice that of the city of Salem, for leave to introduce new water works into said city, and to take possession of the Salem and Danvers Aqueduct; and Wm. H. Little and others for a Horse Railroad from South Danvers to Lynn.

Town Meeting.—There will be a meeting of the legal voters in this town, on Monday, Jan. 28th, to see what action the town will take on the following petitions, now before the Legislature, viz: The petition of the city of Salem, for a supply of water. The petition of the Eastern Railroad Company, to consolidate the South Reading Branch Railroad with the Eastern. The petition of the Salem and South Danvers Railroad Company, for a charter for a road to Danvers. The petition for a Horse Railroad from South Danvers to Lynn.

Accepted.—We understand that Rev. Mr. Montgomery, of Cambridge, has accepted the invitation of the Unitarian Society in this place to supply their pulpit from and after the second Sunday in March. The invitation was extended to Mr. Montgomery several months since, but he felt compelled, on account of his health, to take a voyage to Fayal. With improved, but not confirmed health, this eloquent young divine ought, and we doubt not will, receive from the society all the encouragement and indulgence he may need.

Temperance.—The next quarterly session of the Essex South District Temperance Union will be held in this town in April next. Rev. Samuel Kelley, of Lynn, will be invited to deliver the address, with Rev. Stillman Bardon, of Rockport, as substitute.

☞ At the annual meeting of the South Danvers Fire Club, held on the 11th inst., the following gentlemen were chosen officers for the ensuing year:—Franklin Osborne, President; Joseph Jacobs, Nathaniel P. C. Patterson, Rufus H. Brown, Directors; Orlando E. Pope, Secretary.

DESTITUTION IN REBELDOM.

We hear much of destitution in the rebel States, and probably it will increase rather than diminish as the war continues. We annex a report of the state of the market in Richmond, in anticipation of what it will probably be about the first of March next.

Provisions. Pork, scarce; none in market, except one hog's harslet. This was monopolized by President Davis, who is to give a dinner to the members of his cabinet. A string of four dog meat sausages was taken yesterday at a price which has not transpired. Beef, plenty for the season. Shin bones may be had for $5 per ounce, Confederate currency. Mule meat, $30 per pound; Horse, $25.

Flour and Grain. None in first hands. The bag of flour taken from the Federal pickets is nearly gone, and jobbers are without a supply. Some of it was sold at $25 per lb., Confederacy, or 50 cents Federal currency. A whole barrel was on its way to Richmond, but it was captured by the Yankees. Indian meal is sold by jobbers at its equal weight in currency; a pound of meal for a pound of Confederate money.

Dry Goods. Very scarce. At an auction sale, one second hand shirt was put up and withdrawn, no one being willing to advance over $500 for it. A cotton handkerchief was struck off for $250. A pair of old socks sold for $200. A hoop skirt brought $800, supposed to be for the President's lady. A second hand calico dress was put up and three pecks of currency offered for it. It was offered for a bushel, and withdrawn.

Whiskey. Going down, especially at the saloons. Dealers dilute it to conform to the currency,—a teaspoonful to a gallon of water. This retails at $3 a glass, or 25 cents a smell.

Coffee. Very unsettled. The last two ounces of best rye, which came from New York by carrier pigeon, was seized for the President's table.

Milk. Same price as whiskey, but more diluted. All the cows have been seized for the army, but two. These are browsing in the principal streets, guarded by a regiment of soldiers. The man who attempted to steal milk from the brindle one yesterday, is condemned to be hung to-morrow.

Slaves. Nominal; unable to give quotations, as nothing is doing. A lot of likely field hands, and women and children were offered at Shute & Whipem's pen, but there were no bidders. The depressed state of the trade in negroes is owing to the knowledge they obtained of Lincoln's Proclamation. One fellow was severely whipped yesterday for calling the names of Massa Lincoln and Ben. Butler.

Monetary. Money is plenty in currency. It is, however, difficult to fix its value. One broker is known to have had a three cent piece, supposed to be real silver. At any rate, he was offered a large price for it in Confederate bonds, but they were refused. It was then seized by the Government and placed in the Treasury. It is to be applied to the reduction of the public debt.

Tobacco. Plenty, but it takes an immense sum to buy a little. The principal transactions are in second hand quids and cigar ends. The quids go rapidly at one dollar each, if but once used. Those used by the negroes go a shade less.

Accident.—On Tuesday of last week a sleigh from Lynn, in which were two young lads, was upset as it came around the corner of Main and Foster streets, the driver having lost all control of the horse, which was a nervous and high spirited animal. The horse broke the harness, and, with the sleigh, then went rapidly down Main street, sometimes on the sidewalk, where he came in contact with two ladies, knocking them down and rending the clothing of one of them to shreds—yet, strange to say, not doing them much bodily injury.

We are happy to say that the two lads—unlike some full grown men, who, in similar cases, have hastened away from the scene—behaved themselves most honorably, and called upon the ladies and their friends, expressing not their regrets, but urging them to receive remuneration for their injuries and losses. The younger, who was the driver at the moment of the accident, insisted upon having his father know all the particulars from the parties, and he entered fully into the feelings of his noble boy, and made full reparation. This lad, who appears not to be yet in his teens, develops early the traits of the true gentleman. He is the son of Peter Johnson, Esq., of Lynn.

Narrow Escape.—On Monday evening last, between eight and nine o'clock, a load of hay standing on the hay scales in this town, was discovered by Mr Eli F. Burnham to be on fire. On his approach to it, a person was seen to run from it, who probably set it on fire by carelessly lighting his pipe or cigar near it. The flames were put out before much damage was done.

☞ Carlyle says—"let every man reform himself, and he will then be sure that there is one rascal less in the world."

LADIES' SOLDIERS' AID SOCIETY.

By request, we hereby give a general statement of the doings of the society from the time of its formation in April, 1861, to January, 1864. At the commencement, the society labored almost exclusively for soldiers who enlisted from this town, and has always furnished hose to soldiers or their friends who have applied for them.

The following articles were forwarded in May, 1861, to the soldiers from this town belonging to the 5th Regiment, three months' volunteers, viz.: Forty flannel shirts; forty cotton, do.; forty pairs of drawers; forty pairs of hose; forty pocket handkerchiefs; forty towels; together with needles, thread, paper, tracts, and various other articles. During the same month the society provided those members of the Salem Light Infantry, who were residents or this town, with ten cotton shirts; ten pairs of woolen hose; ten pairs of cotton hose, ten pocket handkerchiefs; ten towels; hair brushes and stationery.

In July of the same year, the company under command of Capt. Sidney C. Bancroft, belonging to the 17th Regiment, and composed in part of citizens of this town, received from the society, ninety-five shirts; one hundred and one pairs of drawers; eighty-two havelocks; and a quantity of small bags containing needles, cotton, and other useful articles. In December, 1862, seventy-five pairs of hose, and fifty eight pairs of mittens were forwarded to the same company.

In August, 1861, the South Danvers members of the Essex Cadets received from the society twenty-seven shirts; seventeen pairs of drawers; ten pairs of hose, and thirty-three havelocks. In November of the same year—eighty pairs ot hose and forty-eight pairs of mittens were also sent to them.

In December, the society, at the request of Lieut. C. B. Warner of the 19th Regiment, made for the South Danvers men in his company—the materials being furnished—twenty-seven shirts and twenty-seven pairs of drawers. The society presented them with twenty-seven pairs hose and twenty-seven pairs of mittens.

Company C, 5th Regiment, which left for Newberne in September, 1862, received no aid from the society, as none was needed. A subscription, amounting to one hundred and seventy dollars, was raised for the purpose of procuring a flag, to be presented to the company, which they declined, preferring that the money should be placed in the keeping of the cashier of the Danvers Bank, subject to their disposal for future exigencies,—$120.00 of which still remains in his hands.

As Government provides liberally for our soldiers in the field, the society has, of late, principally directed its efforts to the relief of the sick and wounded in our hospitals, for whose benefit more than thirty barrels and boxes of supplies have been forwarded to various persons and places, viz.:—To Dr. Howe and Josiah Quincy, Jr., both members of the Sanitary Committee; to Mrs. Fales, of Washington, D. C.; to the Christian Commission; the Murfreesboro' hospital; the hospital at Point Lookout, Md.; the Post Hospital, Newbern, N. C.; and to the N. E. Women's Auxiliary Association, a branch of the Sanitary Commission.

The following are among the articles made and contributed by the society since its formation:—More than 200 flannel shirts; 537 cotton shirts; 93 under shirts; 610 pairs of drawers; 900 pairs of hose; 140 sheets; 525 pocket handkerchiefs; 435 towels; 150 pairs of mittens; 75 dressing gowns; 155 havelocks; 74 pairs of shoes; more than 100 blankets; 40 quilts; 3 coverlets, 288 rolls of bandages; 29 bottles of wine; 2 barrels of dried apples; 2 barrels of crackers; 2 pieces of mosquito net; one piece of cotton cloth.

Besides these, large quantities of second-hand clothing have been sent, and also a variety of miscellaneous articles, such as stationery, Bibles, tracts; lint, slings and cushions for broken limbs; bed and pillow ticks; wash bowls, mugs, sponges, soap; also condensed milk, concentrated coffee, tea, sugar, chocolate, broma, preserves, jellies, farina, corn starch, peaches, tomatoes, tamarinds, ginger cakes, apples; and comfort bags in great numbers.

The amount of money received by the society, thus far, is $1,662.09. Amount expended, $1,560.64.

In addition to the above, the avails of the South Danvers table at the late Fair in Boston for the benefit of the Sanitary Commission, amounted to upwards of $700.00.

PRAISEWORTHY ACTS.

Danvers, January 18th, 1864.

Mr. Editor,—The firm of E. & A. Mudge & Co. of Danvers, have long been famed for their reliable and systematic method of doing business; under which system they have evidently prospered, as we observe a large addition built on to their manufacturing establishment this fall.

But to make those things more evident and praiseworthy, they have been willing to show those in their employ, that they appreciate their services, and value them as all good employers do value those who do their labor.

When New Year's day came, that good old custom struck their minds—a token of respect to those we employ. Consequently, about $150 were kindly distributed in the establishment, which made all hands rejoice at such good features in their employers.

As the poet has told us, "Kind words never die," the female portion of their help thought kind actions should not, so on last Wednesday evening, they contrived in a kind of surprise party manner, to provide a handsome supper in the establishment, and invited the employed and the employers to join them in consuming the substantials, after which a good sociable time was spent, and all felt the harmony and kindness their employers had created among them.

As I believe such examples are worth imitating, I thought I would trouble you to bring it before the public, as they may be reminded in this locality it is time to begin.

Yours, very truly,

Hope.

☞ We publish the following acknowledgment from Major A. Parker Brown of the 40th Mass., as it must be gratifying to the friends of our soldiers in that regiment to know that they are receiving comforts from the north:

Camp of 40th Mass. Vols.,
Folly Island, S. C., Dec. 17, 1863.

L. B. Schwabe, Esq—Dear Sir: Pardon me for allowing the manifold duties of an officer in the field to prevent my acknowledging weeks ago the receipt of your gifts to the men of this regiment. I am deeply sensible of your interest in and kindness to those men who have left their homes to battle for the flag. If you could be eye witness to the pleasure excited by these attentions from you, you would be more than repaid for your exertions. For the package to myself I heartily thank you, and for those to my men, be assured of the liveliest gratitude and the deepest respect of

Yours very truly,

A. P. Browne,
Major 40th Mass. Vols.

Shopbreaking in Danvers.—On Thursday night last some thieves broke and entered the shoe manufactory of Ira P. Pope, in Danvers, and stole a case of shoes. A search warrant was issued the next morning and certain houses were searched, in which it was suspected the shoes had been concealed by the parties taking them. The search proved fruitless; but in the afternoon of the same day, 36 pairs of the shoes were, by accident, found in the Congregational meeting house shed.

On Saturday morning, two Germans, who were the persons on whom the strongest suspicion rested, and who came to town about a week ago, packed their trunks and left the place quite unexpectedly. They were, however, arrested in Salem and lodged in Salem Jail, where they are to await their trial. It is thought they are the guilty parties.

On Friday night last, a shoe manufactory at Danversport was entered and a case of shoes taken therefrom. The particulars we have not yet learned.

Public Meeting of the Bowditch Club.—The first public meeting of this association, for the season, was held at the Town Hall, in Danvers, on Thursday evening last. The exercises were of an interesting character, and gave great satisfaction to all present. The Bowditch Gazette contained some excellent articles, which were finely read by Messrs. Welch and Emerson. The following was the question for discussion:—"Resolved, that Abraham Lincoln should be re-elected to the Presidency of the United States." The discussion, if not able, was nevertheless enthusiastic. Most of those who volunteered to speak on the subject, spoke in favor of Lincoln's re-election.

George Peabody's Benefaction to the Poor of London.—The trustees of Mr. George Peabody's munificent gift of £150,000 to the poor of London have decided to appropriate the fund, or the larger part of it, to the erection of buildings in suitable localities to furnish lodgings for the poor. One of the proposed buildings has already been finished, and the lodgings are about to be let. It is four stories high, covering an area of 30,000 square feet.—It contains, besides stores upon the street, no less than 57 "dwellings" of one, two or three rooms each. Besides this first building, sites have been purchased for five others, and there are funds in hand for four more.—Boston Journal.

We learn that it is the design of the Trustees of the fund, with the sanction of Mr. Peabody, to build one of these houses at a time so that any improvements which may be suggested by previous experience may be adopted. The income of the stores and dwellings will be re-invested and used to put up new buildings, thus making the charity self-perpetuating. It is difficult to conceive of a more effectual mode of benefiting "future generations," than this of securing cheap and comfortable homes for the deserving poor.

☞ The Republicans in the legislature of Illinois, Indiana and Maine, are to have meetings on the 22d to re-nominate President Lincoln for another term.

VACCINATION.

It will be seen that the recent cases of varioloid have had the effect to draw attention to the importance of vaccination. The following action of the School Committee was prompted by the Selectmen, who drew their attention to the statute on that subject:

At a meeting of the School Committee, January 13th, 1864, it was Voted, That no scholar shall be allowed to attend any public school until such scholar has been vaccinated.

Voted, That the teacher be requested to inform the Committee of those scholars who have not been vaccinated, or do not become so within three days after receiving this notice.

Voted, That the Clerk cause the above votes to be printed, and that a copy of the same be sent to the teacher of each school.

Horse Training.—Prof. Rockwell drove through the streets of our town last Friday afternoon his celebrated trained stallion horse "Morgan Tiger," attached to a carriage, without bridle, reins, breeching or breast collar, using only a web surcingle to hold up the shafts; controlling him entirely by the whip and the word of command. He then delivered a lecture in the square on the subject of horsemanship generally, and went through with some performances with his horse, who seemed to understand every word said to him. After this the animal was taken to the stable of Mr. William Potter, where Mr. Rockwell opened a school for demonstrating his system of horsemanship, attended by some thirty-three scholars, particularly interested in horse flesh; and those who had animals seriously faulty brought them along to be cured; among whom was a horse of E. Hutchinson's, who wouldn't be blanketed or croupered; a horse of Joseph Poor's who had a bad habit of pulling back when in harness at times when it was not desirable; a colt of Wm. H. Felton's, who wouldn't allow any one to ride on his back or drive him single; a horse of Leonard Pratt's, who wouldn't be harnessed without leashing; and another one, belonging to the same individual, who had the very silly notion of being frightened at an umbrella. Professor Rockwell cured all these complaints, in a very short time, and the owners had the satisfaction of seeing their horses blanketed, croupered, and harnessed. Mr. Poor's horse didn't go back, but went straight forward. Mr. Felton's colt condescended to let a person stride its back; and Mr. Pratt's horse walked round the stable, with an umbrella suspended over its head, as grandly as you please. Master Wilkin's horse was also cured of the uncomfortable habit of biting something besides his food. Mr. Rockwell then gave a lecture on shoeing, having a skeleton foot to illustrate with, and showing what produced spavin and ringbone.

☞ Sunday, the 10th of January, completed the sixth month since Gen. Gilmore commenced operations on Morris Island, in the present attempt to capture Charleston. It was six weeks before, or about the first of June, that the rebels evacuated James Island. We shall have to admit that Charleston is the toughest of all. But defend it as the chivalry may, it will have to yield at last. There never was a place yet so strong that it could not be taken by some means. Gen. Gilmore has already advanced his works till shelling is an easy business, though it is surprising how non-effective that is. As yet but a few old houses have been burned, not so many during all the siege as were consumed by the fire two years ago.—Newburyport Herald.

School Sleighride.—The pupils of the grammar school in Ward Three, under the charge of Master Brickett, participated in a pleasant ride on Wednesday afternoon, in the sleigh-boat Pilot, drawn by four gray horses.—They visited South Danvers and Lynnfield, and had a grand time, arriving home in good season and prime condition.—Lynn Reporter.

☞ The Horse Railroad Co. had a new four-horse track-clearer on trial yesterday. It is so constructed as to move a snow plow in front designed to cut off the snow and ice from the rails, while an iron plate following each hind wheel throws or shovels the fragments and loose snow off on one side. It is ingeniously devised.—Observer, 16th inst.

TIME, AND ITS IMPROVEMENT.

Time, with its never-ending round of events and incidents is continually going into the past, irrecoverable. How apparent, then should it be to all, that the present moment ought to be improved so that the future shall bear creditable witness to that improvement, and that our first and highest aim in life should be to prepare and form a foundation on which to stand and succeed in the future. As we see year after year pass away in rapid succession, carrying in its resistless passage, one after another of our friends and relations from this to another existence, the feeling cannot but come over us that time is too precious to be allowed to run to waste unimproved; that in early life is the time to work earnestly to prepare ourselves for taking upon our shoulders the heavy responsibilities which will necessarily devolve upon us. In this, the nineteenth century, when we are surrounded by so many things, which will tend, by a proper use, to make us prosperous and happy—so many libraries, containing books treating on almost every subject possible to think of, so many great and good men, whose examples and precepts we should strive to imitate and profit by, there is no reason why we should not make our life beneficial to mankind.

How many, alas! do we see who do not seem in any way to appreciate this great gift of time, but pass along through life, utterly regardless of its improvement, seeking only their own pleasure and the furtherance of their own selfish ends and purposes; but can such a course result in success and happiness? Most certainly not! It will result in disappointment and sorrow, plunging those who will thus neglect attending to the great and true duty of life, into destruction and misery.

It is felt that in this short article, the justice which the subject demands is but imperfectly done, but it should be evident to all that, to attain happiness and success in life, it is indispensable that every available moment shall be made to produce its full amount of proper improvement.

HORRIBLE TRAGEDY.

A terrible tragedy occurred in Santiago, Chili, on the 8th ult. The large cathedral in that city took fire during the religious services in honor of the Immaculate Conception of the Virgin Mary, and at the time was densely crowded with people, mostly women and children.

A short time after half past seven the illuminations were lighted. The splendor of the pageant may be estimated from the fact that there were 20,000 lights. Of these 5,000 were paraphene lamps; one of which exploded, and the calamity so universally deplored then ensued.

As the building was covered with decorations composed of tissue, gauze and painted canvas, the flames spread with inconceivable rapidity over the face of the grand altar, mounting to the very roof. During these moments the scene in the body of the church was one of panic-stricken horror that completely baffles and defies all attempts at description.

In an instant the crowded assembly was overwhelmed wirh consternation. Those in the centre perceived the progress of the flames first, while those nearer the doors hoping the fire would be extinguished, were unwilling to risk losing their places; the consequence was that those from the centre, rushing to the doors, came in mass upon those near the doorways while yet seated or kneeling on the floor.

The latter were unable to rise in consequence; the former fell over them; the next behind fell on these, and so on until about the doors a wall of human bodies, entangled in one another's dresses, completely choked up every avenue of escape into the street. The fire meanwhile was progressing overhead as if through tinder. The paraphene lamps fell from aloft discharging their inflammable contents on the ill fated victims, wrapping them in an instant in flames. It is doubted if one in ten escaped.

At the end of an hour the fury of the conflagration had passed, and then of all that immense number of persons, for whom escape had been impossible, not a soul survived. The belfry had fallen, and so had much of the roof, while the walls were standing. And now imagination fails to depict the horrors of the occasion.

Where just before had been gathered the elite of the city, the female portion of the most refined families of the land, nothing remained but lifeless bodies blackened and charred in death; some in rows yet kneeling, some with the heads burned off, others with limbs consumed, while the rest of the body had not suffered even a lesion. * * * Thus matrons and maidens, their servants and children, had perished in a common ruin.

To some houses not a soul returned. Mothers with families of daughters had disappeared. Husbands vainly sought from street to street and house to house their wives; brothers, their sisters, and parents their children.

The remains of more than two thousand have been borne to the cemetery.—These in some isolated cases have been recognized, but the overwhelming mass have been perfectly undistinguishable.—For four days a crowd of laborers was at work extracting the remains, and nearly two hundred cart loads have been carried to the cemetery. Fifty men were there employed opening an immense excavation to receive them; a number that proved to be insufficient and had to be augmented.

Connected with the fire already recorded there are incidents narrated tha rise to the bitterest reflections. F stance, through the vestry of the c there was an opportunity for some cape. By this avenue a Miss Arm did escape, besides another lady then the door was closed in order to more room and freedom for removi ticles of furniture, even to benches dlesticks, crucifixes and so forth.

The priests are generally conde for imprudence in the decoration a lumination of the church, and hea ness in saving their own property two thousand persons were dying rible death.

Danvers.—A sad and fatal cas occurred in Danvers, on Friday afte last, by the burning of a little girl brief particulars of which are as fol It seems a little daughter of Mr. Tr Jeffs, eight years of age, while enter ing a party of her little friends, of a the same age, and during the temp absence of her mother at the village access to some matches, by which m the dress of the daughter of Mrs. took fire. She immediately rushed the house to the street, completely veloped in flames, followed by her panions, where her screams alarmed neighbors, who at once ran to her sistance, but she was so badly bu that she expired the same evening.—

Lynnfield.—The patriotism of town did not all leave with its quot Lieut. Levi S. Russell, one of its s being at home on a furlough last wee subscription was started, and Friday witnessed the presentation of an eleg sword, costing over half a hundred lars. The presentation speech was m by Miss Sarah F. Bryant. which was sponded to by Lieut. Russell. Lynnf has still two more Lieuts. in the fi who perhaps would be pleased to be membered.

Other items here are—the ladies m ing a quilt for the soldiers, helping fo soldier's fair in a neighboring to while some are asking "Why can't have a soldier's fair."—Gazette Cor.

Leap Year.—Are our fair read generally aware, says the Portland A vertiser, that they are endowed with culiar privileges this year—privileges founded on custom alone, but on law This year it is their enviable prerogat to make love to the gentlemen, and bachelor can refuse the offer of a la under a certain penalty. In an old book printed in the year 1606, where treats of "courtship, love and mat mony," we find the following: "A beit, it is now become a parte of t Common Laws, in regarde to the soc relaytions of life, that so often as eve be-sextile yeare dothe returne, the lady have the sole privileges, during the tir continueth, of making love unto the me which they may doe, either by wordes lookes, as unto them seemeth proper, an moreover no man will be entitled to th benefit of clergy who dothe refuse to a cept the offers of ladye, or who dothe any wise treat her proposals with slig or contumely."

Died—In South Danvers, Dec. 22, (kille instantly by the explosion of a steam boiler Mr. John Cutler, of Danversport, aged years and 6 months.

And when he was gone, every one who kne him declared he was an honest man. Wh more need be said of him? for is it not tr that "of such (also) is the kingdom of heaven."

And yet, no man was ever farther from th class who, as Dean Swift says, gain a universa reputation by answering yes, yes, to whoeve accosts them. He was ever the Party of Free dom; and his also the Church of Humanity and his fellowship was with every member that church, irrespective of creeds or cate chisms, of castes or complexions. His eye an ear were ever alive to suffering; and no pan did not touch his heart which reached his ob servation.

He was an Abolitionist more than thirt years, and if he did not patronize the Liberato all that time, the reason has nothing in it o reproach.

In feeble health all his life, he yet toile daily at the hardest part of a most laborio calling; working often, doubtless, when wealthier man, or one less scrupulous, would have kept his room. For intelligence, especially for a knowledge of history and the best poets, he had few superiors; none perhaps among the mechanics and workingmen in even as well read a neighborhood as was his own.—The munificence which endowed the "Peabody Institute" may feel itself richly rewarded in supplying food to one such hungering and yet appreciating mind; while Shakspeare and Milton, Hume and Macaulay, Prescott and Bancroft may well be proud of such a disciple.

He leaves a most devoted and affectionate wife to mourn a loss of its kind, not often equalled in the annals of human woe.

But there is another, an invalid sister, helpless now for twenty-seven years, his constant care by day and charge by night, whose loss can never, never be repaired, below the skies. And yet, would any learn a lesson of true Christian resignation, nay, of holy heroism, of high and divine fortitude, let him go to her bedside. I went; and I returned, humbled indeed, but instructed as perhaps never before. Who, with such an example before him, needs other assurance that to the exalted soul, every day's strength is equal to every day's suffering? The sudden departure of our noble friend has cast a dark shadow over a large community.—But none doubt that the loss here is, to him, all that is great and glorious in immortality.—Boston Liberator.

Art and Commerce on the Carpet.—When Nature spreads her carpet of snow upon the ground, good housekeepers begin to find out the importance of having well carpeted rooms, and keeping them economically protected. At such seasons, any deficiency of supply is injurious to health, and any under exposure of elegant carpetings would be ruinous to any but a millionare. In Boston, the proper course is to call in and hold a consultation with the obliging salesmen who are sure to be found with the New England Carpet Company, at No. 75 Hanover street. This enterprising establishment stands confessedly as the leader of its class upon this continent, and the proprietors are, this season, actually retailing at importers' prices, in order to encourage trade and maintain its usual pre-eminence. We suppose that selling only for cash, on the one-price system, enables them thus to manage their immense business. Their assortment is quite tempting in richness, and almost bewildering in variety. A wholesale customer is sure to find all the articles needed, and a retail customer is also sure to find just exactly what the house wants, although, perhaps, unknown to the purchaser previously. The most exquisitely beautiful foreign articlos, and the latest productions of American ingenuity, may here be found side by side, leaving purchasers to suit their own ideas, means, and general circumstances, governing the premises intended for decoration. Crossley's Improved Electrotypes range up alongside of the very best English Velvets, Brussels, Tapestries, etc. All these first-class carpets are of the most modern styles, an important consideration since the recent improvements in carpet manufacture among all civilized nations. The New England Carpet Company sell right away, any invoice, be it large or small, as soon as the goods arrive, and never hold on for a rise in the market, as their sources of supply are universal among carpet-manufacturing nations.

In Medallions, Rugs, Mats, and all the choice etceteras of household elegance, their assortment forms quite an exhibition, which all visitors to Boston should not fail to attend. As prudence always goes with good taste, their appliances for the sake of economy are also multifarious, such as oil-cloth carpets with enamel finish, stair carpets, Dundees, crumb cloths, Kidderminsters, Three-Plys, Ingrains, etc. Skilful upholsterers are especially retained by this establishment to cut, sew, and fit carpets. Just look in and see what the New Englend Company are doing for American elegance, at No. 75 Hanover street, Boston.—Propellor, in Hingham Journal.

Agents and Canvassers Wanted!

TWO ELLEGANT WORKS OF ART,
Just Issued!
The Departure of the Pilgrim Fathers for America, and The Landing of the Pilgrims in America.

Each Engraving 26 x 34 inches, price only $1,50 each, by mail. These constitute the finest pair of companion Engravings ever published in the United States. They were engraved by the most eminent steel plate Engraver in this country, JOHN C. McRAE, of New York City, and for artistic skill and high beauty were never excelled. Mr. McRAE is great in whatever he attempts, but in these gems he has outdone himself. He was determined to render them enduring monuments of his skill, and no pains or expense have been spared to make them perfect works of Art, and to far excel any similar works ever issued in this country. They are of the same size, and in every respect equal to, the elegant English Engravings of the same subjects, which cannot be bought in this country for less than twelve dollars and fifty cents, each copy.

We have undertaken a gigantic enterprise, and one in which we earnestly invite the cooperation of all lovers of the beautiful in Art. We must sell fifty thousand copies of each of these magnificent Engravings, and to accomplish this have placed the price low enough to bring them within the reach of every one.—Will you help us? And in so doing confer a life long pleasure on yourself! Such a grea value in Art for so little money, was never before offered, and nothing short of a very large sale will remunerate us. Such Splendid Parlor Gems are usually published at $5 or $10 each, but we have determined to appeal to the public, to sustain us in our efforts to bring them within the reach of every family in the land. The great historical value of these pictures—their great elegance and beauty, will render them of incalculable value to every home.

All honor to the "Mayflower Puritans"—the brave and true.

What sought they thus afar?
Bright jewels, bright jewels of the mine?
The wealth of seas, the spoils of war?—
They sought a faith's pure shrine!
Oh! call it holy ground,
The spot where first they trod—
They have left unchanged what there they

TEETH ON VULCANITE!
DR. J. H. BATCHELDER,
DENTAL SURGEON,
No. 20 Washington St., (near Eastern Railroad Depot), Salem, Mass.,

Is Licensed to make the New Patent Teeth on HARD RUBBER or VULCANITE, and from actual experience confidently recommends them for Strength, Beauty, and Cleanliness, to far surpass all other kinds of teeth;—are sure to fit the mouth; are much cheaper and better, being about half the price of teeth on Gold. Ill fitting Setts of Teeth on Gold can be exchanged for the Vulcanite, at very small expense. Specimens seen at Office. Teeth filled with Gold, Inserted, Extracted, and Children's Teeth Regulated—all with such care and gentleness as to be nearly painless,

Office Established in 1846.

PATENT VULCANITE DENTAL AGENCY.
NEW YORK.

This certifies that Dr. J. H. Batchelder is duly authorized by us to manufacture the PATENT VULCANITE or CORALITE GUMS AND PLATES, for Artificial Teeth, under the Goodyear Patents.

The public are cautioned against employing Dentists who have no license to manufacture such Plates and Gums, as patients using such Dentures made by infringers, are equally liable for damages with the maker or vender.

PULMONARY CONSUMPTION A CURABLE DISEASE!!!

A CARD.

TO CONSUMPTIVES.

The undersigned having been restored to health in a few weeks, by a very simple remedy, after having suffered several years with a severe lung affection, and that dread disease, Consumption—is anxious to make known to his fellow sufferers the means of cure.

To all who desire it, he will send a copy of the prescription used (free of charge,) with the directions for preparing and using the same, which they will find a SURE CURE for CONSUMPTION ASTHMA, BRONCHITIS, COUGHS, COLDS, &c. The only object of the advertiser in sending the Prescription is to benefit the afflicted, and spread information which he conceives to be invaluable; and he hopes every sufferer will try his remedy, as it will cost them nothing, and may prove a blessing.

Parties wishing the prescription will please address

REV. EDWARD A. WILSON, Williamsburgh,
Kings County,

BELL'S SPECIFIC PILLS—WARRANTED IN ALL CASES.— —Can be relied on! Never fail to cure! Do not nauseate! Are speedy in action! No change of diet required! Do not interfere with business pursuits! Can be used without detection! Upward of 200 cures the past month—some of them very severe cases. Over one hundred physicians have used them in their practice, and all speak well of their efficacy, and approve of their composition, which is entirely vegetable and harmless on the system. Hundreds of certificates can be shown.

BELL'S SPECIFIC PILLS are the original and only genuine Specific Pill. They are adapted for male and female, old or young, and the only reliable remedy for effecting a permanent and speedy cure in all cases of Spermatorrhea, or Seminal Weakness, with all its train of evils, such as Urethral and Vaginal Discharges, Gleet, the Whites, Nightly or Involuntary Emissions, Incontinence, Genital Debility and Irritability, Impotence, Weakness or Loss of Power, Nervous Debility, &c., &c., all of which arise principally from Sexual Excesses or Self-Abuse, or some constitutional derangement, and incapacitates the sufferer from fulfilling the duties of married life. In all sexual diseases, as Gonorrhea, Gleet, and Strictures, and in Diseases of the Bladder and Kidneys, they act as a charm! Relief is experienced by taking a single box.

Sold by all the principal druggists. Price $1.

They will be sent by mail, securely sealed, and confidentially, on receipt of the money, by

J BRYAN, M. D,
No. 76 Cedar street, New York,

Consulting Physician for the treatment of Seminal, Urinary, Sexual, and Nervous Diseases, who will send, free to all, the following valuable work, in sealed envelope:

THE FIFTIETH THOUSAND.—DR. BELL'S TREATISE on Self-Abuse, Premature Decay, Impotence and Loss of Power, Sexual Diseases, Seminal Weakness, Nightly Emissions, Genital Debility, &c., &c., a pamphlet of 64 pages, containing important advice to the afflicted, and which should be read by every sufferer, as the means of cure in the severest stages is plainly set forth. Two stamps required to pay postage.

December 9, 1863—1 yr.

IMPORTANT TO LADIES.—DR. HARVEY'S FEMALE PILLS have never yet failed in removing difficulties arising from obstruction, or stoppage of nature, or in restoring the system to perfect health when suffering from Spinal Affections, Prolapsus, Uteri, the Whites, or other weakness of the Uterine Organs. The Pills are perfectly harmless on the constitution, and may be taken by the most delicate female without causing distress—the same time they act like a charm by strengthening, invigorating and restoring the system to a healthy condition, and by bringing on the monthly period with regularity, no matter from what causes the obstruction may arise. They should, however, NOT be taken during the first three or four months of pregnancy, though safe at any other time, as miscarriage would be the result.

Each box contains 60 Pills. Price $1.

DR. HARVEY'S TREATISE on Diseases of Females, Pregnancy, Miscarriage, Barrenness, Sterility, Reproduction, and Abuses of Nature, and emphatically the Ladies' Private Medical Adviser, a pamphlet of 64 pages, sent free to any address. Six cents required to pay postage.

The Pills and book will be sent by mail when desired, securely sealed, and prepaid, by

J. BRYAN, M. D, General Agent,
No. 76 Cedar street, New York,

☞ Sold by all the principal druggists.

TERRIBLE DISCLOSURES—SECRETS FOR THE MILLION!—A most valuable and wonderful publication. A work of 400 pages, and 30 colored engravings. DR. HUNTER'S VADE MECUM, an original and popular treatise on Man and Woman, their Physiology, Functions, and Sexual Disorders of every kind, with Never-Failing Remedies for their speedy cure. The practice of Dr. Hunter has long been, and still is, unbounded, but at the earnest solicitation of numerous persons, he has been induced to extend his medical usefulness through the medium of his "Vade Mecum." It is a volume that should be in the hands of every family in the land, as a preventive of secret vices, or as a guide for the alleviation of one of the most awful and destructive scourges ever visited mankind. One copy, securely enveloped, will be forwarded free of postage to any part of the United States for 50 cents in post office stamps or 3 copies for $1. Address, post paid, DR. HOSTETTER'S
CELEBRATED
STOMACH BITTERS.

A pure and powerful Tonic, corrective and alterative of wonderful efficacy in disease of the

Stomach, Liver and Bowels.

Cures Dyspepsia, Liver Complaint, Headache, Debility, Nervousness, Depression of Spirits, Constipation, Colic, Intermittent Fevers, Cramps and Spasms, and all Complaints of either Sex, arising from Bodily Weakness whether inherent in the system or produced by special causes.

Nothing that is not wholesome, genial and restorative in its nature enters into the composition of HOSTETTER'S STOMACH BITTERS. This popular preparation contains no mineral of any kind, no deadly botanical element; no fiery excitant; but it is a combination of the extracts of rare balsamic herbs and plants with the purest and mildest of all diffusive stimulants.

It is well to be forearmed against disease, and, so far as the human system can be protected by human means against maladies engendered by an unwholesome atmosphere, impure water and other external causes, HOSTETTER'S BITTERS may be relied on as a safeguard.

In districts infested with Fever and Ague, it has been found infallible as a preventive and irresistible as a remedy and thousands who resort to it under apprehension of an attack, escape the scourage; and thousands who neglect to avail themselves of its protective qualities in advance, are cured by a very brief course of this marvelous medicine. Fever and Ague patients, after being plied with quinine for months in vain, until fairly saturated with that dangerous alkaloid, are not unfrequently restored to health within a few days by the use of HOSTETTER'S BITTERS.

The weak stomach is rapidly invigorated and the appetite restored by this agreeable Tonic, and hence it works wonders in cases of DYSPEPSIA and in less confirmed forms of INDIGESTION. Acting as a gentle and painless apperient, as well as upon the liver, it also invariably relieves the CONSTIPATION superinduced by irregular action of the digestive and secretive organs.

Persons of feeble habit, liable to Nervous Attacks, Lowness of Spirits and Fits of Languor, find prompt and permanent relief from the Bitters. The testimony on this point is most conclusive, and from both sexes.

The agony of BILIOUS COLIC is immediately assuaged by a single dose of the stimulant, and by occasionally resorting to it, the return of the complaint may be prevented.

As a General Tonic, HOSTETTER'S BITTERS produce effects which must be experienced or witnessed before they can be fully appreciated. In cases of Constitutional Weakness, Premature Decay and Debility and Decrepitude arising from OLD AGE, it exercises the electric influence. In the convalescent stages of all diseases it operates as a delightful invigorant. When the powers of nature are relaxed, it operates to re-enforce and re-establish them.

Last, but not least, it is The Only Safe Stimulant, being manufactured from sound and innocuous materials, and entirely free from the acid elements present more or less in all the ordinary tonics and stomachics of the day.

No family medicine has been so universally, and, it may be truly added, deservedly popular with the intelligent portion of the community, as HOSTETTER'S BITTERS.

HELMBOLD'S
GENUINE PREPARATIONS.

COMPOUND FLUID EXTRACT BUCHU, a Positive and Specific Remedy for diseases of the Bladder, Kidneys, Gravel, and Dropsical Swellings.

This Medicine increases the power of Digestion, and excite the Absorbents into healthy action, by which the Wtaery or Calcareous depositions, and all Unnatural Enlargements are reduced, as well as Pain and Inflammation.

—:0:—

HELMBOLD'S EXTRACT BUCHU.

For Weaknesses arising from Excesses, Habits of Dissipation, Early Indiscretion of Abuse, attended with the following symptoms;—

Indisposition to Exertion,	Loss of Power,
Loss of Memory,	Difficulty of Breathing,
Weak Nerves,	Trembling,
Horror of Disease,	Wakefulness,
Dimness of Vision,	Pain in the Back,
Universal Lassitude of the Muscular System,
Hot Hands,	Flushing of the Body,
Dryness of the Skin,	Eruptions on the Face,
Pallid Countenance.

These symptoms, if allowed to go on, which this medicine invariably removes, soon follows

Impotency, Fatuity, Epileptic Fits,

In one of which the patient may expire.

Who can say that they are not frequently followed by those "Direful Diseases,"

"INSANITY AND CONSUMPTION."

Many are aware of the cause of their suffering, BUT NONE WILL CONFESS THE RECORDS OF THE INSANE ASYLUMS.

And Melancholy Deaths by Consumption bear ample witness to the Truth of the assertion.

The Constitution once affected with Organic Weakness requires the aid of Medicine to Strengthen and Invigorate the system,

Which HELMBOLD'S EXTRACT BUCHU invariably does. A Trial will convince the mast skeptical.

FEMALES—FEMALES—FEMALES.

In many Affections peculiar to Females the EXTRACT BUCHU is unequalled by any other remedy, as in Chlorosis or Retention, Irregularity, Painfulness, or Suppression of Customary Evacuations, Ulcerated Schirrous state of the Uterus, Leuchorrhœa or Whites, Sterility, and for all complaints incident to the sex, whether arising from indiscretion or Habits of Dissipation, or in the

DECLINE OR CHANGE OF LIFE.

Take no more Balsam, Mercury, or unpleasant Medicines for unpleasant and dangerous diseases.

HELMBOLD'S EXTRACT BUCHU AND IMPROVED ROSE WASH CURES

SECRET DISEASES

In all their Stages, At little Expense.
Little or no change in Diet. No inconvenience.
And no Exposure.

It causes a frequent desire and gives strength to Urinate, thereby Removing Obstructions, Preventing and Curing Strictures of the Urethra, allaying Pain and Inflammation, so frequent in this class of diseases, and expelling all Poisonous, Diseased and wornout Matter.

Thousands upon Thousands who have been the Victims of Quacks, and who have paid heavy fees to be cured in a short time, have found they were deceived, and that the "POISON" has, by the use of "Powerful Astringents," been dried up in the system, to break out in an aggravated form, and perhaps after Marriage.

Use HELMBOLD'S EXTRACT BUCHU for all affections and diseases of the URINARY ORGANS, whether existing in MALE or FEMALE, from whatever cause originating and no matter of HOW LONG STANDING. Diseases of these Organs requires the aid of a DIURETIC. HELMBOLD'S EXTRACT BUCHU IS THE GREAT DIURETIC, and is certain to have the desired effect in all Diseases for which it is Recommended.

Evidence of the most reliable and responsible character will accompany the medicine.

TAKE NOTICE.

THAT Dr. Ham's Dyspepsia Remedy has been before the public for the past ten years. And in that time the people who have used it will vouch for the benefit they have derived from it. The character of his article and its reputation can also be obtained from the dealers who sell it, or have sold it for any length of time, to both of those, Dr Ham refers and is willing to stand the test. And also challenges any new compound to produce the same results, let alone delicacy of flavor, of his INVIGORATING SPIRIT, which for ITS EFFECTS UPON THE BILE, A TORPED LIVER, LOW SPIRITS, or when the blood is affected as seen by SKIN DISEASES or its ACTION UPON THE KIDNEYS, in fact for any person who is run down by the wear and care of this world will find relief in this old and well tried remedy.

Astonishing.

TO Dr. Ham, who has modestly put before the public his DYSPEPSIA REMEDY for ten years past, to look back and see the number of tremendous articles within that time, that have sprang up like a rocket, and gone down like the stick which guides it in its glorious assent. Some come out and claim to tell the public they use unknown Barks from South America, with any quantity of rum from the West Indias, &c, Dr Ham takes this opportunity to refer to the MEDICAL FACULTY here and everywhere that his article is in use, as to its qualifications, and challenges any one to produce a person, male or female, who has used it as directed, that will not speak favorable of it for DISORGANIZED STOMACH, Dyspepsia, loss of appetite, want of action of the Kidneys, as well as many other complaints that humanity are afflicted with.

To Ladies.

DR. HAM'S Dyspepsia Remedy is just the thing you require to remeve the langour caused by weakness and debility; it invigorates the system, causes the blood to take new life in its varied course through the system, in fact it gives tone to the system and will relieve and remove the thousand irregularities that from various causes you are afflicted with. For Dyspepsia it is a never failing remedy, it has stood the test of years, and we have yet to hear of its failing to give relief to the afflicted thousands who have received health and happiness by its use.

To Gentlemen.

DR. HAM knows that you do not always pay much attention to the many different articles put before you in the paper, but we would refer you to our agents who you will find are the respectable merchants and dealers, in regard to the Invigorating Spirit; some of them have sold it for years, and know well the reputation it has amongst those who have used it in assisting nature to eradicate diseases. It will renovate the system, as it acts directly on the blood, removing all obstructions to the general health, will cure Liver Complaints, Dyspepsia, Nervous Affections, Sour Stomach, Headache, Weakness, Loss of Appetite, as well as obstruction in the Kidney, Bladder or Urinary Organs. Try it. We will guarantee you will be satisfied with the result.

General Depot, 62 Liberty Street, New York. Sold by Weeks & Potter, 154 Washington Street, M. S. Burr & Co., 26 Tremont Street, G. C. Goodwin & Co., 11 Marshall Street, Boston; and in South Danvers by George E. Meacom, T. A. Sweetser, D. P. Grosvenor, Jr., Main Street; and by Druggists everywhere.

July 29, 1863 PARKER WEBBER,

Important to the Afflicted.

DR. DOW continues to be consulted at his office, Nos. 7 and 9 Endicott street, Boston, on all diseases of a

PRIVATE OR DELICATE NATURE.

By a long course of study and practical experience of unlimited extent, Dr. D. has now the gratification of presenting the unfortunate with remedies that have never, since he first introduced them, failed to cure the most alarming cases of

GONORRHŒA AND SYPHILIS.

Beneath his treatment, all the horrors of venereal and impure blood, Impotency, Scrofula, Gonorrhœa Ulcers, pain and distress in the regions of procreation, Inflammation of the Bladder and Kidneys, Hydrocele, Abcesses, Humors, frightful Swellings, and the long train of horrible symptoms attending this class of disease, are made to become as harmless as the simplest ailings of a child.

SEMINAL WEAKNESS.

Dr. D. devotes a great part of his time to the treatment of those cases caused by a secret and solitary habit, which ruins the body and mind, unfitting the unfortunate individual for business or society. Some of the sad and melancholy effects produced by early habits of youth, are Weakness of the Back and limbs, Dizziness of the head, Dimness of sight, Palpitation of the heart, Dyspepsia, Nervousness, Derangement of the digestive functions, Symptoms of Consumption, &c. The fearful effects on the mind are much to be dreaded; loss of memory, confusion of ideas, depression of spirits, evil forebodings, aversion of society, self-distrust, timidity, &c., are among the evils produced. Such persons should, before contemplating matrimony, consult a physician of experience, and be at once restored to health and happiness.

Patients who wish to remain under Dr. Dow's treatment a few days or weeks, will be furnished with pleasant rooms, and charges for board moderate.

Medicines sent to all parts of the country, with full directions for use, on receiving description of your cases. Dr. Dow has also for sale the French Capottes, warranted the best preventive. Order by mail. 3 or $1 and a red stamp.

CAUTION

TO FEMALES IN DELICATE HEALTH.

DR. DOW, Physician and Surgeon, 7 and 9 Endicot street, Boston, is consulted daily for all diseases incident to the female system. Prolapsus Uteri, or falling of the Womb, Fluor Albus, Suppression, and other menstrual derangements, are all treated upon new pathological principles, and speedy relief guaranteed in a very few days. So invariably certain is the new mode of treatment, that most obstinate complaints yield under it, and the afflicted person soon rejoices in perfect health.

Dr. Dow has no doubt had greater experience in the cure of diseases of women and children, than any other physician in Boston.

Boarding accommodations for patients who may wish to stay in Boston a few days under his treatment.

Dr. Dow, since 1845, having confined his whole attention to an office practice, for the cure of Private Diseases and Female Complaints, acknowledges no superior in the United States.

N. B.—All letters must contain four red stamps, or they will not be answered.

Office Hours from 8 A. M. to 9 P. M.

CERTAIN CURE

IN ALL CASES, OR NO CHARGES MADE.

Dr. Dow is consulted daily, from 8 a. m. to 8 p. m., as above, upon all difficult and chronic diseases of every name and nature, having by his unwearied attention and extraordinary success gained a reputation which calls patients from all parts of the country to obtain advice.

Among the physicians in Boston, none stand higher in the profession than the celebrated DR. DOW, No. 7 Endicott street, Boston. Those who need the services of an experienced physician and surgeon should give him a call. P. S.—Dr. Dow imports and has for sale a new article, called the French Secret. Order by mail. Two for $1 and a red stamp.

LYON'S KATHAIRON.

This delightful article for preserving and beautifyg the human hair is again put up by the original oprietor, and is now made with the same care, skill d attention, which first created its immense and precedented sales of over one million bottles an-ally! It is still sold at 25 cents in large bottles.
wo million bottles can easily be sold in a year when is again known that the Kathairon is not only the ost delightful hair dressing in the world, but that it anses the scalp of scurf and dandruff, gives the ir a lively, rich luxuriant growth, and prevents it om turning gray. These are considerations worth owing. The Kathairon has been tested for over elve years, and is warranted as described. Any y who values a beautiful head of hair will use the thairon. It is finely perfumed, cheap and valuable is sold by all respectable dealers throughout the

The Charleston Courier makes a timely suggestion recommending the attention of our government to naturalization and cultivation of Calisaya, for preservation of the health of our soldiers. This n Bitters of Dr. Drake, which, previous to our happy difficulties was found in most Southern

Hunnewell's Great Remedies.

WHAT EVERY FAMILY SHOULD HAVE IN THE HOUSE AND WHY;

☞ They should have HUNNEWELL'S UNIVERSAL COUGH REMEDY, because it effectually cures Colds, Whooping and Common Coughs Sore Throat, Hoarseness, and is the most simple and perfect Soothing Syrup in the world. For old and young, by day and night, it may be used with the greatest freedom, and three-fourths of the deaths by Consumption stopped.

They should have HUNNEWELL'S TOLU ANODYNE, because it is a perfect remedy for Neuralgia, Nervous or Sick Headache, Tooth, and Earache, Pain in Stomach, or Bowels, Genuine Cholera Morbus, Rheumatism, Distress after Eating, Nervousness, Hysteria, and the chief of all causes of disease, and Insanity, Loss of Sleep. Its character, though active, is simple; its action in perfect conformity to nature; its end cure, or relief.

For the pains in Monthly Menstruation a perfect relief, while nature's after work is not disturbed, and one of the most important points in Medicine.

They should have HUNNEWELL'S ECLECTIC PILLS, because with seldom but a single Pill for a dose all derangements of the Stomach and Bowels are cured. They cure Indigestion, Dyspepsia, Headache, when caused by foul stomach, Loss of Appetite, Biliousness so often and so erroneously treated with Mercurials, Jaundice. For Worms a sure cure.

They act simple, assist nature, do not make a Pill Box of the stomach, as is the most fatal error of taking so many Pills at a dose and then, what is important to every Family and every Purse, one bottle goes as far as two or three of what is ordinarily sold.

Selected Poetry.

THE ANCIENT TOMBS.

They rise on isle and ocean's shore,
They stand by lake and stream,
And garnish many a shepherd's tale,
And many a poet's dream.
Where darkly waves the northern pine,
Where bright the myrtle blooms,
And on the desert's trackless sands,
Arise the Ancient Tombs.

The hands that raised them, long ago
In death and dust have slept,
And long the grave hath sealed the founts
Of eyes that o'er them swept.
But still they stand like ocean rocks,
Amid the passing waves
Of generations, that go down
To their forgotten graves.

For many an early nation's steps
Have passed from hill and plain;
Their homes are gone, their deeds forgot,
But still their tombs remain;
They tell, when time hath left no trace
Of towers or storied page,
To latest times, how glorious was
Earth's early heritage.

They tell us of the lost and mourned,
When earth was new to tears,
The bard that left his tuneful lyre,
The chief that left his spears;
Ah! were their lights of love and fame,
On those dark altars shed,
To keep undimmed, through time and change,
The memory of the dead?

If so, alas for love's bright tears
And for ambition's dreams,
For earth has kept their monuments,
But lost the sleepers names;
They live no more in history's scroll
Or song's inspiring breath,
For altars raised to human fame
Have turned to shrines of death.

But from your silence, glorious graves,
What mystic voices rise,
That thus through passing ages speak
Their lessons to the wise!
Behold, how still the world rewards
Her brightest, as of yore:
For then she gave a nameless grave,
And now she gives no more.

SLEEP OVERCOMES ALL MEN.—The most violent passion and excitement cannot keep even powerful minds from sleep. Alexander the Great slept on the field of Arbela, and Napoleon upon that of Austerlitz. Even stripes and torture cannot keep off sleep, as criminals have been known to give way to it on the rack. Noises, which at first serve to drive it away, soon become indispensable to its existence; thus a stage coach stopping to change horses, wakes all the passengers. The proprietor of an iron forge, who slept close to the din of hammers, forges and blast furnaces, would wake if there was any interruption to them during the night; and a sick miller, who had his mill stopped on that account, passed sleepless nights until the mill resumed its usual noise. Homer, in his Iliad, elegantly represents sleep as overcoming all men, and even the gods.

☞ There was an advertisement in the London Times recently, for "a dog that answers to the name of Mustard." Not difficult to find such a dog! Mustard is the most natural companion to meat—Cut a sandwich for him, and you will see that Mustard, if he is a well-bred dog, will come running in as naturally as possible.

OVER THE RIVER.

Over the river they beckon to me—
Loved ones who've passed to the further side;
The gleam of their snowy robes I see,
But their voices are lost in the dashing tide.
There's one with ringlets of sunny gold,
And eyes the reflection of heaven's own blue:
He crossed in the twilight gray and cold,
And the pale mist hid him from mortal view.
We saw not the angels who met him there,
The gates of the city we could not see—
Over the river, over the river,
My brother stands waiting to welcome me!

Over the river the boatman pale
Carried another, the household pet;
Her brown curls waved in the gentle gale—
Darling Minnie! I see her yet.
She crossed on her bosom her dimpled hands,
And fearlessly entered the phantom bark,
We felt it glide from the silver sands,
And all our sunshine grew strangely dark;
We know she is safe on the further side,
Where all the ransomed and angels be—
Over the river, the mystic river,
My childhood's idol is waiting for me.

For none return from those quiet shores,
Who cross with the boatman cold and pale;
We hear the dip of the golden oars,
And catch a gleam of the snowy sail,
And lo! they have passed from our yearning hearts,
They cross the stream and are gone for aye,
We may not sunder the veil apart
That hides from our vision the gates of day;
We only know that their barks no more
May sail with us on life's stormy sea—
Yet somewhere, I know, on the unseen shore,
They watch, and beckon, and wait for me.

And I sit and think when the sunset's gold
Is flushing river and hill and shore,
I shall one day stand by the water cold
And list for the sound of the boatman's oar;
I shall watch for a gleam of the flapping sail—
I shall hear the boat as it gains the strand;
I shall pass from sight with the boatman pale,
To the better shore of the spirit land.
I shall know the loved who have gone before,
And joyful sweet will the meeting be,
When over the river, the peaceful river,
The Angel of Death shall carry me.

THE SPIRIT PHOTOGRAPH.

It was the evening of a disagreeable day, the 21st of March, of the past year. Rain and snow mingled together; but the very dreariness of the weather prompted me to call upon the Dudleys, who were suffering a most melancholy domestic bereavement. The servant admitted me without announcement, as I was the confidential friend of the family. Miss Dudley was sitting in a chair, with her head bowed over the arm; and, when she raised her face to greet me, I saw she had been weeping. Dudley was walking up and down, back and forth, with slow, dragging steps, his head sunk on his breast. I sat down beside Caroline, taking her hand in mine, for we were engaged to be married when the year of mourning had expired.

"This weather is enough to depress even the happy," I said; "but I wish that I had found you more cheerful. Do you not think that you ought to overcome, so far as possible, this trouble, for Dudley's sake? It is killing him."

"I know it; and that is what gives me so much pain. Of course, my grief is nothing compared with his. But it breaks my heart to see him so changed. I fear that, if he does not die outright, a worse calamity will happen. Sometimes I fear for his mind."

The disaster which had brought such irremediable ruin upon the house of Dudley was the loss of his wife. Her youth, her devotion to him, and the tragic manner of her death, were reasons apparent to all why his sorrow should be deeper than that of many others similarly bereaved. To me, who knew something of the characters of both, and of the intense love which seemed to blend their beings into one, it was almost a marvel that he survived her at all. When I had seen them together in the freedom of their own home the thought had more than once occurred to me that the existence of each was dependent upon that of the other. Yet she had perished, suddenly—been swept from him by a swift and terrible catastrophe, which had hardly allowed them a parting embrace.

In the autumn of 1862, Dudley had been called to Havana upon business. His wife persuaded him to permit her to accompany him. How well I remember that splendid autumn day upon which they sailed! Caroline and myself staid with them on the vessel until the last moment. How beautiful Mrs. Dudley looked as she waved her handkerchief to us from the deck, the bright color lighting up her always eloquent face into the loveliest animation! We had watched the noble vessel until it was but a speck out in the Narrows; then we had turned away with a sigh, half sad, and yet not sad. We had no presentiment of evil; and when her brother and his wife returned Caroline and I were to be married.

That vessel was fated never to touch the Cuban shores. When but twelve hours from Havana, at midnight, in the midst of darkness and storm, she was run into by another ship, and sank in fifty minutes. Thrown from his berth by the severity of the collision, Dudley seized his trembling wife under his arm, forcing his way through the disordered crowd from the cabins, already filling with water, to the upper deck. Here he maintained his place while the men and officers made efforts to launch the boats. The first of these filled and went down. The second was more successfully managed. A few women, to whom was given the first chance, were lowered into it by the light of lanterns, whose uncertain gleam made the tempest more appalling. Mrs. Dudley clung to her husband, begging to be allowed to stay with him until he, too, should be permitted to make this desperate effort at salvation. But, for once, her prayers had no influence with him. His desire for her safety overruled the pleading of love. With almost rudeness he tore away her clinging arms; the rope was fastened about her waist, and she was lowered down. The lantern threw a strange beam upon her pallid face, turned to him, as she swung off from the ship's side; and that was the last look he had of the countenance dearest to him. The few men who manned the oars put out to get away from the vortex which the vessel would make in sinking; a great wave rolled in upon it, and the cry went forth that the boat had gone down. Then Dudley, caring no more for his own life, jumped into the boiling sea. But the crew of the uninjured vessel picked him up before life was extinct, and he recovered consciousness to find himself in the cabin of the other ship. Until long after daylight the vessel lingered around the spot, until all hopes of rescuing any floating persons who might be clinging to pieces of the wreck were over; then it continued on its way to New York.

Over four months had elapsed, during which a ray of light had hardly penetrated Dudley's despair. His sister shared his darkened life, deferring our marriage, and withdrawing from society to devote herself to him. I was almost the only one, outside of their near circle of relatives, whom they cared to see.

At times, Dudley would be possessed of a strange fancy that his wife might not be dead—that she might have escaped, and be now in some remote portion of the world, whither some passing bark had carried her. Facts and theories were against him. The boat which they had seen overwhelmed by the waves had never been heard from. Another boat, which had put out last, had succeeded in landing upon an island coast, after three days of floating on the waste of waters; but in all human probability the first boat had gone down within five minutes after she left the ship's side. Sometimes Dudley would work himself into an alarming state of excitement, avowing his belief that his wife was alive. His only argument was, that if she were dead, she would certainly vouchsafe him some token, to put his mind at rest.

This evening of the 31st of March I felt light-hearted and joyous, despite the sad faces of my friends. My spirits had risen triumphantly over the weather—over the gloom induced by sympathy with others—even over the impatience I felt at the long-delayed consummation of my wishes. I am sure that my face shone with pleasure, for I had that day received a letter containing news of an access of fortune, which had exhilarated me beyond the power of my ordinary troubles to subdue.

Suddenly Dudley stopped in front of us. His eyes, looking larger and darker than ever from the sunken lines about them, were fixed upon me with an intensity almost unbearable.

"Is it not strange," said he, "that all this time—she has sent me—she has sent me no message?"

I was surprised as well as startled by his question. Despite his theory that, if she were dead, she would comfort him by some special message, I had not realized that he was really seeking consolation in looking for some palpable token from the spiritual world. It was too much opposed to his previous habits of thought.

"What have you expected?" was all I could for the moment say.

"Anything to prove that she is still mine—in death as well as life."

It was just then an idea flashed upon me which I hoped would save him from the madness which, at times, I apprehended might destroy his brain, noble and massive as its structure was. I resolved to lay the details of my plan before Caroline, at the same time imparting to her the piece of good fortune which had occurred to me. For this purpose I drew her away into the library, where, in a brief time, I unfolded my ideas and expectations. When we returned to the parlor, she took her brother's arm, walking up and down the rooms with him.

"Have you seen any of these spirit photographs, brother?"

"What are they?"

He ceased walking, looking inquiringly at her.

"There are photographers, now-a-days, who fix the shadows of souls as well as bodies—so they say! The spirit of the deceased friend wished for appears beside the picture of the sitter, faint and shadowy, as becomes a spirit, but still quite palpable."

"You smile, Caroline; are you jesting?"

"No; I am only relating the last marvel of spiritualism."

"What do you think of it?" directing his question to me.

"It's rather a new thing, even with spiritualists themselves. I have not made up my mind about it. In fact, I have never inquired much into the phenomena. But when you spoke so earnestly of having expected a message from Eleanora, it occurred to me that it could hardly come in a more acceptable or more convincing shape than this."

"To-morrow we will make the experiment. If there is any such thing possible, I know that Eleanora will come to me. I shall be permitted to see her. If she does not come, I shall know that she is still alive."

It was decided that we should go the next day, at two o'clock, to the photographer whom I had selected. When we entered the gallery we became conscious of a peculiar influence permeating our very souls. As a person in the dark, in total silence and seeing nothing, perceives the presence of another who approaches him, so each of us perceived an intangible something which thrilled us beyond speech. But few words were spoken. The business-like manner of the operator was in curious contrast to the intense emotions of those who hung upon his movements. In answer to Dudley's question, he said that the day was excellent for his purpose He arranged his plates, screens and camera with a matter-of-fact air, as if he were not about to attempt to catch and fix the fleeting shadow of the immortal soul, divested of its garment of earth. It struck me as being a strange mixture of the material and spiritual—this preparation of chemicals—this assistance of the ethereal light (itself the nearest to spirit of tangible substances)—this arrangement of screens and burnishing of glass, by such palpable apparatus to seize the image of the immortal soul and retain it for the gaze of mortal eyes. I presume no such reflections had place in the mind of Dudley. Soul, thought, and sense were concentrated upon one object.

Obedient as a child, he submitted himself to the directions of the operator. When all was ready he seated himself in the chair placed for the purpose. Standing at one side of the room, before the door of a smaller apartment, used as a dressing room for ladies, was a large screen. Caroline had gone into this apartment for a few moments when we first arrived, but she now stood by my side silently waiting the finale. I knew by her irregular breathing and slight paleness that she was much agitated.

The screen was drawn forward a few feet toward the sitter, and another placed to throw out the background. By the arrangement thus effected, the subject was half inclosed in an improvised apartment, which shut out a great part of the room from his observation.

The operator then gave him a few directions:—

"Fix your eyes and your mind both upon the camera. I will not withdraw the cap until I discern from your expression that your attention is sufficiently concentrated. Only of one thing be sure—whatever you may feel or become conscious of, as you value the result to be obtained, do not betray any emotion. Remain motionless and silent until I give you liberty to speak and move. Above all, do not be tempted to turn to see that which you feel approaching you. Many persons become so agitated in the moment of trial, as to render futile their own wishes. I believe you have more firmness."

Dudley made a brief response to the effect that he should fulfil his part. He fixed his eyes upon the camera with a steady gaze. Once or twice his eyelids trembled, and his hands clutched each other with the effort at restraint which he made.

Presently the cap was taken off, and—after a moment which might have been years to him—was replaced. Mindful of his promise, he did not speak or turn his head until he was requested to leave his chair. During the time of waiting for the photograph to be brought out on the glass he moved restlessly about.

"It is the best I have ever taken," said the photographer, as he placed the glass carefully in Dudley's outstretched hand.

We crowded close to look over his shoulder. The marvel had been wrought! There was he, with his keen, eager look; and there, little to one side, and just behind him, a part of her figure hidden by him, was Eleanora. She seemed almost to float, so light was her poise as she bent over his shoulder. Her golden locks, for which she had been so admired in life, wandered about her throat and shoulders as if the breezes of heaven were at that instant stirring them. She appeared to be robed in some ethereal texture, clasped by a girdle at the waist, and flowing in full folds about her limbs. It was Eleanora, the fair young wife, as we all remembered her. She wore a joyful expression, as if it was an intense pleasure to be near her husband; but it seemed to me that the sweet face had a slightly thinner, maturer look, as if she, too, had suffered from having been torn so suddenly from her earthly home.

The photographer was uneasy lest Dudley, in his ecstasy, should press the plate to his lips and mar the impression. He took it gently from him, remarking—

"This is altogether the best spirit photograph I have ever taken. It is miraculous! Mrs. Dudley's likeness is as vivid and perfect as your own."

"And she was here," cried Dudley, "as really and truly as I am, or as you are! Oh, what happiness is this, to feel that our beloved ones are separated from us by so slight a barrier! I tell you I heard the rustle of her garments as distinctly as if, in life, she was coming once more to bless me with her touch and smile. I detected the very odor of violets, the perfume she always used. Yes, as true as God vouchsafed me this token, I felt her breath on my cheek."

At this moment his glance became fixed upon the opposite side of the room. He gazed a moment in silence, then resumed, in a rapt tone, like one who speaks in a vision—

"I do see her! she is there now! I behold her plainly! Eleanora! She doubts—she hesitates! Do not go—stay with me!"

We looked, and beheld with our own eyes the truth of what he asserted. As distinctly as ever we beheld a friend in the broad light of day, there stood Mrs. Dudley, wavering between flying and approaching. Her hair streamed down as in the picture—her light garments waved about her. He held out his arms and took a step towards her, pausing lest the vision should vanish at too near an approach.

"Eleanora!"

The passion in his voice seemed mighty enough to withhold a spirit from its heavenly destinies. He took another step, and she, too, wavering, came forward to meet him. She drew close to him. He feared to lay his mortal hand upon her; but love was more powerful than awe. The trance was still upon him; but it was unbroken when he stretched out his hand and touched her hair.

"Ah! what blessed answer to my prayer is this—my wife!" He half turned toward us, then back to her. "I see her—she comes to me—she smiles—she blushes—I feel her hair—she is weeping—she is warm—she is living!"

For an instant I felt a breathless suspense; but joy never kills the strong, and Dudley was strong

This was the good fortune which had so exalted me the previous day; I had received a letter from Boston, from Mrs. Dudley, giving me an account of her escape in an open boat; of days of exposure, a long and wearisome voyage in a sailing vessel, which picked up the boat's crew and carried them about until it landed them in Boston; and she had written to me, as Dudley's most intimate friend, to ascertain if he were alive, and if so, to break to him the news of her safety. Poor thing! during all those months of hardship she had been compelled to endure the uncertainty as to her husband's fate. I had immediately telegraphed to her that Dudley was alive and at home; that she must come on by the night train; that I would receive her at the depot, and in the mean time prepare Dudley for the news.

When I had gone to his house the previous evening I had been troubled how to communicate my joyful tidings. I was afraid the greatness of the change from despair to such bliss as this would shake the reason which seemed almost on the verge of madness. The chance mention of the photograph suggested the idea to me of gradually preparing his mind, in the manner which I carried out, for the final consummation of his happiness. I intrusted my plan to Caroline, who approved of it. At the most it would only be keeping him from his wife an hour or two longer.

Caroline herself brought the dress, already perfumed with violets, which had once been the favorite dress of Eleanora's, but had long laid among the precious relics of the supposed dead. The privacy of the dressing-room gave the two women an opportunity to arrange the scenic effects. Probably it was as hard for Eleanora to restrain herself as for Dudley when, as he said truly, he heard the rustle of her garments and felt the living warmth of her breath upon his cheek.

All necessity for further restraint was now happily over; the young wife lay sobbing upon the bosom whose every throb had been so constant to her. Caroline was in tears, and I am not ashamed to confess that my own eyes were not so clear as usual.—Harper's Monthly.

MATCHED BY A WOMAN.—In the somewhat famous case of Mrs. Bogden's will, which was tried some years ago, Mr. Webster appeared as counsellor for the appellant. Mrs. Greenough, wife of the Rev. William Greenough, late of West Newton, a tall, straight, queenly looking woman, with a keen black eye—a woman of great self-possession and decision of character—was called as a witness on the opposite side. Webster at a glance had the sagacity to foresee that her testimony, if it contained anything of importance, would have great weight with the jury. He therefore resolved, if possible, to break her up, and when she answered the first question put to her:

"I believe!" Webster roared out, "we don't want to hear what you believe, we want to hear what you know."

Mrs. Greenough replied, "That is just what I was about to say, sir," and went on with her testimony.

And, notwithstanding his repeated efforts to disconcert her, she pursued the even tenor of her way, until Webster, becoming quite fearful of the result, arose, apparently in great agitation, and, drawing out his large snuff-box, thrust his thumb and finger to the very bottom, and carrying the deep pinch to both nostrils, drew it up with gusto.

Webster.—"Mrs. Greenough, was Mrs. Bogden a neat woman?"

Mrs. Greenough.—"I cannot give you very full information as to that, sir; she had one very dirty trick."

Webster.—"What's that, ma'am?"

Mrs. Greenough.—"She took snuff."

The roar of the court was such that he neither rose nor spoke again till after Mrs. Greenough had vacated her chair for another witness.

☞ On Sunday a lady called to her little boy, who was tossing marbles on the sidewalk, to come into the house.—"Don't you know you shouldn't be out there, my son? Go into the back yard, if you want to play marbles—it is Sunday." "Well, yes. But ain't it Sunday in the back yard, mother?"

☞ A beardy young gentleman being on a visit to a friend, had one of our friend's interesting boys on his knee, caressing him, when the child looked up into beardy's face with a perplexing gaze. "Why do you stare so?" asked beardy. "'Cause I don't see any mouf for you to talk with. Where's your mouf?"

☞ A poor, emaciated Irishman, having called in a physician, as a forlorn hope, the latter spread a huge mustard-plaster, and clapped in on the poor fellow's breast. Pat, with a tearful eye, looked down on it, and said: "Docthor, docthor, dear, it strikes me that it's a dale of mustard for so little mate."

☞ "Do you like codfish balls, Mr. H.?" "I really don't know, Madam, I never recollect of attending any."

To Subscribers.

Owing to a rather unusual pressure of work at our office, we have been unable to call on onr Subscribers, as usual, with their yearly bills. We now give notice that we have placed them in the hands of Mr. Sumner Southwick, who will present them for collection, and his receipt will be valid for all dues up to the 1st inst.

BUXTON AND TUCKER.

The remains of two more of our brave soldiers have been brought to the homes of their kindred and committed to the silent earth, amidst the lamentations of their friends. One of them, Mr. Philip O. Buxton, fell at the famous battlefield of Lookout Mountain, which was fought by the gallant Hooker "above the clouds." The other, Mr. George H. Tucker, after having performed his duty faithfully with his regiment, and been taken prisoner three times, was taken to the hospital at Annapolis and there died, no less a martyr to the good cause than if he had fallen by the bullet or shell of the enemy.

Both these young men have gone down to their soldiers' graves with honor, and their names will be held in perpetual remembrance by their townsmen when they count up their lost jewels at the end of the strife. The time will come, if it is not now, when great honor will be awarded to every one who falls in the struggle to save the life of the nation.

When the war is ended, the time will have come to take measures to raise a monument to the memory of those of our soldiers who nobly sacrificed their lives for the best interests of our country.

THE CONFEDERATES.

The rebels were certainly unlucky in their selection of a name. They have chosen a very disreputable one. There is an odor of felony about it. It belongs to the watch house, the criminal's box and the State prison. There are plenty of confederates in the last named place, and we naturally associate the rebels, who have chosen the name, with the convicts who have become confederate in their depredations upon society. We generally look upon the name as indicating a combination against the peace of society, and in this sense we rank those at the North who are confederate with the rebels in their schemes of destruction to our government. They are welcome to the name, but if they do not mean to hold rank with the felonies of their principals, they had better avoid the thing.

We are aware that there is a better definition of the word, but it does not belong to the rebels. It was a respectable combination of the old colonies to achieve independence. That object effected, the name and the thing were thrown aside and we became One people—a Nation—and no longer a Confederacy of States.

By the following precious extract, from the Richmond Examiner, it seems that the rebels begin to find out that the name they have adopted is a disreputable one, and they are fast making it more so:

> "And we were fast drifting into this self-contempt. The adjective 'Confederate,' as applied to the various make-shifts rendered necessary by the war, is quite the reverse of complimentary. Confederate coffee is roasted rye. Confederate paper is only fit for wrapping parcels. Confederate swords are as harmless as if they were made of lead. Confederate notes are treated as if they were no more valuable than candle-lighters. We began with playful banter; we were ending in genuine self-depreciation. It is a dangerous tendency, and if Confederate credit ever becomes a by-word, our cause will become imperiled, our escutcheon defiled."

PEABODY LYCEUM.

The recent lectures seem to have given excellent satisfaction to our citizens, and they have been of a high character. Week before last, Rev. A. P. Putnam, of Roxbury, gave his lecture on the River Nile, before a large audience, holding their attention by his vivid description, poetic imagery and eloquent delivery for more than an hour and a half, which is much longer than our people can stand from any mere commonplace lecturer.

Last week, Hon. R. S. Mathews, of of Baltimore, gave his lecture on the "Lessons of the War" to a very full house, the reputation of the speaker's eloquence having preceded him on account of some campaign speaking in Salem last fall. This performance more than fulfilled the highly raised expectation of the audience, who were charmed by his fervid oratory and his Choate-like energy and exhuberance of language and epithet. We have never before witnessed, at our lyceum lectures, such decided demonstrations of delight and approbation, as at this most powerful address of Mr Mathews. We learn that on the next evening he lectured to a large audience in the Salem Lyceum.

Last evening, Rev. Dr. A. L. Stone, of Park Street Church, Boston, gave his lecture on "Campaign Life."

The lecture next week will be by Capt. A. N. Atwood, of Provincetown, on the Fishes of Massachusetts Bay.

A SLIGHT MISTAKE.

Our citizens all know that on a pleasant eminence, in the central part of the town, like Mount Zion, "beautiful for situation," are two church edifices, standing side by side in loving proximity. It is also known that this apparent union and harmony is all unreal, and that, like the Jews and Samaritans of old, they have no dealings together. One is Unitarian—the other is Baptist. It would indeed be a marvel to find the Unitarian desk occupied by a Baptist clergyman, and equally so to see a Unitarian minister in the Baptist pulpit. It is not our business to say whether this is right or wrong. We only state the fact.

By a ludicrous mistake, which happened last Sunday, there came near being one exception to this general rule. Our Baptist minister exchanged with one of his brethren at Lynn, who walked over from that place in the morning and wended his weary steps towards the church. He looked up at the two edifices, one looking east and the other north, but the weather-vanes of both pointed in one direction. As there was nothing in the exterior of the twain to mark either of them as antagonistic to sprinkling, or otherwise heterodox in belief, our clerical friend was puzzled; but after a little reflection, made his choice, and entered the building which looked toward Jerusalem. He arrived early, and while the people were assembling, he threw off his outside garment, adjusted his notes, made his selection from the Scriptures for the reading lesson of the day, and then proceeded to select a hymn. He soon found that the collection was one with which he was not acquainted. The hymns were well enough, and with many of them he was familiar, but the arrangement perplexed him. On further examination, and a glance at the name of the publisher, a ray of light beamed upon him. Yet he was not fully enlightened. He descended from the pulpit and enquired of some of the congregation, if the hymn book in his hand was the one used in the church? On receiving an affirmative answer, he asked if that was not the Baptist Church? Upon being told it was not, he returned back to the desk, packed up his notes, closed the books, and, throwing on his outer garment, made a rather hasty exit from the house, proving the truth of the maxim, that "some people make mistakes when they don't try to."

The Late Fair of the Soldiers' Aid Society in Danvers.—The net income of this Fair was not, until recently, ascertained. It is found to be $550. We believe, considering the short time in which the young ladies, who were foremost in this enterprise, had to work, and also that Danvers is not a very wealthy town, their success in this work of charity, is worthy of the highest praise and commendation. The citizens of Danvers, like those of South Danvers, deserve much credit for their exertions, and liberality, in contributing to the wants of our brave soldiers in the field. Their example in this respect, and more especially that of the ladies is worthy of imitation by all loyal people throughout the free states. From the time when the first companies were being recruited until the present, the ladies in this vicinity have spent much of their time in the preparation of such things as our soldiers have most needed. No one, save the soldiers themselves, who have been the recipients of the warm socks, shirts, drawers, mittens, and other like articles, which are the work of their hands, can estimate the good they have done in this direction. We hope that Soldiers' Aid Societies may become more numerous, and their good works more extensive, for the day is coming, and is not far distant, when all will be proud to have been identified with a cause so just, so noble, and so humane, as that which has for its object the amelioration of those who have gone forth to fight the battles of our country.

☞ The Town Meeting is to-morrow (Thursday) afternoon, at two o'clock. We made a mistake in our last issue by stating it was to be last Monday. "Mistakes will happen," etc.

☞ It is believed that such is the state of disaffection to the rebel government, in North Carolina, that Gen. Butler with a few thousand men could march to Raleigh and take possession of the capital. It is rumored that a call is published for a convention to see if North Carolina will herself secede from Secessia.

☞ The horse-people throughout the country will be glad to learn that the Government is in the market for the purchase of 11,500 horses. They must all be suitable for the cavalry arm of the service.

☞ Ward Beecher has declined to receive the $5000 additional salary that had been voted him by the Plymouth Church. Ward is a trump among American actors.

☞ The Sanitary Fair in Cincinnati netted $210,008.

Danvers.—On Sunday afternoon last, the body of John Henry Bridges, late seaman of the U. S. gunboat Ceres, was interred at Beverly—the funeral services taking place at his father's residence in Danversport. Mr. Bridges was killed by a rebel sharpshooter at Hamilton, in North Carolina, at the time of the taking of a fort there, July 9, 1862. He was 24 years of age. As soon as the news of his death was received at home, a short time after the event, his father forwarded a metallic burial case for the purpose of having the remains returned to its friends. The officer to whom it was sent, however, was away at the time it was received, and it was consequently store in a custom-house, and never came again to light till a relative of the deceased investigated the matter a short time since. The body had been interred at the cemetery at Plymouth N. C., and with it the likeness of a little sister, which circumstance was a means of making certain the identity of the body—another being the discovery, in the grass, of a board placed there for the purpose of future identification, by a shipmate residing in Salem.

The body was originally buried by the Hawkins Zouaves, the crews of the gunboats attending the funeral. The burial service at Danversport was performed by Rev. J. W. Putnam, the Universalist minister, and was attended by a large number of neighbors and friends.—Salem Gazette, 22d inst.

An Oil River.—The vast amount and wealth of the coal oil of Western Pennsylvania are leading to the formation of numerous and powerful corporations to get it to market. The present means of transportation, though extensive of a large capacity are inadequate to the increasing demand. It will require many more railways, and the leading minds in the oil trade have devised a very unique plan to obtain facilities independent or in addition to them. This is by means of a great iron pipe down Oil creek and Alleghany river to Pittsburg, through which the crude oil shall be run, to be gathered into the refineries at Pittsburg or labelled and sent out by rail. This project, which has been generally supposed at a distance to be perfectly wild, is believed to be fully practicable. It certainly is very pleasing to contemplate the successful carrying out of such a plan—that a river of oil of many miles in length should run through an iron channel fashioned by the hands of man and flow out continuously through all the grooves and lines of commerce and life

THE STRIKE.

The strike of the curriers is assuming a position of no considerable local importance. The solution of the difficulty, it is very easy to see, may, to a very great extent, affect the material prosperity of the town. The question, as it now stands, is simply, whether a large number of the laboring, wealth-producing portion of our people shall leave the place and give their industry and their skill in building up some other community—in a measure, curtailing all business here? Or, whether a spirit of mutual compromise and concession shall prevail, and the town of South Danvers and the city of Salem retain all the elements of prosperity which they now have—and few enough they are, as we all know.

So far as the curriers simply ask for a rise in the price of labor, corresponding to the rise in the price of the necessaries of life, they are clearly right; but when they attempt to dictate to their employers as to the manner in which they shall carry on their business—what laborers they shall employ—how many apprentices they shall have, etc.—they are just as clearly in the wrong. This guild system—relict of the Old World—is, if possible, worse for the laborers than the employers. The more the ordinary business of life is left to regulate itself, as a general rule, the better it is for all parties concerned. In the case under consideration, combination on one side has led to counter combination on the other. And, if the truth must be told, the bosses have comported themselves in a manner not a whit more creditable to their good sense, than have the strikers. In individual instances, we have seen manifested a spirit of vindictiveness which, with a little pharisaical self-righteousness, we thank God, is not in us.

The strikers resolved not to work in shops where men were employed who did not belong to their association. As a counter-balance, the bosses resolved not to employ any man who did belong to the association, unless he would withdraw himself.

And the matter stands at a dead lock. Doubtless many of the workmen will resume their labor without reference to the constitution or by-laws of the association to which they belong. Doubtless many of the bosses will employ workmen at advanced wages without considering, or caring whether or not they belong to the association. But the trouble is that many of the best workmen, whose places cannot easily be filled, are leaving town; and, to a greater or lesser extent, sapping the sources of its prosperity. What shall be done to avoid general stagnation and personal inconvenience? Beyond question it is better for all parties that labor should be well paid. A cheap style of living among the people is a great drawback to the prosperity of any community. After careful reflection we think all will agree that, in a country like this, combinations ought not to control the free and natural course of trade and business. None will be more likely to suffer from such combinations than the laborers—because labor is, of all things, most hard to combine. In the present instance, sound sense would seem to dictate to both parties a compromise. Let the strikers drop the obnoxious portion of their by-laws. Let the employers hire at reasonably advanced prices all who choose to work, without reference to what associations they belong to. They can afford to do this.

Looker-on.

STATE AID.

Mr. Editor,—During the past few months there has arisen numerous complaints from the families of volunteers, in regard to their being cut off from, and for never having received the "State Aid" promised them.

Now, the majority of these complaints arise from families who stand in need of this same "aid," and while adjoining cities and towns pay out the "State Aid" to families of volunteers, alike rich and poor—whenever called for—our Selectmen have refused the same to several of those families, who, by law and justice, are entitled to it.

Now, Mr. Editor, if we understand the subject, it is left to the discretion of the Selectmen to distribute this aid, confining themselves, of course, to the restrictions and requirements set forth in the law.

Many of our volunteers have gone to the war—without receiving any bounty—with the understanding that "State aid" would be allowed their families, and the least the Selectmen can do, when asked for it, is to pay the same to those families who need it.

Now, if these volunteers go to the war, endure the hardships of a soldier's life, and forego the pleasures of home for their country's sake, ought not they to have the satisfaction of knowing that their families are provided for, and that we, at home, as a loyal people, will do all in our power to see that justice is done them and their families?

We hope the time will soon come when such injustice shall be laid aside, and our brave boys, now fighting the great battles of the nation, may never be ashamed of the town in which they enlisted.

☞ Preparations are making for the Presidential election. Sixteen men have been elected at various times to that office. Five of those persons were re-elected, the last being Andrew Jackson; and until Van Buren all were re-elected but John Quincy Adams. Since then no man has been elected twice, and two, cut off by death, served but short terms, Gen. Harrison but a single month. Re-elections till this rebellion commenced, seemed to have gone by, though we have never had a President who lived to the expiration of his first term who did not have a longing for a second. Now circumstances have so much changed that there is every probability that Mr. Lincoln will succeed to a second term. His friends are not satisfied that he should retire, till he has been acknowledged over all the country that voted in his election. Then there might be some difficulty in deciding who should succeed him. Mr. Chase would come first on that list, for his skillful management of the finances; but Gen. Grant, Gen. Banks, Mr. Seward, Fremont, and Ben. F. Butler, all have their friends, and in the struggle the election might go to the other side. The safest course is in keeping the old standard-bearer. With him the people sympathise on account of the trying circumstances in which he has been placed, and they would give him a chance to rule the whole country in peace. For these reasons thousands are turning to him, who otherwise would prefer some one else, and to-day he is far ahead of any other Republican on the course, and no other party now has the least prospect. The rebels will endeavor to keep along till after the Presidential election, and then whoever is chosen, they must give in. They will see that time brings them no hopes of independence and no advantages for compromise.—Newburyport Herald.

☞ If the suggestions for increasing the internal revenue are adopted, the New York Tribune says, that at one dollar per gallon the revenue from distilled spirits will reach $40,000,000 for 1864; and the tax on ale, beer, and porter at $1,50 per barrel, will amount to $5,000,000. On tobacco the tax of 20 cents a pound, on production, will give $4,000,000; and the additional tax on manufactured tobacco, will give $5,000,000. This would give a total of $54,000,000 on rum and tobacco, for 1864. Then, if we add the customs, duty on imported liquors, cigars, pipes, etc., and the manufacturer's tax on cigars, we should get as much money from rum-drinking and tobacco-consuming as the total revenue of the country was before the war.

☞ The war is bound to bring out all the resources of the country. Quite a large quantity of sugar, of the finest quality, has been made the past season in Illinois from a new variety of cane known as the Chatheistan. The cane is superior to all other kinds, yielding a third more sugar than any other variety, and standing firmly in the ground, and thus not being likely to be blown down in a gale. The syrup is also more easily converted into sugar than the Chinese cane, the juice of which is not readily granulated.

☞ A touching incident of the war shows how brother is stirred against brother, father against son. Two Kentuckians, father and son, were on a railroad train in Indiana, one Sunday. The father was a rebel prisoner, the son was a Federal guard on the platform of the car. The old man seeing his son, presumed to take more liberty than the rule allowed, and put his head outside the door. His son hastily advanced, piece at the shoulder, with a sharp, "Get back there, you d—d old rebel!"

☞ The Argus is good for the following:—A lady in this city ordered her kitchen stove changed. The stove men came unexpectedly, while there was a good fire in it, set it one side, placed in the new and transferred the fire. This was all very well, but as the stove men were driving off, they were stopped by cries of alarm from the house. The good woman had left a nice pot of beans quietly baking in the old stove and had forgotten all about them.

The Atlantic Monthly for February appears with a very strong corps of contributors—among them, Holmes, Trowbridge, Hillard and Wasson, and also Alice Cary and Mrs. Stowe. The leading article, entitled "Genius," we think must have been written by Wasson, although some of the newspapers have attributed it to another. We should be glad to know of another man, except Emerson, who could have written it. The Atlantic is as vigorous as ever.

He says "you can't tell the difference with your eyes shut, and it is a great deal cheaper."

HORSE RAILROAD.

In times like these, when the fever is raging in regard to horse railroads, it becomes the people to look calmly and rationally at the advantages and disadvantages which such roads will be to the towns and villages through which they may pass.

We understand a petition is in circulation for a road from Salem to this town, and it is already pretty well filled with the names of our citizens. No doubt many of those who sign the petition do so without considering for a moment the serious objection of having the track laid through the street and the great expense of keeping the roads in repair, which will be nearly double. There are other and more important objections. We have no doubt there are some places where the road will be an advantage;—for instance, where there are a number of roads running from the villages to a city, we have no doubt it brings the trade from the villages to the city. And we understand that, in Salem, the storekeepers say that since the horse railroad has commenced operations, that their trade has extensively increased; so that, if we are to have one from Danvers, it will increase still more, and our traders will be minus any profit from the horse railroad.

We sincerely hope that when the time comes for action that the people of this town will give the matter a thorough investigation, and act accordingly.

Danvers, January 26, 1864.

The Curriers on a Strike.—Contrary to the impression we first obtained in reference to a meeting of journeymen curriers held a week since at the Town Hall, it appears that "a strike" was contemplated, which is now being carried into execution. An association has been formed among the journeymen curriers, auxiliary to other associations, of which one at Woburn is perhaps among the most conspicuous. These associations are believed to act in harmony, and combine in rendering aid to such as may be thrown out of employment by a refusal, on the part of the employers of a particular place, to comply with the terms demanded. The demands, we are informed, are not confined exclusively to a compliance with rates of wages, but make it also conditional that the employers shall hire none who do not belong to the association, and that they shall also adhere to a stated rule (dictated by the association,) in reference to apprentices, or the time they shall be required to serve. This last condition may, however, only have been talked over at the meetings, and may not be included in the constitution or by-laws.

The master curriers have naturally got their backs up at the amount of dictation laid down in the programme, and, while we understand they generally care little about the rate of wages, will not submit to the other requirements. They have had one meeting and are yet to have another, the result of which will be, quite likely, that they will hire no man who belongs to the association!

The hired workmen among curriers are considered as belonging to two classes—"knives-men" and "table hands." Knive-men are generally thoroughly learned curriers. Table hands, however, are often—and perhaps in the majority of instances, in the present comparative dearth of workmen—hired at a full rate of wages, after an experience of only a few months at the business, the nature of table-work being such that these hands can do the work as well as any. The strikers wish to coerce the employers into a system that will cut off this practice and thus force the laborers thus hired into other channels of industry, for that would be the effect upon full grown men having families to maintain. It is stated that a considerable number of those who urge this requirement are men who have already had the advantage of this short term of apprenticeship.—Salem Gazette, January 22d.

The Continental Monthly for February is received, and abundantly sustains its new character of distinguished merit, as displayed in the number for January. We are glad to observe in the varied contents of these two numbers a grouping of writers, whose individuality of taste and style must meet the needs of all classes of readers. Among the new writers for this February number, we notice the name of one of our own fellow citizens, William G. Dix, Esq., who contributes a finely descriptive paper on the Andes. We congratulate the Continental upon this new accession to its list of contributors.

In Salem, Jan 20, Mr David Harris of Boston, to Miss Charlotte Freeman of Salem; Dec. 18th, Mr Thomas O'Connell of So. Danvers, to Miss Hannah Leahy of Salem; Jan. 3d, Mr Thomas M'Carty to Miss Bridget Conrey; 12th, Mr Michael Reynolds to Miss Honora Murray; 17th, Mr Nicholas Murray of New York, to Miss Mary Mulligan of Danvers.

Deaths.

In this town on the 22d inst., Mrs Augusta, wife of Henry C. Torr, Esq., of Marietta, Ohio, formerly of this town, and only daughter of Mr Amos Osborn, 2d,—27 years.

In the departure of this excellent woman, her friends have met with a loss whose severity is not to be measured by the common language of grief. Not only was she a pattern of all the domestic virtues and graces, but her literary tastes were of a high order. Her contributions from time to time to these columns have elicited frequent praise, while the author, from retiring feelings of delicacy on her part, was wholly unknown. The circumstances of her decease were sad and calculated to awaken the deepest sympathy. She had given birth to her first born, who followed its sainted mother two days later and now sleeps on her arm in the same grave. The name of the infant child was Augusta Rolston Torr.

22d, Mrs. Mary, wife of Mr Owen Ferry, 26 years.

22d, Mr Daniel Sullivan, 56 yrs 9 mos.

25th, Katie W, daughter of Henry C, and Catharine Poor, 5 yrs 11 mos. Funeral this (Wednesday) afternoon, at two o'clock.

25th, Mr. George A, son of Benjamin and Mary P Beckett, 21 yrs 4 mos.

25th, Eunice J, only daughter of Samuel and Mrs Jane E Trask, aged 5 yrs 6 mos. Funeral, this day, (Wednesday) at 10 o'clock A. M.

In Salem, Jan 18th, Mr Abijah Hitchings jr, 66 yrs; 20th, Mr Enoch Morse, 88 yrs 8 mos 9 days; 23d, Daniel, son of Edward and Mary Ann Barrett, 19 yrs.

In Beverly, Jan 16th, Mrs Elizabeth, widow of the late David Larcom, 85 yrs 8 mos; 17th, Mrs Nabby Herrick, 73 years; Mrs Lydia G, widow of the late William Friend of Beverly, 64 years.

In Newburyport, Jan 22d, Dr James Sanborn 74 years.

In Topsfield, Jan. 9, Mrs Molly Perkins, 92 yrs 8 mos 9 days. She was the oldest person in that town.

At Charlestown, Mr Shadrack Varney, 69.

At Boston, Jan 19th, Mrs Jane, wife of Mr Samuel Williston of Salem, 28 yrs 6 mos.

At South Boston, Mrs Fairchild, relict of the late Rev Joy Fairchild.

In Lynn, Jan. 17th, Mr. Samuel Roles, 75 yrs; Mrs Catharine Barry 67 yrs 7 mos; 19th, Mrs Betsy, wife of Mr Samuel Rust, 67 yrs 10 mos 18 days; 20th, Mr Benjamin J Sargent, 43 yrs 4 mos; Mr James H Beckford, 26 yrs; 21st, Mrs Hannah, wife of Capt Thos Lyon, 66 yrs 7 mos; Mr Abel G Wright, 32 yrs.

At Springfield, Mo., Dec 26th, Simeon Baker aged 57 yrs. He was a native of Beverly.

Agents and Canvassers Wanted!

A Splendid Opportunity for active parties to canvass for a pair of unusually popular Engravings, just issued. The Departure of the Pilgrim Fathers for America; and The Landing of the Pilgrims in America. Price so low that every Family will purchase.

TWO ELLEGANT WORKS OF ART,
Just Issued!
The Departure of the Pilgrim Fathers for America, and The Landing of the Pilgrims in America.

Each Engraving 26 x 34 inches, price only $1,50 each, by mail. These constitute the inest pair of companion Engravings ever pubished in the United States. They were engraved by the most eminent steel plate Engraver n this country, JOHN C. McRAE, of New York City, and for artistic skill and high beauy were never excelled. Mr. McRAE is great n whatever he attempts, but in these gems he has outdone himself. He was determined to render them enduring monuments of his skill, nd no pains or expense have been spared to nake them perfect works of Art, and to far xcel any similar works ever issued in this ountry. They are of the same size, and in very respect equal to, the elegant English Engravings of the same subjects, which cannot be ought in this country for less than twelve dollars and fifty cents, each copy.

We have undertaken a gigantic enterprise, nd one in which we earnestly invite the cooperation of all lovers of the beautiful in Art. 'e must sell fifty thousand copies of each of iese magnificent Engravings, and to accomish this have placed the price low enough to ing them within the reach of every one.—Will you help us? And in so doing confer life long pleasure on yourself! Such a grea lue in Art for so little money, was never bee offered, and nothing short of a very large le will remunerate us. Such Splendid Par Gems are usually published at $5 or $10 h, but we have determined to appeal to the blic, to sustain us in our efforts to bring them thin the reach of every family in the land. The great historical value of these pictures—ir great elegance and beauty, will render m of incalculable value to every home.

COMMONWEALTH OF MASSACHUSETTS.

HEAD-QUARTERS, BOSTON, Jan. 19, 1864.

GENERAL ORDER, No. 4.

I. By General Orders of the War Department, Series of 1864, a Bounty of $400 will be paid to Veteran Volunteers who enlist or reenlist under existing orders, and a Bounty of $300 will be paid to raw recruits who enlist for ANY three years organization, authorizxd by the War Department, either in service or in process of completion, until the first day of March, 1864.

II. Under the present arrangement of the War Department, towns and wards which have filled their quotas under the present call, may go on and continue their enlistments, and their surplus men, so raised, will be credited to them under any future call. The Governor advises all to take advantage of the present enthusiasm for enlistment, and make it available. The State Bounty will continue to be paid, until the public promulgation of orders to the contrary.

III. Officers and men of regiments returning on furloughs and to recruit, will report immediately to the recruiting agents of their respective towns and wards, for such duty as they are able to perform. And such recruiting agents are desired to employ these returning veterans, as subordinate recruiting agents, and encourage their efforts by paying them the highest premium which they pay to any person for obtaining recruits. It is desired that every soldier, on returning to his regimental rendezvous, will take with him at least one recruit whom he has himself procured.

IV. In behalf of the people of Massachusetts, the Governor congratulates and thanks the officers and men of these noble organizations for what they have dared and what they have done.

By order of His Excellency JOHN A. ANDREW, Governor and Commander-in-Chief.

WILLIAM SCHOULER, Adj't-Gen'l.

A Lecture on the Nature, Treatment & Radical

Cure of Seminal Weakness, or Spermatorrhœa, induced by Self-Abuse; Involuntary Emissions, Impotency, Nervous Debility, and Impediments to Marriage generally; Consumption, Epilepsy and Fits; Mental and Physical Incapacity, &c—By ROB. J. CULVERWELL, M. D., Author of "The Green Book," &c.

The world-renowned author, in this admirable Lecture, clearly proves from his own experience that the awful consequences of Self Abuse may be effectually removed without medicine, and without dangerous surgical operations, bougies, instruments, rings or cordials, pointing out a mode of cure at once certain and effectual, by which every sufferer, no matter what his condition may be, may cure himself cheaply, privately, and radically. This lecture will prove a boon to thousands and thousands.

Sent under seal, in a plain envelope, to any address, on receipt of six cents or two postage stamps, by addressing the publishers,

Is Licensed to make the New Patent Teeth on HARD RUBBER or VULCANITE, and from actual experience confidently recommends them for Strength, Beauty, and Cleanliness, to far surpass all other kinds of teeth;—are sure to fit the mouth; are much cheaper and better, being about half the price of teeth on Gold. Ill fitting Setts of Teeth on Gold can be exchanged for the Vulcanite, at very small expense. Specimens seen at Office. Teeth filled with Gold, Inserted, Extracted, and Children's Teeth Regulated—all with such care and gentleness as to be nearly painless,

Office Established in 1846.

PATENT VULCANITE DENTAL AGENCY.
NEW YORK.

This certifies that Dr. J. H. Batchelder is duly authorized by us to manufacture the PATENT VULCANITE or CORALITE GUMS AND PLATES, for Artificial Teeth, under the Goodyear Patents.

The public are cautioned against employing Dentists who have no license to manufacture such Plates and Gums, as patients using such Dentures made by infringers, are equally liable for damages with the maker or vender.

☞ We know a beautiful little blue-eyed girl, of some three years old, who was nestled in her mother's arms, at twilight, looking out at the stars. "Mother," said she, "it is getting dark!"—"And what makes it dark, Caroline?" said her mother. "Because God shuts his eyes!" replied the little poet.

☞ In the nunnery at Monviedra, there was an abbess aged a hundred years, whose lost powers of nature came back to her. Her white hairs came out, and black took their place; teeth grew again; wrinkles left her face; and she became as lovely and as fresh as she had been at thirty.

☞ A housemaid who was sent to call a gentleman to dinner, found him engaged in using a tooth-brush. "Well, is he coming?" said the lady of the house, as the servant returned. "Yes, ma'am, directly," was the reply; "he's just sharpening his teeth."

☞ A sleepy church-warden, who often played at cards, hearing the minister use the words, "Shuffle off this mortal coil," started up, rubbed his eyes, and exclaimed, "Hold on! it's my deal!"

☞ "Soldiers must be fearfully dishonest," says Mrs. Partington, "as it seems to be a nightly occurrence for a sentry to be relieved of his watch."

Special Notices.

BELL'S SPECIFIC PILLS.—WARRANTED IN ALL CASES.—Can be relied on! Never fail to cure! Do not nauseate! Are speedy in action! No change of diet required! Do not interfere with business pursuits! Can be used without detection! Upward of 200 cures the past month—some of them very severe cases. Over one hundred physicians have used them in their practice, and all speak well of their efficacy, and approve of their composition, which is entirely vegetable, and harmless on the system. Hundreds of certificates can be shown.

BELL'S SPECIFIC PILLS are the original and only genuine Specific Pill. They are adapted for male and female, old or young, and the only reliable remedy for effecting a permanent and speedy cure in all cases of Spermatorrhea, or Seminal Weakness, with all its train of evils, such as Urethral and Vaginal Discharges, Gleet, the Whites, Nightly or Involuntary Emissions, Incontinence, Genital Debility and Irritability, Impotence, Weakness or Loss of Power, Nervous Debility, &c., &c., all of which arise principally from Sexual Excesses or Self-Abuse, or some constitutional derangement, and incapacitates the sufferer from fulfilling the duties of married life. In all sexual diseases, as Gonorrhea, Gleet, and Strictures, and in Diseases of the Bladder and Kidneys, they act as a charm! Relief is experienced by taking a single box. Sold by all the principal druggists. Price $1.

They will be sent by mail, securely sealed, and confidentially, on receipt of the money, by

J. BRYAN, M. D.,
No. 76 Cedar street, New York.

Consulting Physician for the treatment of Seminal, Urinary, Sexual, and Nervous Diseases, who will send, free to all, the following valuable work, in sealed envelope:

THE FIFTIETH THOUSAND.—DR. BELL'S TREATISE on Self-Abuse, Premature Decay, Impotence and Loss of Power, Sexual Diseases, Seminal Weakness, Nightly Emissions, Genital Debility, &c., &c., a pamphlet of 64 pages, containing important advice to the afflicted, and which should be read by every sufferer, as the means of cure in the severest stages is plainly set forth. Two stamps required to pay postage. December 9, 1863—1yr.

IMPORTANT TO LADIES.—DR. HARVEY'S FEMALE PILLS have never yet failed in removing difficulties arising from obstruction, or stoppage of nature, or in restoring the system to perfect health when suffering from spinal affections, Prolapsus, Uteri, the Whites, or other weakness of the Uterine Organs. The Pills are perfectly harmless on the constitution, and may be taken by the most delicate female without causing distress—the same time they act like a charm by strengthening, invigorating and restoring the system to a healthy condition, and by bringing on the monthly period with regularity, no matter from what causes the obstruction may arise. They should, however, NOT be taken during the first three or four months of pregnancy, though safe at any other time, as miscarriage would be the result.

Each box contains 60 Pills. Price $1.

DR. HARVEY'S TREATISE on Diseases of Females, Pregnancy, Miscarriage, Barrenness, Sterility, Reproduction, and Abuses of Nature, and emphatically the Ladies' Private Medical Adviser, a pamphlet of 64 pages, sent free to any address. Six cents required to pay postage.

The Pills and book will be sent by mail when desired, securely sealed, and prepaid, by

J. BRYAN, M. D., General Agent,
No. 76 Cedar street, New York.

☞ Sold by all the principal druggists.

TERRIBLE DISCLOSURES—SECRETS FOR THE MILLION!—A most valuable and wonderful publication. A work of 400 pages, and 30 colored engravings. DR. HUNTER'S VADE MECUM, an original and popular treatise on Man and Woman, their Physiology, Functions, and Sexual Disorders of every kind, with Never-Failing Remedies for their speedy cure. The practice of Dr. Hunter has long been, and still is, unbounded, but at the earnest solicitation of numerous persons, he has been induced to extend his medical usefulness through the medium of his "Vade Mecum." It is a volume that should be in the hands of every family in the land, as a preventive of secret vices, or as a guide for the alleviation of one of the most awful and destructive scourges ever visited mankind. One copy, securely enveloped, will be forwarded free of postage to any part of the United States for 50 cents in post office stamps or 3 copies for $1. Address, post paid, DR. HOSTETTER'S
CELEBRATED
STOMACH BITTERS.

A pure and powerful Tonic, corrective and alterative of wonderful efficacy in disease of the

Stomach, Liver and Bowels.

Cures Dyspepsia, Liver Complaint, Headache, Debility, Nervousness, Depression of Spirits, Constipation, Colic, Intermittent Fevers, Cramps and Spasms, and all Complaints of either Sex, arising from Bodily Weakness whether inherent in the system or produced by special causes.

Nothing that is not wholesome, genial and restorative in its nature enters into the composition of HOSTETTER'S STOMACH BITTERS. This popular preparation contains no mineral of any kind, no deadly botanical element; no fiery excitant: but it is a combination of the extracts of rare balsamic herbs and plants with the purest and mildest of all diffusive stimulants.

It is well to be forearmed against disease, and, so far as the human system can be protected by human means against maladies engendered by an unwholesome atmosphere, impure water and other external causes, HOSTETTER'S BITTERS may be relied on as a safeguard.

In districts infested with Fever and Ague, it has been found infallible as a preventive and irresistible as a remedy and thousands who resort to it under apprehension of an attack, escape the scourage; and thousands who neglect to avail themselves of its protective qualities in advance, are cured by a very brief course of this marvelous medicine. Fever and Ague patients, after being plied with quinine for months in vain, until fairly saturated with that dangerous alkaloid, are not unfrequently restored to health within a few days by the use of HOSTETTER'S BITTERS.

The weak stomach is rapidly invigorated and the appetite restored by this agreeable Tonic, and hence it works wonders in cases of DISPEPSIA and in less confirmed forms of INDIGESTION. Acting as a gentle and painless apperient, as well as upon the liver, it also invariably relieves the CONSTIPATION superinduced by irregular action of the digestive and secretive organs.

Persons of feeble habit, liable to Nervous Attacks, Lowness of Spirits and Fits of Languor, find prompt and permanent relief from the Bitters. The testimony on this point is most conclusive, and from both sexes.

The agony of BILIOUS COLIC is immediately assuaged by a single dose of the stimulant, and by occasionally resorting to it, the return of the complaint may be prevented.

As a General Tonic, HOSTETTER'S BITTERS produce effects which must be experienced or witnessed before they can be fully appreciated. In cases of Constitutional Weakness, Premature Decay and Debility and Decrepitude arising from OLD AGE, it exercises the electric influence. In the convalescent stages of all diseases it operates as a delightful invigorant. When the powers of nature are relaxed, it operates to re-enforce and re-establish them.

Last, but not least, it is The Only Safe Stimulant, being manufactured from sound and innocuous materials, and entirely free from the acid elements present more or less in all the ordinary tonics and stomachics of the day.

No family medicine has been so universally, and, it may be truly added, deservedly popular with the intelligent portion of the community, as HOSTETTER'S BITTERS.

Prepared by HOSTETTER & SMITH, Pittsburgh, Pa.

Sold by all Druggists, Grocers and Storekeepers everywhere.

HELMBOLD'S
GENUINE PREPARATIONS.

COMPOUND FLUID EXTRACT BUCHU, a Positive and Specific Remedy for diseases of the Bladder, Kidneys, Gravel, and Dropsical Swellings.

This Medicine increases the power of Digestion, and excite the Absorbents into healthy action, by which the Wtaery or Calcareous depositions, and all Unnatural Enlargements are reduced, as well as Pain and Inflammation.

—:0:—

HELMBOLD'S EXTRACT BUCHU.

For Weaknesses arising from Excesses, Habits of Dissipation, Early Indiscretion of Abuse, attended with the following symptoms:—

Indisposition to Exertion,	Loss of Power,
Loss of Memory,	Difficulty of Breathing,
Weak Nerves,	Trembling,
Horror of Disease,	Wakefulness,
Dimness of Vision,	Pain in the Back,
Universal Lassitude of the Muscular System,
Hot Hands,	Flushing of the Body,
Dryness of the Skin,	Eruptions on the Face,
Pallid Countenance.

These symptoms, if allowed to go on, which this medicine invariably removes, soon follows

Impotency, Fatuity, Epileptic Fits,

In one of which the patient may expire.

Who can say that they are not frequently followed by those "Direful Diseases,"

"INSANITY AND CONSUMPTION."

Many are aware of the cause of their suffering, BUT NONE WILL CONFESS THE RECORDS OF THE INSANE ASYLUMS,

And Melancholy Deaths by Consumption bear ample witness to the Truth of the assertion.

The Constitution once effected with Organic Weakness requires the aid of Medicine to Strengthen and Invigorate the system,

Which HELMBOLD'S EXTRACT BUCHU invariably does. A Trial will convince the most skeptical.

FEMALES—FEMALES—FEMALES.

In many Affections peculiar to Females the EXTRACT BUCHU is unequalled by any other remedy, as in Chlorosis or Retention, Irregularity, Painfulness, or Suppression of Customary Evacuations, Ulcerated Schirrhous state of the Uterus, Leuchorrhœa or Whites, Sterility, and for all complaints incident to the sex, whether arising from indiscretion or Habits of Dissipation, or in the

DECLINE OR CHANGE OF LIFE.

Take no more Balsam, Mercury, or unpleasant Medicines for unpleasant and dangerous diseases.

HELMBOLD'S EXTRACT BUCHU AND IMPROVED ROSE WASH CURES

SECRET DISEASES

In all their Stages, At little Expense.
Little or no change in Diet. No inconvenience.
And no Exposure.

It causes a frequent desire and gives strength to Urinate, thereby Removing Obsructions, Preventing and Curing Strictures of the Urethra, allaying Pain and Inflammation, so frequent in this class of diseases, and expelling all Poisonous, Diseased and wornout Matter.

Thousands upon Thousands who have been the Victims of Quacks, and who have paid heavy fees to be cured in a short time, have found they were deceived, and that the "POISON" has, by the use of "Powerful Astringents," been dried up in the system, to break out in an aggravated form, and perhaps after Marriage.

Use HELMBOLD'S EXTRACT BUCHU for all affections and diseases of the URINARY ORGANS, whether existing in MALE or FEMALE, from whatever cause originating and no matter of HOW LONG STANDING.

Diseases of these Organs requires the aid of a DIURETIC. HELMBOLD'S EXTRACT BUCHU IS THE GREAT DIURETIC, and is certain to have the desired effect in all Diseases for which it is Recommended.

Evidence of the most reliable and responsible character will accompany the medicine.

TAKE NOTICE.

THAT Dr. Ham's Dyspepsia Remedy has been before the public for the past ten years. And in that time the people who have used it will vouch for the benefit they have derived from it. The character of his article and its reputation can also be obtained from the dealers who sell it, or have sold it for any length of time, to both of those, Dr Ham refers and is willing to stand the test. And also challenges any new compound to produce the same results, let alone delicacy of flavor, of his INVIGORATING SPIRIT, which for ITS EFFECTS UPON THE BILE, A TORPID LIVER, LOW SPIRITS, or when the blood is affected as seen by SKIN DISEASES or its ACTION UPON THE KIDNEYS, in fact for any person who is run down by the wear and care of this world will find relief in this old and well tried remedy.

Astonishing.

TO Dr. Ham, who has modestly put before the public his DYSPEPSIA REMEDY for ten years past, to look back and see the number of tremendous articles within that time, that have sprang up like a rocket, and gone down like the stick which guides it in its glorious assent. Some come out and claim to tell the public they use unknown Barks from South America, with any quantity of rum from the West Indias, &c. Dr Ham takes this opportunity to refer to the MEDICAL FACULTY here and everywhere that his article is in use, as to its qualifications, and challenges any one to produce a person, male or female, who has used it as directed, that will not speak favorable of it for DISORGANIZED STOMACH, Dyspepsia, loss of appetite, want of action of the Kidneys, as well as many other complaints that humanity are afflicted with.

To Ladies.

DR. HAM'S Dyspepsia Remedy is just the thing you require to remove the langour caused by weakness and debility; it invigorates the system, causes the blood to take new life in its varied course through the system, in fact it gives tone to the system and will relieve and remove the thousand irregularities that from various causes you are afflicted with. For Dyspepsia it is a never failing remedy, it has stood the test of years, and we have yet to hear of its failing to give relief to the afflicted thousands who have received health and happiness by its use.

To Gentlemen.

DR. HAM knows that you do not always pay much attention to the many different articles put before you in the paper, but we would refer you to our agents who you will find are the respectable merchants and dealers, in regard to the Invigorating Spirit; some of them have sold it for years, and know well the reputation it has amongst those who have used it in assisting nature to eradicate diseases. Important to the Afflicted.

DR. DOW continues to be consulted at his office, Nos. 7 and 9 Endicott street, Boston, on all diseases of a

PRIVATE OR DELICATE NATURE.

By a long course of study and practical experience of unlimited extent. Dr. D. has now the gratification of presenting the unfortunate with remedies that have never, since he first introduced them, failed to cure the most alarming cases of

GONORRHŒA AND SYPHILIS.

Beneath his treatment, all the horrors of venereal and impure blood, Impotency, Scrofula, Gonorrhoea Ulcers, pain and distress in the regions of procreation, Inflammation of the Bladder and Kidneys, Hydrocele, Abcesses, Humors, frightful Swellings, and the long train of horrible symptoms attending this class of disease, are made to become as harmless as the simplest ailings of a child.

SEMINAL WEAKNESS.

Dr. D. devotes a great part of his time to the treatment of those cases caused by a secret and solitary habit, which ruins the body and mind, unfitting the unfortunate individual for business or society. Some of the sad and melancholy effects produced by early habits of youth, are Weakness of the Back and limbs, Dizziness of the head, Dimness of sight, Palpitation of the heart, Dyspepsia, Nervousness, Derangement of the digestive functions, Symptoms of Consumption, &c. The fearful effects on the mind are much to be dreaded; loss of memory, confusion of ideas, depression of spirits, evil forebodings, aversion of society, self-distrust, timidity, &c., are among the evils produced. Such persons should, before contemplating matrimony, consult a physician of experience, and be at once restored to health and happiness.

Patients who wish to remain under Dr. Dow's treatment a few days or weeks, will be furnished with pleasant rooms, and charges for board moderate.

Medicines sent to all parts of the country, with full directions for use, on receiving description of your cases. Dr. Dow has also for sale the French Capottes, warranted the best preventive. Order by mail. 3 or $1 and a red stamp.

CAUTION
TO FEMALES IN DELICATE HEALTH.

DR. DOW, Physician and Surgeon, 7 and 9 Endicot street, Boston, is consulted daily for all diseases incident to the female system. Prolapsus Uteri, or falling of the Womb, Fluor Albus, Suppression, and other menstrual derangements, are all treated upon new pathological principles, and speedy relief guaranteed in a very few days. So invariably certain is the new mode of treatment, that most obstinate complaints yield under it, and the afflicted person soon rejoices in perfect health.

Dr. Dow has no doubt had greater experience in the cure of diseases of women and children, than any other physician in Boston.

Boarding accommodations for patients who may wish to stay in Boston a few days under his treatment.

Dr. Dow, since 1845, having confined his whole attention to an office practice, for the cure of Private Diseases and Female Complaints, acknowledges no superior in the United States.

N. B.—All letters must contain four red stamps, or they will not be answered.

Office Hours from 8 A. M. to 9 P. M.

CERTAIN CURE
IN ALL CASES, OR NO CHARGES MADE.

Dr. Dow is consulted daily, from 8 a. m. to 8 p. m., as above, upon all difficult and chronic diseases of every name and nature, having by his unwearied attention and extraordinary success gained a reputation which calls patients from all parts of the country to obtain advice.

Among the physicians in Boston, none stand higher in the profession than the celebrated DR. DOW, No. 7 Endicott street, Boston. Those who need the services of an experienced physician and surgeon should give him a call. P. S.—Dr. Dow imports and has for sale a new article, called the French Secret. Order by mail. Two for $1 and a red stamp.

HEIMSTREET'S
INIMITABLE HAIR RESTORATIVE.
IT IS NOT A DYE,

ut restores gray hair to its original color, by supplying the capillary tubes with natural sustenance, impaired by age or disease. All instantaneous dyes are composed of lunar caustic, destroying the vitality and beauty of the hair, and afford of themselves no dressing. Heimstreet's Inimitable Coloring not only restores hair to its natural color by an easy process, but gives the hair a

Luxuriant Beauty,

promotes its growth, prevents its falling off, eradicates dandruff, and imparts health and pleasantness to the head. It has stood the test of time, being the original Hair Coloring, and is constantly increasing in favor. Used by both gentlemen and ladies. It is sold by all respectable dealers, or can be procured by them of the commercial agent, D. S. Barnes, 202 Broadway, N. Y. Two sizes, 50 cents and $1.

HAGAN'S MAGNOLIA BALM.

This is the most delightful and extraordinary article ever discovered. It changes the sun burnt face and hands to a pearly satin texture of ravishing beauty, imparting the marble purity of youth, and the distingue appearance so inviting in the city belle of fashion. It removes tan, freckles, pimples and roughness from the skin, leaving the complexion fresh, transparent and smooth. It contains no material injurious to the skin. Patronized by Actresses and Opera Singers. It is what every lady should have. Sold everywhere.

The sale of the Plantation Bitters is without precedent in the history of the world. There is no secret in the matter. They are at once the most speedy, strengthening health-restorer ever discovered. It requires but a single trial to understand this. Their purity can always be relied upon. They are composed of the celebrated Calisaya Bark, Cascarilla Bark, Dandelion, Chamomile Flowers, Lavender Flowers, Wintergreen, Anise, Clover-buds, Orange peel, Snake-root, Caraway, Coriander, Burdock.

S.—T.—1860—X. &c.

They are especially recommended to clergymen, public speakers, and persons of literary habits and sedentary life, who require free digestion, a relish for food, and clear mental faculties.

Delicate females and weak persons are certain to find in these Bitters what they have so long looked for.

They purify, strengthen and invigorate.

They create a healthy appetite.

They are an antidote to change of water and diet.

They overcome effects of dissipation and late hours.

They strengthen the system and enliven the mind.

They prevent miasmatic and intermittent fevers

They purify the breath and acidity of the stomach.

They cure Dyspepsia and Constipation.

They cure Diarrhea, Cholera and Cholera Morbus.

They cure Liver Complaint and Nervous Headache.

They are the best Bitters in the world. They make the weak man strong, and are exhausted nature's great restorer.

NEAR ACQUIA CREEK, March 4th, 1863.

Owing to the great exposure and terrible decomposition after the battle of Antietam, I was utterly prostrated and very sick. My stomach would not retain medicine. An article called Plantation Bitters, prepared by Dr. Drake, of New York, was prescribed to give me strength and an appetite. To my great surprise, they gave me immediate relief. Two bottles almost allowed me to join my regiment. * * * * * I have since seen them used in many cases, and am free to say, for hospital or private purposes I know of nothing like them.

REV. E. F. CRANE, Chaplain.

Letter from the Rev. N. E. GILDS, St. Clairsville, Pa.:

GENTLEMEN:—You were kind enough, on a former occasion to send me a half dozen bottles of Plantation Bitters for $3 50. My wife having derived so much benefit from the use of these Bitters, I desire her to continue them, and you will please send us six bottles for the money inclosed.

I am, very truly, yours,
N. E. GILDS, Pastor Ger. Ref. Church.

SOLDIERS' HOME, SUPERINTENDENT'S OFFICE,
CINCINNATI, OHIO, Jan. 15th, 1863.

* * * * * *

I have given your Plantation Bitters to hundreds of our noble soldiers who stop here, more or less disabled from various causes, and the effect is marvelous and gratifying.

Such a preparation as this is I heartily wish in every family, every hospital, and at hand on every battle field.

G. W. ANDREWS, Superintendent.

Dr. W. A. CHILDS, Surgeon of the Tenth Vermont Regiment, writes:—"I wish every soldier had a bottle of Plantation Bitters. They are the most effective, perfect, and harmless tonic I ever used."

WILLARD'S HOTEL,
WASHINGTON, D.C., May 22d, 1863.

Gentlemen:—We require another supply of your Plantation Bitters, the popularity of which daily increases with the guests of our house.

Hunnewell's Great Remedies.
WHAT EVERY FAMILY SHOULD HAVE IN THE HOUSE AND WHY;

☞ They should have HUNNEWELL'S UNIVERSAL COUGH REMEDY, because it effectually cures Colds, Whooping and Common Coughs, Sore Throat, Hoarseness, and is the most simple and perfect Soothing Syrup in the world. For old and young, by day and night, it may be used with the greatest freedom, and three-fourths of the deaths by Consumption stopped.

They should have HUNNEWELL'S TOLU ANODYNE, because it is a perfect remedy for Neuralgia, Nervous or Sick Headache, Tooth, and Earache, Pain in Stomach, or Bowels, Genuine Cholera Morbus, Rheumatism, Distress after Eating, Nervousness, Hysteria, and the chief of all causes of disease, and Insanity, Loss of Sleep. Its character, though active, is simple; its action in perfect conformity to nature; its end cure, or relief.

For the pains in Monthly Menstruation a perfect relief, while nature's after work is not disturbed, and one of the most important points in Medicine.

They should have HUNNEWELL'S ECLECTIC PILLS, because with seldom but a single Pill for a dose all derangements of the Stomach and Bowels are cured. They cure Indigestion, Dyspepsia, Headache, when caused by foul stomach, Loss of Appetite, Billiousness so often and so erroneously treated with Mercurials, Jaundice. For Worms a sure cure.

They act simple, assist nature, do not make a Pill Box of the stomach, as is the most fatal error of taking so many Pills at a dose: and then, what is important to every Family and every Purse, one bottle goes as far as two or three of what is ordinarily sold.

The confidence of all is asked to test

Selected Poetry.

LINES

BY T. K. HERVEY.

This eye must be dark, that so long has been dim,
Ere again it may gaze upon thine,
But my heart has revealings of thee and thy home,
In many a token and sign.
I need but look up with a vow to the sky,
And a light like thy beauty is there—
And I hear a low murmur like thine in reply
When I pour out my spirit in prayer.

And though like a mourner that sit by the tomb
I am wrapt in the mantle of care,
Yet the grief of my bosom—oh call it not gloom—
Is not the black grief of despair.
By sorrow revealed as the stars are by night,
Far off a bright vision appears,
And hope, like a rainbow—a being of light—
Is born, like the rainbow, in tears.

I know thou art gone to the house of thy rest,
Then why should my soul be so sad?
I know thou art gone where the weary are blest
And the mourner looks up and is glad;
Where love has put off in the land of its birth
The stain it had gathered in this,
And hope, the sweet singer that gladdened the earth,
Lies asleep on the bosom of bliss.

I know thou art gone where thy forehead is starred
With the beauty that dwell in thy soul,
Where the light of thy loveliness cannot be marred
Nor thy heart be flung back from its goal.
I know thou hast drunk of the Lethe that flows,
Through a land where they do not forget,
That sheds over memory only repose,
And takes from it only regret.

In thy far away dwelling, wherever it be,
I believe thou hast visions of mine,
And the love that made all things a music to me,
I have not yet learned to resign.
In the hush of the night, on the waste of the sea,
Or alone with the breeze on the hill,
I have ever a presence that whispers of thee,
And my spirit lies down and is still.

[From the New York Traveller.]

SHADOWS OF THE PAST.

BY FINLEY JOHNSON.

Above the old familiar graves
Now weeds and nettles grow,
And costly sculptural marble mocks
The humble ones below.
The groves now lack their summer songs,
The bees will find no flower,
The streams have lost their gentle tones,
And death will lessen ours.

Yet weep we not for those who lie
So dead beneath our feet,
For they now mingle with their praise,
A supplication sweet,
That we may meet them in the realms
Of everlasting light,
Where sorrow's footsteps cannot tread,
Nor pain our pleasures blight.

The stars that glitter in the skies
Are emblems of their worth,
And we in each bright orb shall read
A message sent to earth—
A message that each saddened heart
Shall welcome, love and prize,
That says the casket moulders here,
The treasure upward flies.

And thus we hold sad memories
Beneath the cypress tree,
Clinging to shadows of the past
From very sympathy.
We bow and bend beneath the woes
That have an earthly form—
We shrink and close our loving hearts,
Like martyrs in a storm.

Original.

CLARA DEAN'S TWO CHRISTMAS DAYS.

BY CORA L. DE VERE.

Early on Christmas morning, down the steep hill, rides the wild girl—gay, dashing Clara Dean—a noble, regal looking girl—with pride stamped on every feature, from the royal brow to the self-reliant chin. Independence flashes from her deep blue eyes, and firmness and haughty ease rest on the full lips. She seems, at first, one to admire and not to love; and woe to the poor unfortunate who dares let his admiration warm into love, lest the icy pride freeze it and destroy all his faith in woman kind. But look further, and you will see that Clara Dean has none of the coquette in her. Her high moral principles are a sure preventive of that, and her innate earnestness makes her a friend, but no lover. From her own generous life she sheds sunshine on all around her, but, like the sun, allows no one a close approach. Watch her as she rides, dashing almost recklessly down the hillside to the frozen brook at the foot. Every pulse in her thrills with full, glowing life, and the fiery current dances wildly in cheeks and lips. And this ripe life gives the strength with which she checks her wild steed, holding him firmly for the wide leap—one instant pausing and on she rushes, veil and plume streaming behind in the wind. Like a gorgeous ray of sunlight, over the extended plain, free and wide as a prairie, gallops this joyous girl, till she reaches the entrance to her home through the long arch of leafless elms. Now riding more slowly, she takes in all the glory of this bright morning, drinking in the clear, crisp air as an invigorating draught, and it proves an elixir of happiness. To her the trees, though leafeless, have no sombre look, but are only resting from their Summer's labor; and in their gray bark she can fancy the tiny seeds of Spring-life lie concealed, ready with the May warmth to leap into beauty and shade the long avenue. No saddening thoughts come over her at Winter's aspect. So full of rich, joyous life, she can but enjoy Nature in her every mood, and thank God for the ability.

Riding gayly to the door, she tosses the reins to the hostler in waiting, with a "Merry Christmas, George," and gathering up her long habit, dances lightly through the hall to her own room, and soon is ready for breakfast, with an appetite keen-whetted by her early ride. Lovingly greeting her parents, and little Annie and Fred, she takes her place at the table and is the very life of the party. Nobly she fills the place of "elder sister," bringing gentle Annie forward, and mildly quelling Fred's boisterousness by no means save her love and that royal consciousness of right feeling. Truly any woman may be proud with her feelings—may be glad that she is worthy of such.

Glorious Clara Dean! a masterpiece of mechanism—physical, mental and moral. Will the time ever come when those blue eyes, now so calmly beaming upon home friends, will gleam with passionate ardor upon any one of your admirers?—when those proud lips shall wreath a smile for one alone, and your own noble self be given a willing, though hard-gained gift to the worthy winner? Oh! Clara Dean, that time is coming and you with no thought of it.

"Mother, can't I go into the conservatory," says Fred, after breakfast. "Clara tells me I can't till night."

"No, Fred; the conservatory is Clara's room to-day, and you must bide your time, till she gives you an invite to her party to-night."

"But what shall I do?—all day Christmas, and nothing to do! I wish my cousin would hurry."

"Take Annie out on your sled; take her to Clara and she will wrap her up warm."

Clara, singing snatches of gay songs, wraps the pet, Annie, and fastens her snugly on Fred's sled, and, with a charge to him to "be careful," is off again gayly to the conservatory.

There in the center stands the Christmas Tree, gleaming in its crystalline beauty, catching the rays of the sun and dazzling the eyes with its radiance. Clara, now perched on a chair, is deftly arranging the gifts for the coming festival. Santa Claus has not forgotten one of the little troop, for whom his gifts are intended, and Clara is a worthy almoner.

And now her work completed, she stands and watches eagerly, critically, the tree. Her artist taste is satisfied, and surely no more gorgeous Christmas Tree reared its love-filled foliage, or breathed out a purer feeling of kindness towards all its expected recipients.

Christmas dinner comes, and with it a host of cousins from far and near, summoned to the usual festival. Can there be a happier group than that collected in the conservatory at early evening? Merriment and joyousness are attendants upon all, as is mete on that consecrated anniversary, when a hush falls upon the group, caused by an unexpected, peremptory ring at the hall door. In answer to the summons, a man just in the prime of youth is ushered in. Uncle Sam's uniform marks him as in his country's service, and the loud, eager exclamation of Fred, "Why, Charlie Reed!" introduces him to those not already acquainted.

"A merry Christmas and a kindly greeting," says Mrs. Dean, rising and shaking hands with the returned soldier.

"Thank you, Mrs. Dean," and turning, he grasps the hand of Mr. Dean, nobly accepting his proffered welcome.

Then he turned to Clara, the proud, who has always withstood his magnetism. As he advanced, she rises from the lounge in the midst of the children, shakes hands with him, giving an earnest clasp, and as, hand in hand, they stand, Charlie searches her eyes—a long, eager look, telling of all the repressed passion of a long year's gathering, and his will and power to win her as the guerdon of his toils. A clear, untroubled look is her reply; no yielding there, no fever heat, no fire answering to his passion. Disappointed, but not daunted, he turns away and passes through the formal introduction given by Mrs. Dean, to the rest.

"How fortunate that you returned to-night. Shall you be at home long?"

"Only two days, Mr. Dean. I arrived last night, and assuming a welcome, came here first."

"That's right, Charlie. Where is your knapsack?"

"I left it at Holton's, and came here on horseback."

"Oh, Charlie!" breaks in Master Fred, "do tell us all about your escape and dangers, the battles and spies, and guards and Big Bethel, where that gallant Major Winthrop was killed."

"Not to-night, Fred; 'tis too bad to spoil Christmas with war stories; will tell you about that to-morrow. But I see your tree was about to be relieved of its numerous burdens. Who is the fairy to-night?"

"Sister Clara has been chosen."

"Sister Clara will have another trial to see who shall be fairy. Another competitor has arrived. You will allow your name to enter the lists, Mr. Reed?"

"Certainly, Miss Clara, if I am not unfortunate enough to take your place. Here, Fred, you shall hold the tickets."

Fred, exalted to the honor of ballot box, calls out:

"Now, one at a time, come and get your ticket. Whoever gets 'Fairy,' sing out."

One by one they visit Fred, until finally Charlie says:—

"Hold on, Fred, I have the magic ticket, but I resign my right to Clara, the real fairy, whose magic fingers have conjured up this magnificent tree."

As he tendered to her the wand, she would have refused, but for once her will was conquered, for in a quick glance she read his will that she should yield. Pride covered any display of her disinclination, and at her second look, she found she had balked his intended triumph. He expected a faint resistance, and her seemingly ready compliance puzzled him. He did not know the woman's nature fully yet;—to yield when she must, and then only in such a way that the conqueror shall not know it.

Clara gracefully did the honors of the magician, and with kindly word, joyous smile, and plasant jest, dispersed to all their alloted gifts.

"There, Santa Claus has forgotten you, Charlie," says Fred; "but no matter, if we had known you were coming, we would have had something for you. But you can try my new sled to-morrow; it is strong enough for you. See, isn't it splendid? 'Red, White and Blue.' Oh, I tell you, Charlie, I am loyal, and when I grow up, I am going to be a soldier, too, and wear shoulder straps as you do."

"All right, Fred, I'll try your new sled. We'll have a glorious coast, and that will do just as well as though Santa had remembered me."

"Not so fast, Mr. Fred," said Clara; "here is another package, with no name on it. Perhaps this is for you; open it and see."

It was found to be a soldier's dressing case, and it proved very acceptable to Charlie; but the mystery to the whole family was how it could get there so fittedly. Only Clara knew, and she wouldn't tell.

Christmas night, with all its festivities, must cease; the visitors depart with kindly wishes for all, and hopes of a re union. Charlie is the last to leave, and at the door tells Clara to be ready for a gallop over the plain at seven the next morning. She gayly promises and frankly meets his searching look, nothing daunted by its eager curiosity.

Oh, Charlie! you might as well search a mirror for flaws, as for love there. Although lifeful and eager, pride rules her love and calms her face. Hard to win, but well worth the trial.

Next morning, before the sun, Clara's horse stands at the door, waiting for his mistress; as the hall clock chimes out the hour of seven, another steed prances proudly to the door, bearing a noble master. A man, noble in his beauty, in the glory of his intellect, his truth and courage; a strong will to rule, not selfishly, but grandly and worthily; none of the petty sovereignty of little minds, but the noble consciousness of strict integrity and brave purposes;—of will to dare and strength to do.

Blame him not if he bears himself proudly before his future mistress. He sees her nobleness, her worth, her haughty knowledge of her own true nature, which will not let her do aught to lower her great womanhood. He sees through the gay surface to the jewel below. The finesse and subtlety of soul does not escape his vision. The full animal life leaping in every pulse, and throbbing in every vein, is but the external sign of the pure inner life, healthy, high-toned, free and joyous. Can he see such a prize and not strive to win it, when he knows his own worthiness to wear it?

"Good morning, Mr. Reed," says Clara, as she sweeps down the stairs and passes into the portico to mount.

"Good morning, Miss Clara—allow me"—and presenting his hand, her foot a second rested on it, and she was in her saddle and off before he had time to remount.

"No fair, Clara, you have the start and a fresh horse."

"All the more glory for the winner; see, here's my glove if you catch me before the next five miles, so good bye."

On they raced, across the wide plain and up the steep hill side. Clara's horse knew every foot of the road. Horse and rider seemed almost merged into one, so intent was the purpose to gain in the race. But if Clara was earnest, Charlie was determined. They had almost reached the end of the course, when his horse stumbled, and Clara went ahead, reached the goal, and waited proudly till Charlie came up. Mortification showed itself on his features, but one look in her face saw there admiration for himself and pity for his failure. Reliance again flashed from his eyes and determination sat on his lips. He would win the hand, if not the glove; he was as loyal to his other self, his fit counterpart, as to his country. They sat silent for an instant, then he said gaily;

"Where now—I have not won the glove."

"Oh! anywhere, on; this air makes one wild. I could gallop on over the next ridge of hills, if you say so?"

"Agreed, only no more races, if you please, this morning—my time is too short to be wasted, I want to talk."

"I am quite ready, sir, please begin. I can answer.

"You provoking tease, Clara, you know what I mean, that you shall talk."

"I am not used to being called names, Mr. Reed, and must tell you that until you state your wishes, I am not expected to know them. I am not a clairvoyant. What shall I talk about?"

"Anything you please, only don't keep up that reserve between us. I am an old friend and why can't I be treated as such. Call me Charlie, not Mr. Reed."

"Certainly, Charlie, I did not know I had been reserved with you; such is far from my intention. I hope you will overlook it," said she, looking him truthfully in the face.

He was puzzled again—twice he had been baffled. He started off on another track and gave her graphic accounts of his camp life, with all that thrillingness that marks the true delineator. She listened, attentive, pleased, entranced, her whole soul in her face, mirroring her admiration for the hero. As he finished, he cast an eager glance in her eyes, to read there something more than sympathy. She saw it, and was herself again, impetuous, thrilled with scenes in which she could have been a glorious actor, filled with glory for the true man at her side, yet self sealed.

Miles had been traversed during this long narration, and time had passed unheeded by either. They turned and Clara took up the thread of conversation, skillfully leading it to the gossip of the day, and Charlie thus heard from all the friends whom he had left, and in a way pleasanter than he could have gained from others, for Clara brought out all the good traits and actions, while the evil was so delicately touched upon that it seemed merely as a background for the good. Wonderful virtue is this charity that can make such Christians of people.

They returned in time for lunch, after which Charlie went back to Holton's to meet some old friends. As he bade her "good morning," she said in answer to his look:—

"Come again this evening, Charlie, and have a sing?"

"Thank you, it will be long before I shall have another chance."

Twilight had fallen and night was fast creeping over the earth, when Charlie rang. He was ushered into the music room where Clara is sitting at the piano musing. She was about to call for lights, but Charlie pleaded for the moonlight, which was flooding the room, and yielding to his wish she again seated herself at the piano. She sang with power to thrill to the very depths of the heart of the listener, but she chose such pieces as would fill the mind with heroism and bravery. Nothing weak or faulty, but strong, bold and pure, rich in its harmony it filled the room. Glorious music of truth, hope, and energy, joyous from its strength and pure in its reality, just like herself, and as she sang, Charlie became more and more entranced, deeply filled with earnestness and courageous daring to win this soul so answering to his own. Silence for a few minutes filled the room as she ceased, then turning to her harp she swept the strings bringing forth a strain so musical, so heartful in its melodious thrill, that sense and reason are swept away and naught but passion and love remain. At that instant she shot a quick glance at Charlie, and read his entire devotion, but not sure that it was not the music instead of her own true self that had captivated him. The harp slipped from her hand, and her voice in melody trilled out the "Red, White, and Blue;" the patriotic fires gleamed in his dark eyes, making them seem more radiently glorious than the music's lovelight.

Is she cold, ice frozen? has she no fever heat and heart like other women, or has not the time yet come when she must yield? Can she not comprehend the passion and phrenzy of such love as that soul could give, and could give only to another as noble?

With the full melodious measures of that patriotic tune ringing in his ears, Charlie rose, and bade her "good night and good bye," speaking no word to satisfy or destroy his hope.

"Good bye, Charlie, and may God bless you;" and the hand that she gave him trembled a little, but the voice did not quiver, nor the eye change its true, clear light beneath his searching glance. Thus they parted, two noble beings whom Heaven seemed to have made for each other, but all things work out their own salvation.

Christmas night of 1863 finds the same group collected in Mr. Dean's mansion, but on the lounge, instead of Clara, reclines Charlie Reed, returned two days before, wounded; an arm gone. Poor Charlie! yet he does not grieve or murmur. Thankful to his Maker that he has been permitted to sacrifice even that for his country, and willing to give his whole life if need be.

Little Fred is almoner by the lucky card, and the dexterity with which he takes the various articles from the tree, and the celerity with which he distributes to the rightful owners, soon leaves the tree empty. Then taking the line of march he leads the children into the hall for a romp, while the elders leave for the music room. Clara was going, too, when Charlie called to her—

"Come and sit by me a few minutes if you will."

No longer haughty, she immediately yields, and drawing an ottoman to the head of the lounge, takes her place.

Her sympathy for his loss has inclined her heart to pity, and she knows and feels the good she can now do, by yielding to his wishes. His dark eyes search her face and now call up the rosy flush.—Charlie has won the day, but will not ask the prize. What his strength could not gain, his misfortune has, and by Clara's one look her whole soul has passed out to his. Trembling he turns away; he dares not grasp the potion; the bliss is too great, and with the knowledge of it gained, comes the recollection that he is maimed, and he will not ask her to chain her fresh, young life to a crippled one.—No, he has been noble in his strife for her, conquering every ignoble feeling, that he might make himself worthy of her; and now the victory won, he cannot wear the crown. For an instant he regrets his country's need and his sacrifice; for an instant only, for Clara softly sings to him "Red, White and Blue." She has read his inward murmurs and applies the soothing panacea.

Cheered and encouraged he turns again to look in her face, and reads in her eyes what her lips are singing:

Never for fame or laurel wreath,
My soldier gives his youth,
Never for gold or high repute;
But Freedom's endless truth;
And trust in God, and hope in right
His watchwords gleam above;
The dearest guerdon he will gain,
Is pure eternal love.

Leaning forward, having risen from her seat, she presses her lips to his, and in that first embrace the haughty spirit owns its noble master. Love eternal is life eternal.

Selected.

The Shorter Catechism of Negro Equality.

Who said that all men are created equal? Thomas Jefferson, the father of Democracy.

Who gave Negroes the right of suffrage in New York? The Democratic party.

Who presided over the Convention which gave this privilege to Negroes? Martin Van Buren, a Democrat.

Who afterwards elected Martin Van Buren to the Presidency of the United States? The Democratic party.

Who married a Negro woman, and by her had mulatto children? Richard M. Johnson, a good Democrat.

Who elected Richard M Johnson Vice-President of the United States? The Democratic party.

If President Van Buren had died, and Richard M. Johnson had become President, who would have become the Democratic mistress of the White House?—This same negro woman.

Who made the negro a citizen of the State of Maine? The Democratic party.

Who enacted a similar law in Massachusetts? The Democratic party.

Who gave the negro a right to vote in New Hampshire? The Democratic party.

Who permitted every colored person owning $250 in New York to become a voter? A General Assembly purely Democratic.

Who repealed the laws of Ohio which require Negroes to give bonds and security before settling in that State? The Democratic party.

Who made mulattoes legal voters in Ohio? A Democratic Supreme Court, of which Reuben Wood was Chief Justice.

What became of Reuben Wood? The Democratic party elected him Governor three times, and he is still a leader of the Democratic party.

Who helped to give free Negroes the right to vote in Tennessee, under her Constitution of 1796? Gen. Jackson.

Was General Jackson a good Democrat? He generally passed as such.

Who, with the above facts, and many others, staring them in the face, are continually whining about "Negro suffrage" and "Negro equality?" The Democratic party.

All these things were done by Democrats, and yet they deny being in favor of negro equality, and charged it upon the Republicans—just like the thief who cries "stop thief" the loudest.

☞ Punch, ever apt at caricature, thus hits off a certain style of modern ballad poetry:—

At midnight the rivals met in the whale,
And fought by the light of the grasshopper's tail;
The elephant stood on his trunk to take breath,
And the tiger-cat cosily hugged him to death.
Then with a cabbage-stalk boldly he wrote:
"Come, love, and tread on the tail of my coat;
See thy own Crocodile whistling for thee."
He groaned—gave a gurgle—a cold corpse was he!

Lively, lovely Isaline!
Blighted, plighted Isaline!
Mournful crouch the cats serene;
Howl the goldfish, mew the frogs;
Weep the shrimps and purr the dogs;
All thy pets with rapture say;
"Our lady will be wed to day!"
But canst thou love a fish so green,
Blighted, plighted Isaline?

The Wizard.

WEDNESDAY, FEBRUARY 3, 1864.

RELIABLE GENTLEMEN.

The "reliable gentleman" who used to pass up and down between Richmond and Washington during the early part of the war, with important intelligence, closed his travels some time ago, retiring to finish a well spent life in the bosom of his family. He was immediately succeeded by the "intelligent contraband," who still continues on the route; but having been considered insufficient for his arduous duties, he was, not long since, reinforced by Jeff. Davis's coachman. Even then, the two combined, were found unequal to the transmission of such valuable information as they were in the habit of collecting, and now Davis's "body servant" has been added to the number. Having such a trio to depend upon, it might naturally be expected that we should not lack for exciting and useful news from rebeldom. Our hopes in this respect have been favored with some very important intelligence from the rebel capital, furnished by the "body servant" aforesaid.

Thus we learn that Jeff's house leaks badly, the roof wanting shingling, and that he cannot procure tubs enough to catch the water—thanks to the blockaders, no doubt. We expect to hear soon of the capture of some blockade runner laden with a cargo of that useful article of housekeeping; also, that Jeff contemplates vacating his residence on account of this trouble. Added to this grievance, his good eye begins to fail him and will not much longer merit that flattering and distinctive designation. These afflictions, with others besides, have made him exceedingly waspish, not to say savageiferous, insomuch that he kicks over tables and chairs on the slightest provocation, or even on no provocation at all. He can get nothing better than brandy to drink, having been out of ale and cider a long while. His "neuraligey," whatever that may be, is also baddish. He frequently snubs Mrs. Jeff with great severity, provoking retorts from her of a similar unction. His pork and beef barrels have also run low, and his supply of cheese, bacon and flour is failing, but he still thinks Southern Independence is a sure thing.

Mrs. Jeff thinks Washington far preferable as a residence to Richmond and grumbles unceasingly because her husband did not remove to the White house two years ago, as he calculated upon—a strain of remark which must be very soothing to the feelings of the rebel President.

The above are among the startling pieces of information lately received. It remains to be seen what effect they will have on the further progress of the war.

☞ If the stories of rebel destitution, with which the papers have been lately filled, could be fully credited, one might expect the rebellion to be starved out before next Spring; but it would require a great "destitution" of common sense to induce anybody to put much faith in them. Our troops may, perhaps, encounter some "skeleton" regiments (owing to desertions, etc.,) in the next campaign, but the men who compose them will not probably be themselves skeletons.

☞ The selling of Beaufort, in slices, to the despised contrabands, by the Government, is a beautiful specimen of fit retributive justice. It used to be a great place of fashionable resort for the Southern aristocracy, but the fashion thereof has passed away forever. Dramatic dues are dispensed sometimes outside of plays and novels.

☞ Gen. Gilmore keeps hammering away at Charleston with great perseverance. A constant dropping of water will wear away a stone; consequently, a continual dropping of iron, which is a substance much harder than water, must finally wear out the rebel city, especially when the iron has the assistance of fire.

☞ Deserters from the rebel armies are still coming over to the Federal ranks in great numbers—so the papers report. They seem to be of the same mind with rats, which are well known to forsake sinking ships.

☞ Gen. Longstreet appears to be contemplating some hard knocks on Knoxville. He may catch a tartar, perhaps, if he tries it on. Grant is round.

INSTITUTE LECTURES.—Last week, on Tuesday evening, a very large audience assembled at Peabody Hall and listened with wrapt attention to the lecture of Rev. Dr. A. L. STONE, of Boston. His topic was "Campaign Life," and he gave a series of exquisite pictures of life in the camp, in the best style of word painting, being occasionally interrupted by the applause of the audience.

Last evening, Capt. N. E. ATWOOD, of Provincetown—a practical fisherman—gave his lecture on the "Fishes of Massachusetts Bay."

TOWN MEETING.

At a legal meeting of the inhabitants of the town of South Danvers, qualified to vote in town affairs, held January 28, 1864—Lewis Allen, Esq., Moderator—it was Voted, That the citizens of South Danvers are opposed to the petition of the city of Salem, so far as the taking of water from Brown's Pond and Spring Pond and the surrounding springs, is concerned; because if its prayer should be granted, and what it proposes should be carried into effect, we should fail of being supplied with so pure water and of so good a quality as we now have in abundance, and because individual and corporate rights and interests would be infringed upon and injured, without any corresponding benefits to the public.

Voted, That Lewis Allen, Dr. Geo. Osborne, Stephen Blaney, Elijah W. Upton, Henry Poor, Caleb W. Osborn, Eben S. Poor and Wm. H. Little be a committee to appear before the Legislative Committee in relation to the subject matter contained in the above vote.

Voted, That the town of South Danvers hereby oppose, and instruct their Representative to oppose, any grant to the Eastern Railroad Company which shall in any way impair or prejudice the rights of the travelling public as expressed in an Act, entitled an "Act concerning the Eastern Railroad Company and the South Reading Branch Railroad," passed May 21, 1852.

Voted, That the subject matter of the petition of the Salem & South Danvers Railroad Company for a charter for a Horse Railroad to Danvers be referred to a committee of five, to appear before the Legislative Committee and take such action in the premises as in their judgment the best interests of the town require.

The following committee was appointed, viz:

James P. King, Wm. H. Little, Joseph Poor, A. W. Bancroft, Dana Woodbury.

Voted, That the business interests of South Danvers and Lynn, and the intimate relations and constant communication and travel between the two places, imperatively demand the construction of a Horse Railroad; but that it is of equal importance that the enterprise should be in the hands of those who are identified with the local interests and business, and will make it subservient to the prosperity of South Danvers and Lynn, and not under the control of men or corporations who would undertake it for speculative purposes, and manage it for private emolument rather than for the public welfare, and that, therefore, the citizens of South Danvers are earnestly in favor of the prayer of the petition of William H. Little and others, and as strongly opposed to the granting of the petition of the Salem & South Danvers Railroad Company.

Voted, That Lewis Allen, Dr. Geo. Osborne, Stephen Blaney, Elijah W. Upton, Henry Poor, Caleb W. Osborn, Eben S. Poor and Wm. H. Little be a committee to appear before the Legislative Committee in relation to the subject matter contained in the above vote.

Voted, To adjourn.

MR. PEABODY'S LONDON DONATION. We see by English papers, that complaint is made on account of the mode in which the Peabody donation is to be used.—This is to be expected. There are always persons ready to find fault over any measure of benevolence, of a public character. The complaint is, that the new model lodging houses are not cheaper, in the midst of the city, than the old dwellings in the suburbs. There is no doubt they are better, and it is better lodgings that the poor of London most need. If the plan adopted should be carried out, the charity would be self-sustaining and self-perpetuating, as the incomes would be applied to the erection of new buildings, until in process of time the old dens of which we read in St. Giles, would give place to the new, convenient and comfortable tenements now in process of erection.

DANVERS SAVINGS BANK.—The following list of officers was chosen at the annual meeting of this institution on the 20th ult:

President—Rufus Putnam.

Vice Presidents—Philemon Putnam, Gilbert Tapley, Robert S. Daniels, William N. Cleaveland.

Trustees—Nathan Tapley, Stephen Wilkins, Nath'l Boardman, Joseph Adams, Jacob F. Perry; Moses Dorman, Boxford, William G. Choate, Salem; Francis P. Merriam, Middleton; Charles P. Preston, Israel H. Putnam, Samuel Preston, Moses J. Currier, Augustus Mudge, Wm. L. Weston.

DANVERS.—The following table gives the number of births, deaths, and marriages in this town for the year 1863:

Whole No. of births in town the last year,	140
Males,	70
Females,	70
Whole No. of deaths in town the last year,	133
No. deaths of children under 5 yrs,	57
No. of deaths of soldiers,	9
Of all others,	67
Whole No. of marriage certificates issued,	36

Danvers, Jan. 30, 1864.

ANTIQUARIAN SUPPER.—By referring to our special notice column, it will be seen that the ladies are to have one of these popular entertainments at Sutton's Hall, next Wednesday evening, where a fine old-fashioned supper, in old-fashioned dishes, with old-fashioned attendants, will be enjoyed, as well as the good music and other attractions for a winter evening.

MASSACHUSETTS CREDIT.—Five hundred thousand dollars of the Coast Defence scrip of Massachusetts has been taken by George Peabody, of London, at $110.

☞ the Legislature of Maryland has endorsed President Lincoln's administration, and nominated him for re-election.

INTEMPERANCE.

We are sorry to say it, yet such is the fact, that since the Temperance Division has dissolved, Intemperance has fearfully increased—although some contended that the Division was no benefit, and even an injury to the cause. But, if we contrast the appearances of the present time with the past, when the Division was in a thriving condition, we find that, from some cause, we have become greatly demoralized, and the cause of Temperance is fast losing ground, and it is now quite a common thing to see men reeling through the streets under the influence of this debasing vice, Intemperance.

When the war broke out, the Division numbered about three hundred—a great portion of which were young men, many of whom, about that time, enlisted to fight for the dear old flag. The consequence was, that the number diminished to such an extent that it was found to be impossible to sustain it unless, by some means, the older citizens could be induced to join in the good work. Every effort was made to obtain new recruits from this class, but with little success; and finally the charter was delivered up.

Now, we believe, had the citizens generally interested themselves in the cause at that time, instead of having rows so common, we should have escaped the trouble we now find ourselves involved in. Now the question is, shall we altogether make one more effort to drive the evil from our midst—will we all, unitedly, fill up the ranks and all march up together and place our batteries in the right position, with a determination to bring back our town to its former loyalty, that it may be second to none other in temperance and morals? LUBIN.

Danvers, Feb. 1, 1864.

NEW HORSE CAR.—As was said at the late town meeting, the accommodations on the Salem and South Danvers Horse Railroad are improving. The cars start exactly at the time stated. There is scarcely any delay at the turnouts, and the passage from one point to another is made as quickly as could reasonably be expected. The old cars which the company were at first compelled to use are being rapidly replaced by those of a new and elegant pattern. Yesterday a new car from the manufactory in Salem was put upon the track. It was a fine piece of workmanship—large and commodious—and reflects credit alike upon the builders and the enterprising company who are doing so much for the accommodation of the public.

We would further add that this car is sixteen feet long by seven wide, is built mostly of iron, is well lighted, handsomely painted and ornamented, and capable, on a "rush," of carrying nearly a hundred passengers.

HOUSE OF EQUITY.—By an advertisement in to-day's paper, it will be noticed that the grocery by the name of the "House of Equity," has changed hands, and that Messrs. FRANK T. ARNOLD and B. F. HUTCHINSON are the proprietors. From what we know of these gentlemen we have no doubt they will keep up the good reputation of this place by selling the best of goods at reasonable prices.

DEATH OF A SOLDIER.—Under our obituary head last week we announced the death of MR. GEORGE A. BECKETT, of this town, son of Benjamin and Mary B. Beckett, aged 21 years. Mr. B. was a member of Co. B, 17th Mass. Regiment, being one of its first recruits, and had earned the worthy title of a good soldier. His disease was consumption.

ANOTHER DRAFT.—The Government has officially announced that a draft for 500,000 more will be made on the 10th day of March next, for the military service of the United States, crediting and deducting therefrom so many as have been enlisted or drafted into the service prior to the 1st day of March, and not heretofore credited.

☞ The Richmond Examiner does not like the prospect of "Old Abe's" re-election. It says anybody would be more favorable to the South. How would they like to try BEN. BUTLER.

☞ Few secrets would ever escape if the following rules were complied with: Never confide in the young; new pails leak. Never tell your secrets to the aged; old doors seldom shut closely.

☞ The Horse Cars between Beverly and Salem are found to be even a greater convenience than was at first expected, and people are already wondering how they got along so well without them.

☞ The Beverly Gas Company have completed their arrangements for lighting Beverly Bridge with gas, and this great improvement went into effect on Wednesday night.

☞ Mr. Mayhew, the well-known writer on the London poor, has published a work on Germany, in which he proves that one-third of the gross gains of the entire people is lavished upon beer.

[The following beautiful lines are from the pen of the late Mrs. HENRY C. TORR, whose decease was announced in our last paper. This is but one of the many excellent productions of that truly gifted and estimable lady, whose sad and untimely death have filled so many hearts with sorrow:]

A SABBATH MORNING.

Fair as Eden! still and beauteous,
Sweet with scent of hay and flowers;
Thanks to Him, the Giver bounteous,
Who hath planned this world of ours.

Like a golden flood, the sunlight
Lies on hill and valley calm,
And a pure breeze fresh from Heaven,
Soothes us like a healing balm.

O, that in this holy morning,
Perfect from the Maker's hand,
We could see a blessed omen,
For our torn, distracted land!

Weeping tears of saddest sorrow,
Sits our well-beloved, to-day;
Drooping are our eagle's pinions,
On the cliff all cold and gray.

But the proud bird will not languish;
Even now his eye is bright,—
Looks he at the sun as proudly
As in Freedom's morning light.

Watching o'er the field of battle,
From his eyrie bold and high,
Sees he Freedom's sons in armor,
Bound to conquer or to die.

Sons of freemen! can ye linger,
Shrinking from war's bloody field?
Forward! glory to the victors!
Make the traitorous foemen yield!

Whosoever dies in battle,
For our consecrated land,
Will receive a crown of glory
From the great Commander's hand.

Justice, Truth and Right are with us,
And we will not can not fail,
God in Heaven is watching o'er us;
Think ye He can not prevail?

Many foes have we to conquer,
Foes without and foes within;
Though at times we seem to falter,
Surely fall the hosts of sin.

Shade of Washington! be near us;
Drop thy mantle on our chief;
May he have supernal wisdom,
Bring our foes to sudden grief.

And ere long, though fierce the struggle,
We will conquer, and sweet peace
Like a moral Sabbath morning,
O'er our land shall never cease.

Marietta, Aug. 3, 1862.

☞ We learn that Mr. H. A. SNOW, the new Superintendent of the Danvers Bleachery, has retired, and that Mr. JONAS REED (former Superintendent,) has been appointed in his stead.

☞ The mortal remains of Mr. Thackeray were interred in the Kansal-green cemetery, the resting place of many who have served this generation by their genius, the character, or their unselfish industry. This great author lies in ground made sacred by the ashes of numerous good men, but a fitter place of sepulture may possibly yet be found. Westminister Abbey has been mentioned in connection with his name, and the suggestion is not unlikely to approve itself to the public mind and to gain so large an amount of assent as to become a realized idea. However this may be, English eyes will never look emotionless on the grave of the author of "Pendennis," of "The Newcomes," and of "Henry Esmond," whether it is to be found in a modern cemetery or a time honored abbey.—Liverpool Post.

☞ The ladies of the North Baptist Church, Hartford, Conn., recently invited the gentlemen of the choir to a leap-year sleigh ride. The latter accepting, the former hire a large sleigh, called for their guests, handed them in, drove them to Windsor and back, gave them a good dinner and paid the bill, taking tender care of them all the time.

☞ The San Francisco Bulletin says, upon the authority of trustworthy statistics, that the population of that city, amounting to about 100,000 persons, consume daily ninety-seven thousand eight hundred and fifty-two pounds of meat.—It adds that San Francisco probably consumes more animal food than any city of the same size in the whole country.

☞ The new conscription bill, as it has passed the U. S. Senate, provides that the quota of each ward, town, county, or township, shall be, as nearly as possible, in proportion to the number of men resident therein liable to military service, taking into account the number already furnished, including those for the naval service.

☞ John Mitchell of the Richmond Enquirer thinks that Southern prisoners, discharged on parole, have a right to violate their paroles. He violated his in Australia a few years ago, and he wants as many companions in his villany as possible.—Louisville Journal.

☞ The members of the Essex Agricultural Society in this town, can obtain copies of the Transactions for 1863 at the Post Office.

☞ "War," says Herodotus, "reverses the order of nature. In times of peace sons bury their fathers, but in time of war, fathers bury their sons."

☞ The city of Lawrence is thriving as never before. The mills are running over hours, and the greatest want is help.

☞ The New York Times says that the United States Treasury now holds in its various offices $18,000,000 in gold in excess of payments on public interest.

☞ The next peach crop, if not a large part, of the trees has been utterly ruined in Ohio and several of the Western States.

LETTER FROM BOSTON.

PROPELLER ADVERTISING AGENCY,
No. 15 Washington St.,
Boston, Jan. 30th, 1864.

WINTER EVENINGS.

To the man who has a home, and to whom that home is dear, these long winter evenings are delightful. The family parlor cheerfully lighted, with a ruddy anthracite fire glowing in the grate, is a paradise that compensates, when the business day is done, for all the anxieties and care that beleaguer and beset us in the great arena of Bargain and Sale, where we wrestle for our bread and butter. Paterfamilias forget the Turn-a-penny world in which he has been toiling and moiling for six or eight mortal hours, as he subsides into the big arm-chair duly set for his accommodation, and, stretching his slippered feet toward the fender, looks around on the welcome faces of the wife and children for whose dear sakes he has been jousting in the lists of Mammon. The close drawn curtains shut out the exterior world, and the microcosm within is all his own. On the mart he was hail-fellow-well-met with everybody; but here "the stranger intermeddleth not with his joy." He has left the demon of Traffic in his counting-house, locked and barred him in, and committed him for the care of a private watchman. The ghoul cannot haunt him in his home. That is his playground. He has a choice of pleasant sports too. His wife is ready to try conclusions with him at chess or backgammon—there is a new book with leaves yet uncut, on the centre-table—or if he care not for these, he can have a romp with the "olive branch." To a man of domestic habits and warm affections, the evening family re-union overpays the hardest day's toil, and winter evenings being the longest, are therefore to him the happiest of the year.

But, alas! as in the changeable pictures that viewed from one point present a fair young face and from another the head of a skeleton, the Winter Evening has two widely different aspects. It brings darkness instead of cheerful light, additional cold instead of welcoming warmth to the squalid abode where the children of poverty huddle together in their rags, to keep alive by contact the vital spark which the freezing atmosphere would else extinguish. Terrible to the poor are the long winter nights, and doubly terrible when coal is at a price which is utterly beyond their means to pay. We should think that coal-dealers who have realized a profit of four or five dollars per ton on their investments of last fall, must have had bad dreams during the last cold snap. Hotter fires than can be made with Lackawana, must have roared and sparkled in their visions, we opine; and the great stoker of Pandemonium, with his poke at a white heat, must have seemed to poke them occasionally in their slumbers. But Monoply has no conscience. It would play the violin over the final conflagration of all things, if it could escape the flames, and realize anything on the charred ruins.

It behooves all to whom these Winter Evenings are a pleasure and a delight, to think of those to whom they are a source of unspeakable misery and suffering. Nor is thinking all that is required. Help, present help, is urgently needed by many hundreds of poor families in this city, and Heaven only knows how they are to exist through the winter without it. In this cosy corner, by the warm fireside, let the well-to-do citizen reflect on the condition of the starving in many a fireless cellar and garret.

SLEIGHING.

Does it strike any one that sleighing is, so to speak, almost a lost art; that those grand old jubilees of snow, which we remember in our childhood, are very rare, and that the dragging of fancy vehicles, called sleighs, through the muddy coating of the streets is a fine burlesque on the sleighing parties of even ten or twelve years ago? Perhaps snow is snow in the country yet, but it has changed its nature in Boston. One good day of high-piled white drifts and jingling bells would be worth something. However, at it its best, city sleighing is not worth much, you must leave bricks and mortar to enjoy it thoroughly, and starting from some hospitable farm-house with a beau for every girl—no odd ones amongst the party—fly by moonlight over the unmilched whiteness to the sound of laugh, and song, and bell tinkle.

And even consider the mirth and sociability. There is such a chance for a whisper meant for one only; for a pressure of the fingers; perhaps for the twining of an arm about a taper waist, and the girl under the buffalo robe wishes life were one long sleigh-ride with Charlie, and Charlie thinks of wedding rings and a bridal veil and eternal felicity. By the way, old married folks never seem to care for sleigh-rides; I wonder why? Then, when the long, cold mirthful journey is over, you must come to another farm house, and there must be a supper, and bright lights, and welcoming faces, and a fiddler; and when the chickens, and ham, and mince pies, and coffee, and dear knows what beside, have been discussed, the great kitchen must be cleared, and the music begin, and with it dancing.

Oh, what fun there can be in a "Virginia Reel," or a cotillion, or a jig, after a sleigh-ride in the country! How the fiddlers bow, and the dancers' feet fly! How, when dancing has a lull, games are proposed, "blind man's buff," "forfeits," "puss in the corner," and what a chance it gives the boys to kiss the girls, and the girls to say they never shall, and yield like very cowards at last.

And above all, how all things merge into dancing again, and the "wee sma' hours" come on and grow larger; and finally, when eyes grow heavy, what "shake downs" are made in the great bed-rooms for the girls, and how the boys find places in the wide garret; and after breakfast, what a ride there is home again in the morning light! One who has never been in the country knows nothing of sleigh-rides.

THE NORTH END.

Few of our citizens appreciate that part of Boston popularly known as the North End. It is to most of them a myth, an unknown region like Nova Zembla or Patagonia,—at that place they often hear of but never saw, and about which they think and care little or nothing. And that is all natural enough, since of late it has become so associated with those who go down to the sea in ships that we hardly think of it in any other connection; and yet the North End is really classic ground. The historian of Boston, and indeed of New England, as naturally turns toward it as the pious Mussulman turns toward Mecca.

Time was when the North End was the court of the town, when all who were stylish and nobby lived about Copp's Hill, in Prince street, and on and about North square. There in Copp's Hill burying ground, lie in state many of the mighty dead of old colonial times. Times and fashions, however, change. Like other famous places, the North End, in process of time, lost its ancient prestige. New leaders of fashion arose, and founded Park, Pearl and Tremont streets, but the old North End aristocracy never wavered in its allegiance. It always remained true to its first love.

The Copp's Hill burying-ground is our Westminster Abbey. A ramble there is like stepping back two hundred years. You walk among the late loving subjects of the Stuarts and King Georges, and hold sweet converse with the shades of those doughty old champions of the faith, the Mathers and Coopers and Thatchers of old Colonial days. You seem there to be on table land from which the stream of our early Colonial knowledge flow. You escape the horrible newness of every other part of Boston. There is an odor of olden times and other days about it that is truly refreshing.

In its old quarter, the old mansions, though in some degree deposed from their old estate and calling, are stately and elegant still. In their every door way, window-sill, and even chimney top, the gentle origin of the old edifice is seen cropping out, so that it could no more be taken for one of the mushroom erections of to-day than one of Copley's portraits of a fine lady of that period could be mistaken for one of our modern inventions. Seen by the dim glimpses of the moon, you can hardly resist the impression that the old occupants are still there, lean and slippered, and hectic perhaps, but still alive, full of loyalty to the King, and steadfast in the old faith. You can almost fancy you see them gliding in and out of the old mansions, bewigged and beruffled as of yore. And the very names of the streets, alleys and lanes all help along the illusion; they perpetuate the names of so many of the ruling families of these earlier days.

It is said that Cotton Mather, who lived and died and lies buried at the North End, has left on the whole neighborhood the impress of his peculiarly superstitious character; so that, if a witch has a mind to ride out on a broom, at any time, or a ghost stalks forth of a night, they are sure to appear at the North End. All very likely: for no ghost with his wits about him, that had slept long, would think of revisiting any of the new parts of Boston, without a guide book; and even then, the names of our streets are so often changed, he would be a stranger in a strange land; whereas, in the old quarters at the North End, the most ancient ghost would find himself at home. There is a sort of dreariness in the old quarter, that quite comports with those old traditions. It is said, too, that stars shoot and meteors blaze oftener than elsewhere, and that all the mythological and legendary lore of a century ago is in vogue there still.

The lineal descendants of many of the first settlers are still there, occupying the old homesteads, husbanding a bit of wharf property, or corner lot, and burying their dead in the old tomb, and they are looked up to with the reverence that belongs to worthy lineage and the possession of hereditary estates. The good old custom of beguiling the long evenings with tales of haunted houses, and witches working their incarnations in secret places, so popular years ago, now prevails there, and many is the house still standing that is pointed out as the scene of some wonderful adventure years ago. They show the old jail in the time of the buccaneers, where the pirates were held and hung; the house of the patriot Samuel Adams, and that of Cotton Mather, the greatest book-worm and most voluminous writer that New England ever produced; that, too, of Gov. Belcher, the most accomplished gentleman of New England; the royal custom house, where the tea tax was levied and paid, and the homes and graves of more celebrities and worthies than are to be found in the same space anywhere else in America.

The residents of the old quarter are the most primitive of people. They not only keep to the old mansion, but to the old ways. The old Dutch tiles still adorn their chimneys; the great, old-fashioned, ponderous clock, still ticks in the entry, and pewter platters glisten in the buttery. They have but little commerce with the new parts of the city, hardly ever journeying farther south than Faneuil Hall and the Market. They never go gadding in rail cars or on steamboats, but insist that the only way to travel is by water in a rowboat crosshanded. They prognosticate the weather by the Farmers' Almanac, wean their children and slaughter their swine when the sign is right, never undertake any new enterprise on Friday, and with pious care nail a horse-shoe over the door to keep the witches off. Year by year they are being hemmed in more and more, but the more ingruous the new generation, the more the old regime becomes a peculiar generation. The city has no worthier people and contains no spot half so hallowed. May the shadow of both never be less.

TIT-BIT.

Eating houses in Boston have had an important mission during the last thirty years. They have been great, though humble agents in the civilization of the community. By their magical influence a refined taste has sprung up, through the facilities they afford, which leave a tangible and beneficial impression on the next generation. Among the oldest and best conducted in Boston is Fuller's, No. 2 Wilson Lane. We have advertised this popular place under different proprietors, for the last thirty years, and it never was better conducted than under Mr. Fuller's management. The head cook in his employ is one of the best in Boston, He entered the establishment when a mere boy, 28 years since.

Agents and Canvassers Wanted!

A Splendid Opportunity for active parties to canvass for a pair of unusually popular Engravings, just issued. The Departure of the Pilgrim Fathers for America; and The Landing of the Pilgrims in America. Price so low that every Family will purchase.

Address, for terms,
CALDWELL, & CO.,
82 Cedar Street, New York.

TWO ELEGANT WORKS OF ART, Just Issued!

The Departure of the Pilgrim Fathers for America, and The Landing of the Pilgrims in America.

Each Engraving 26 x 34 inches, price only $1,50 each, by mail. These constitute the finest pair of companion Engravings ever published in the United States. They were engraved by the most eminent steel plate Engraver in this country, JOHN C. McRAE, of New York City, and for artistic skill and high beauty were never excelled. Mr. McRAE is great in whatever he attempts, but in these gems he has outdone himself. He was determined to render them enduring monuments of his skill, and no pains or expense have been spared to make them perfect works of Art, and to far excel any similar works ever issued in this country. They are of the same size, and in every respect equal to, the elegant English Engravings of the same subjects, which cannot be bought in this country for less than twelve dollars and fifty cents, each copy.

We have undertaken a gigantic enterprise, and one in which we earnestly invite the cooperation of all lovers of the beautiful in Art. We must sell fifty thousand copies of each of these magnificent Engravings, and to accomplish this have placed the price low enough to bring them within the reach of every one.—

Will you help us? And in so doing confer a life long pleasure on yourself! Such a great value in Art for so little money, was never before offered, and nothing short of a very large sale will remunerate us. Such Splendid Parlor Gems are usually published at $5 or $10 each, but we have determined to appeal to the public, to sustain us in our efforts to bring them within the reach of every family in the land.

The great historical value of these pictures—their great elegance and beauty, will render them of incalculable value to every home.

All honor to the "Mayflower Puritans"—the brave and true.

What sought they thus afar?
Bright jewels, bright jewels of the mine?
The wealth of seas, the spoils of war?—
They sought a faith's pure shrine!
Oh! call it holy ground,
The spot where first they trod—
They have left unchanged what there they [found—
FREEDOM TO WORSHIP GOD!

STURGIS'S ELECTRIC COMPOUND!

AN EFFECTUAL CURE FOR

NEURALGIA AND RHEUMATISM.

Also, invaluable for Spinal Irritation, Hip Complaints, Ague in the Face, Tooth Ache, Pain in the Side, Back, Limbs, Ear Ache, Lumbago, &c.

The proprietor, in offering this medicine to the public, desires to state that this preparation does not belong to the class called patent medicines. Its value has been tested for many years, and it has been found fully adequate to the removal of many obstinate cases of the above complaint, which other celebrated remedies had failed to reach, and which had baffled the skill of eminent physicians. The proprietor does not claim that it will cure but one class of disease. All persons who are afflicted with any of these complaints are earnestly requested to try this Compound and judge for themselves.

AMONG THE ADVANTAGES OF THIS MEDICINE ARE THE FOLLOWING:

Its effect is very rapid—in most cases instantaneous.
It is external in its application, and the patient runs no risk in using it. It does not strike to the stomach.
It reaches the nerves and muscles, as it is believed no other medicine does.
It has cured some of the most violent and obstinate cases of Neuralgia ever known.
It can be used on a child or on an aged person alike.
While it is very powerful, it is perfectly harmless.
The proprietor has been allowed to publish the names of many persons who have used the Compound with the most beneficial results. He inserts here a few of them. They are among the most respectable citizens of Boston, and their residences and places are given:

The proprietor is permitted to publish the following letter from O. C. Pitkin, Esq., Principal of the High School in the city of Chelsea, and well known as one of the most successful teachers in New England:

CHELSEA, April 30, 1863.

FRIEND WILLIAMS:—Yours of the 26th is received. My wife was troubled with severe Neuralgia in the face. She tried your Compound with decidedly good effect. I think it is an excellent article, and have recommended it in one instance, where it also produced good effect. You certainly have the liberty to refer to me.

With much respect, yours truly,

GENERAL ORDER, No. 4.

I. By General Orders of the War Department, Series of 1864, a Bounty of $400 will be paid to Veteran Volunteers who enlist or re-enlist under existing orders, and a Bounty of $300 will be paid to raw recruits who enlist for ANY three years organization, authorized by the War Department, either in service or in process of completion, until the first day of March, 1864.

II. Under the present arrangement of the War Department, towns and wards which have filled their quotas under the present call, may go on and continue their enlistments, and their surplus men, so raised, will be credited to them under any future call. The Governor advises all to take advantage of the present enthusiasm for enlistment, and make it available. The State Bounty will continue to be paid, until the public promulgation of orders to the contrary.

III. Officers and men of regiments returning on furloughs and to recruit, will report immediately to the recruiting agents of their respective towns and wards, for such duty as they are able to perform. And such recruiting agents are desired to employ these returning veterans, as subordinate recruiting agents, and encourage their efforts by paying them the highest premium which they pay to any person for obtaining recruits. It is desired that every soldier, on returning to his regimental rendezvous, will take with him at least one recruit whom he has himself procured.

IV. In behalf of the people of Massachusetts, the Governor congratulates and thanks the officers and men of these noble organizations for what they have dared and what they have done.

By order of His Excellency JOHN A. ANDREW, Governor and Commander-in-Chief.

A Lecture on the Nature, Treatment & Radical

Cure of Seminal Weakness, or Spermatorrhœa, induced by Self-Abuse; Involuntary Emissions, Impotency, Nervous Debility, and Impediments to Marriage generally; Consumption, Epilepsy and Fits; Mental and Physical Incapacity, &c.—By ROB. J. CULVERWELL, M. D., Author of "The Green Book," &c.

The world-renowned author, in this admirable Lecture, clearly proves from his own experience that the awful consequences of Self-Abuse may be effectually removed without medicine, and without dangerous surgical operations, bougies, instruments, rings or cordials, pointing out a mode of cure at once certain and effectual, by which every sufferer, no matter what his condition may be, may cure himself cheaply, privately, and radically. This lecture will prove a boon to thousands and thousands.

Miscellaneous.

Epicurean Dishes.—Ants are eaten in many countries. In Brazil the largest species are prepared with a sauce of resin. In Africa they stew them with butter.—In the East Indies they are caught in pits, carefully roasted like coffee, and eaten by mouthfulls afterwards. Mr. Smeathman says—"I have eaten them several times, dressed in this way, and think them delicate, nourishing, and wholesome. They are something sweeter, though not so fat and clogging, as the caterpillar and maggot, or the palm-tree snout-beetle, which is served up at the luxurious tables of the West Indian epicures, particularly the French, as the greatest dainty of the Western world." A curry of ants' eggs is a very costly luxury in Siam; and in Mexico the people have, from time immemorial, eaten the eggs of water insects which prevail in the lagunes of that city. The Ceylonese, ungrateful wretches, eat the bees after robing them of their honey. The African bushmen eat all the caterpillars they find. A bushman would be a valuable acquisition for a market-gardener's cabbage-field. The Australians are notorious as maggot eaters; and the Chinese, who waste nothing, eat the chrysalis of the silk-worm, after they have wound the silk from its cocoon. It is said that the North American Indians used to eat locusts. The African bushman and the savages of New Caledonia are very fond of spiders roasted. This singular taste is not unknown even in Europe. Reaumur tells of a young lady who, when walking in her garden, used to eat all the spiders she could catch.—Lalande, the French astronomer, was equally fond of them; and a German, immortalized by Rosel, used to spread them on bread instead of butter!—The International Magazine.

Civilized Warfare. Professor Goldwin Smith has given his countrymen something to think of. He has written to the London Daily News, making some unpleasant statements as to the conduct of the war in New Zealand. It seems that occasionally a bloodhound is employed in hunting the savages, that skulls are set on poles and pelted by the volunteer troops and other things done, which may do for New Zealand, but do not sound well in London.

☞ Some years ago the Knickerbocker offered a brass quarter dollar to the person who could find a rhyme to the word "window." The prize was earned in the following effort, which furnishes the rhyme, and has some fun in it as well:

A cruel man a beetle caught,
And to the wall him pinned, oh!
Then said the beetle to the crowd,
"Though stuck up, I am not proud,"
And his soul went out of the window.

☞ Nothing can be so kind as a woman's heart and less likely to inflict a blow, and yet, strange, to say, it is never so happy as when it is beating.

☞ Fontenelle describes a lover as a man who, in his anxiety to obtain possession of another, loses possession of himself.

☞ The grocer who is dishonest in the use of his scales lies in weight to deceive.

Special Notices.

BELL'S SPECIFIC PILLS.—Warranted in all Cases.—Can be relied on! Never fail to cure! Do not nauseate! Are speedy in action! No change of diet required! Do not interfere with business pursuits! Can be used without detection! Upward of 200 cures the past month—some of them very severe cases. Over one hundred physicians have used them in their practice, and all speak well of their efficacy, and approve of their composition, which is entirely vegetable, and harmless on the system. Hundreds of certificates can be shown.

Bell's Specific Pills are the original and only genuine Specific Pill. They are adapted for male and female, old or young, and the only reliable remedy for effecting a permanent and speedy cure in all cases of Spermatorrhea, or Seminal Weakness, with all its train of evils, such as Urethral and Vaginal Discharges, Gleet, the Whites, Nightly or Involuntary Emissions, Incontinence, Genital Debility and Irritability, Impotence, Weakness or Loss of Power, Nervous Debility, &c., &c., all of which arise principally from Sexual Excesses or Self-Abuse, or some constitutional derangement, and incapacitates the sufferer from fulfilling the duties of married life. In all sexual diseases, as Gonorrhea, Gleet, and Strictures, and in Diseases of the Bladder and Kidneys, they act as a charm! Relief is experienced by taking a single box. Sold by all the principal druggists. Price $1.

They will be sent by mail, securely sealed, and confidentially, on receipt of the money, by

J. BRYAN, M. D.,
No. 76 Cedar street, New York,

Consulting Physician for the treatment of Seminal, Urinary, Sexual, and Nervous Diseases, who will send, free to all, the following valuable work, in sealed envelope:

The Fiftieth Thousand.—DR. BELL'S TREATISE on Self-Abuse, Premature Decay, Impotence and Loss of Power, Sexual Diseases, Seminal Weakness, Nightly Emissions, Genital Debility, &c., &c., a pamphlet of 64 pages, containing important advice to the afflicted, and which should be read by every sufferer, as the means of cure in the severest stages is plainly set forth. Two stamps required to pay postage.

December 9, 1863—1 yr.

Important to Ladies.—Dr. Harvey's Female Pills have never yet failed in removing difficulties arising from obstruction, or stoppage of nature, or in restoring the system to perfect health when suffering from Spinal Affections, Prolapsus, Uteri, the Whites, or other weakness of the Uterine Organs. The Pills are perfectly harmless on the constitution, and may be taken by the most delicate female without causing distress—the same time they act like a charm by strengthening, invigorating and restoring the system to a healthy condition, and by bringing on the monthly period with regularity, no matter from what causes the obstruction may arise. They should, however, NOT be taken during the first three or four months of pregnancy, though safe at any other time, as miscarriage would be the result.

Each box contains 60 Pills. Price $1.

Dr. HARVEY'S TREATISE on Diseases of Females, Pregnancy, Miscarriage, Barrenness, Sterility, Reproduction, and Abuses of Nature, and emphatically the Ladies' Private Medical Adviser, a pamphlet of 64 pages, sent free to any address. Six cents required to pay postage.

The Pills and book will be sent by mail when desired, securely sealed, and prepaid, by

J. BRYAN, M. D., General Agent,
No. 76 Cedar street, New York.

☞ Sold by all the principal druggists.
December 9, 1863—1 yr.

TERRIBLE DISCLOSURES—SECRETS FOR THE MILLION!—A most valuable and wonderful publication. A work of 400 pages, and 30 colored engravings. DR. HUNTER'S VADE MECUM, an original and popular treatise on Man and Woman, their Physiology, Functions, and Sexual Disorders of every kind, with Never-Failing Remedies for their speedy cure. The practice of Dr. Hunter has long been, and still is, unbounded, but at the earnest solicitation of numerous persons, he has been induced to extend his medical usefulness through the medium of his "Vade Mecum." It is a volume that should be in the hands of every family in the land, as a preventive of secret vices, or as a guide for the alleviation of one of the most awful and destructive scourges ever visited mankind. One copy, securely enveloped, will be forwarded free of postage to any part of the United States for 50 cents in post office stamps or 3 copies for $1. Address, post paid, DR. Cures Dyspepsia, Liver Complaint, Headache, Debility, Nervousness, Depression of Spirits, Constipation, Colic, Intermittent Fevers, Cramps and Spasms, and all Complaints of either Sex, arising from Bodily Weakness whether inherent in the system or produced by special causes.

Nothing that is not wholesome, genial and restorative in its nature enters into the composition of HOSTETTER'S STOMACH BITTERS. This popular preparation contains no mineral of any kind, no deadly botanical element; no fiery excitant: but it is a combination of the extracts of rare balsamic herbs and plants with the purest and mildest of all diffusive stimulants.

It is well to be forearmed against disease, and, so far as the human system can be protected by human means against maladies engendered by an unwholesome atmosphere, impure water and other external causes, HOSTETTER'S BITTERS may be relied on as a safeguard.

In districts infested with Fever and Ague, it has been found infallible as a preventive and irresistible as a remedy and thousands who resort to it under apprehension of an attack, escape the scourage; and thousands who neglect to avail themselves of its protective qualities in advance, are cured by a very brief course of this marvelous medicine. Fever and Ague patients, after being plied with quinine for months in vain, until fairly saturated with that dangerous alkaloid, are not unfrequently restored to health within a few days by the use of HOSTETTER'S BITTERS.

The weak stomach is rapidly invigorated and the appetite restored by this agreeable Tonic, and hence it works wonders in cases of Dyspepsia and in less confirmed forms of Indigestion. Acting as a gentle and painless appetient, as well as upon the liver, it also invariably relieves the Constipation superinduced by irregular action of the digestive and secretive organs.

Persons of feeble habit, liable to Nervous Attacks, Lowness of Spirits and Fits of Languor, find prompt and permanent relief from the Bitters. The testimony on this point is most conclusive, and from both sexes.

The agony of Bilious Colic is immediately assuaged by a single dose of the stimulant, and by occasionally resorting to it, the return of the complaint may be prevented.

As a General Tonic, HOSTETTER'S BITTERS produce effects which must be experienced or witnessed before they can be fully appreciated. In cases of Constitutional Weakness, Premature Decay and Debility and Decrepitude arising from Old Age, it exercises the electric influence. In the convalescent stages of all diseases it operates as a delightful invigorant. When the powers of nature are relaxed, it operates to re-enforce and re-establish them.

Last, but not least, it is The Only Safe Stimulant, being manufactured from sound and innocuous materials, and entirely free from the acid elements present more or less in all the ordinary tonics and stomachics of the day.

No family medicine has been so universally, and, it may be truly added, deservedly popular with the intelligent portion of the community, as HOSTETTER'S BITTERS.

HELMBOLD'S
GENUINE PREPARATIONS.

'COMPOUND FLUID EXTRACT BUCHU, a Positive and Specific Remedy for diseases of the Bladder, Kidneys, Gravel, and Dropsical Swellings.

This Medicine increases the power of Digestion, and excite the Absorbents into healthy action, by which the Wtaery or Calcareous depositions, and all Unnatural Enlargements are reduced, as well as Pain and Inflammation.

HELMBOLD'S EXTRACT BUCHU.

For Weaknesses arising from Excesses, Habits of Dissipation, Early Indiscretion of Abuse, attended with the following symptoms:—

Indisposition to Exertion,	Loss of Power,
Loss of Memory,	Difficulty of Breathing,
Weak Nerves,	Trembling,
Horror of Disease,	Wakefulness,
Dimness of Vision,	Pain in the Back,
Universal Lassitude of the Muscular System,
Hot Hands,	Flushing of the Body,
Dryness of the Skin,	Eruptions on the Face,
Pallid Countenance.

These symptoms, if allowed to go on, which this medicine invariably removes, soon follows

Impotency, Fatuity, Epileptic Fits,

In one of which the patient may expire.

Who can say that they are not frequently followed by those "Direful Diseases,"

"INSANITY AND CONSUMPTION."

Many are aware of the cause of their suffering, BUT NONE WILL CONFESS THE RECORDS OF THE INSANE ASYLUMS,

And Melancholy Deaths by Consumption bear ample witness to the Truth of the assertion.

The Constitution once effected with Organic Weakness requires the aid of Medicine to Strengthen and Invigorate the system,

Which Helmbold's EXTRACT BUCHU invariably does. A Trial will convince the most skeptical.

FEMALES—FEMALES—FEMALES.

In many Affections peculiar to Females the Extract Buchu is unequalled by any other remedy, as in Chlorosis or Retention, Irregularity, Painfulness, or Suppression of Customary Evacuations, Ulcerated Scirrhous state of the Uterus, Leuchorrhoea or Whites, sterility, and for all complaints incident to the sex, whether arising from indiscretion or Habits of Dissipation, or in the

DECLINE OR CHANGE OF LIFE.

Take no more Balsam, Mercury, or unpleasant Medicines for unpleasant and dangerous diseases.

HELMBOLD'S EXTRACT BUCHU AND IMPROVED ROSE WASH CURES

SECRET DISEASES

In all their Stages,	At little Expense.
Little or no change in Diet,	No Inconvenience.
And no Exposure.

It causes a frequent desire and gives strength to Urinate, thereby Removing Obstructions, Preventing and Curing Strictures of the Urethra, allaying Pain and Inflammation, so frequent in this class of diseases, and expelling all Poisonous, Diseased and wornout Matter.

Thousands upon Thousands who have been the Victims of Quacks, and who have paid heavy fees to be cured in a short time, have found they were deceived, and that the "POISON" has, by the use of "Powerful Astringents," been dried up in the system, to break out in an aggravated form, and perhaps after Marriage.

Use Helmbold's Extract Buchu for all affections and diseases of the URINARY ORGANS, whether existing in MALE or FEMALE, from whatever cause originating and no matter of HOW LONG STANDING.

Diseases of these Organs requires the aid of a DIURETIC. HELMBOLD'S EXTRACT BUCHU IS THE GREAT DIURETIC, and is certain to have the desired effect in all Diseases for which it is Recommended.

Evidence of the most reliable and responsible character will accompany the medicine.

Important to the Afflicted.

Dr. Dow continues to be consulted at his office, Nos. 7 and 9 Endicott street, Boston, on all diseases of a

PRIVATE OR DELICATE NATURE.

By a long course of study and practical experience of unlimited extent. Dr. D. has now the gratification of presenting the unfortunate with remedies that have never, since he first introduced them, failed to cure the most alarming cases of

GONORRHŒA AND SYPHILIS.

Beneath his treatment, all the horrors of venerea and impure blood, Impotency, Scrofula, Gonorrhoea Ulcers, pain and distress in the regions of procreation, Inflammation of the Bladder and Kidneys, Hydrocele, Abcesses, Humors, frightful Swellings, and the long train of horrible symptoms attending this class of disease, are made to become as harmless as the simplest ailings of a child.

SEMINAL WEAKNESS.

Dr. D. devotes a great part of his time to the treatment of those cases caused by a secret and solitary habit, which ruins the body and mind, unfitting the unfortunate individual for business or society. Some of the sad and melancholy effects produced by early habits of youth, are Weakness of the Back and limbs, Dizziness of the head, Dimness of sight, Palpitation of the heart, Dyspepsia, Nervousness, Derangement of the digestive functions, Symptoms of Consumption, &c. The fearful effects on the mind are much to be dreaded; loss of memory, confusion of ideas, depression of spirits, evil forebodings, aversion of society, self-distrust, timidity, &c., are among the evils produced. Such persons should, before contemplating matrimony, consult a physician of experience, and be at once restored to health and happiness.

Patients who wish to remain under Dr. Dow's treatment a few days or weeks, will be furnished with pleasant rooms, and charges for board moderate.

Medicines sent to all parts of the country, with full directions for use, on receiving description of your cases. Dr. Dow has also for sale the French Capottes, warranted the best preventive. Order by mail, 3 or $1 and a red stamp.

CAUTION

TO FEMALES IN DELICATE HEALTH.

DR. DOW, Physician and Surgeon, 7 and 9 Endicot street, Boston, is consulted daily for all diseases incident to the female system. Prolapsus Uteri, or falling of the Womb, Fluor Albus, Suppression, and other menstrual derangements, are all treated upon new pathological principles, and speedy relief guaranteed in a very few days. So invariably certain is the new mode of treatment, that most obstinate complaints yield under it, and the afflicted person soon rejoices in perfect health.

Dr. Dow has no doubt had greater experience in the cure of diseases of women and children, than any other physician in Boston.

Boarding accommodations for patients who may wish to stay in Boston a few days under his treatment.

Dr. Dow, since 1845, having confined his whole attention to an office practice, for the cure of Private Diseases and Female Complaints, acknowledges no superior in the United States.

N. B.—All letters must contain four red stamps, or they will not be answered.

Office Hours from 8 a. m. to 9 p. m.

CERTAIN CURE

IN ALL CASES, OR NO CHARGES MADE.

Dr. Dow is consulted daily, from 8 a. m. to 8 p. m., as above, upon all difficult and chronic diseases of every name and nature, having by his unwearied attention and extraordinary success gained a reputation which calls patients from all parts of the country to obtain advice.

Among the physicians in Boston, none stand higher in the profession than the celebrated DR. DOW, No. 7 Endicott street, Boston. Those who need the services of an experienced physician and surgeon should give him a call. P. S.—Dr. Dow imports and has for sale a new article, called the French Secret. Order by mail. Two for $1 and a red stamp.

LYON'S KATHAIRON.

This delightful article for preserving and beautifyg the human hair, is again put up by the original oprietor, and is now made with the same care, skill d attention, which first created its immense and precedented sales of over one million bottles anally! It is still sold at 25 cents in large bottles. wo million bottles can easily be sold in a year when is again known that the Kathairon is not only the ost delightful hair dressing in the world, but that it eanses the scalp of scurf and dandruff, gives the ir a lively, rich luxuriant growth, and prevents it om turning gray. These are considerations worth owing. The Kathairon has been tested for over elve years, and is warranted as described. Any ly who values a beautiful head of hair will use the thairon. It is finely perfumed, cheap and valuable is sold by all respectable dealers throughout the orld.

D. S. BARNES & CO.,
New-York.

[From the Richmond Whig.]

The Charleston Courier makes a timely suggestion recommending the attention of our government to e naturalization and cultivation of Calisaya, for preservation of the health of our soldiers. This ticle has a peculiar effect upon the liver, and guards e system against disease by exposure and irregular t. It is said that the great success of the Plantan Bitters of Dr. Drake, which, previous to our happy difficulties was found in most Southern mes, was owing to the extract of Calisaya Bark ich it contained as one of its principal ingredis.—"In confirmation of this, we have heard one our most distinguished physicians remark, that enever he felt unwell from ordinary dietetic or nospheric causes, he invariably relieved himself Plantation Bitters. Now that these Bitters can be obtained, a substitute should be prepared.— e understand our government has opened negotians with Dr. Drake, through a secret agent, but h what truth we do not know." * * * * *
Ve are exceedingly obliged to the Richmond Whig its remembrance of "Auld Lang Syne," but we assure "Our Government" that the Plantation ters are not for sale to any "secret agents," North South. There is probably several other things tha' ur Government" will yet want.
Ve know that we have the best and most popular dicine in the world. We are not afraid to show at it is composed of.
Physicians are compelled to recommend it.
ALISAYA BARK has been celebrated for over two dred years, and was sold during the reign of Louis I, King of France, for the enormous price of its weight in silver. It is remarkable for Dyspepsia, vers, Weakness, Constipation, &c.
ASCARILLA BARK.—For Diarrhea, Colic, and dises of the stomach and bowels.

Hunnewell's Great Remedies.

WHAT EVERY FAMILY SHOULD HAVE IN THE HOUSE AND WHY:

☞ They should have HUNNEWELL'S UNIVERSAL COUGH REMEDY, because it effectually cures Colds, Whooping and Common Coughs, Sore Throat, Hoarseness, and is the most simple and perfect Soothing Syrup in the world. For old and young, by day and night, it may be used with the greatest freedom, and three-fourths of the deaths by Consumption stopped.

They should have HUNNEWELL'S TOLU ANODYNE, because it is a perfect remedy for Neuralgia, Nervous or Sick Headache, Tooth, and Earache, Pain in Stomach, or Bowels, Genuine Cholera Morbus, Rheumatism, Distress after Eating, Nervousness, Hysteria, and the chief of all causes of disease, and Insanity, Loss of Sleep. Its character, though active, is simple; its action in perfect conformity to nature; its end cure, or relief.

For the pains in Monthly Menstruation a perfect relief, while nature's after work is not disturbed, and one of the most important points in Medicine.

They should have HUNNEWELL'S ECLECTIC PILLS, because with seldom but a single Pill for a dose all derangements of the Stomach and Bowels are cured. They cure Indigestion, Dyspepsia, Headache, when caused by foul stomach, Loss of Appetite, Billiousness, so often and so erroneously treated with Mercurials, Jaundice. For Worms a sure cure.

They act simple, assist nature, do not make a Pill Box of the stomach, as is the most fatal error of taking so many Pills at a dose and then, what is important to every Family and every Purse, one bottle goes as far as two or three of what is ordinarily sold.

The confidence of all is asked to test
Hunnewell's Universal Cough Remedy.
Hunnewell's Tolu Anodyne.
Hunnewell's Eclectic Pills.

☞ Fac-simile of J. L. Hunnewell's signature over corks of genuine only.

Selected Poetry.

SONG OF THE BLACKSMITH'S WIFE.

My husband's a blacksmith, and where will you find
A man more industrious, faithful and kind?
He's determined to thrive, and in that we agree,
For the ring of his anvil is music to me.

Though dark his complexion and grimy his shirt,
Hard and thorny his hand and disfigured with dirt;
Yet in that rude casket a jewel I see,
And the ring of his anvil is music to me.

Ere Aurora's fair nymphs chase the night from the skies,
Ere the sun pierce the glooming, from bed he does rise,
Ere the lark leaves her nest, at his forge he will be,
And the ring of his anvil is music to me.

Though to labor he owns, we are far from being poor,
Industry has banished gaunt want from our door;
For the blacksmith's a man independent and free,
And the ring of his anvil is music to me.

At a distance from home I have seen with delight,
The red sparks from his chimney illumine the night,
And I have heard the fast strokes on the anvil rebound,
And my heart has leaped up at the musical sound.

Those strokes on the anvil, say, what do they prove?
Forethought and affection, industry and love;
A resolve to be honest, respected and free!
That's the tune on the anvil that's music to me.

ALL IN THE GRAVEYARD.—Rich scenes occur in house hunting days, and every unfortunate father with a large family is put to his trumps to secure a home, children not being favorites with landlords.

Mr. Smithers was thus blessed, and being obliged to change his quarters set out with Mrs. S. and his nine hopefuls on the hunt. Tenement after tenement was found, but the sight of the olive branches brought a flat refusal. No, sir! there wasn't anything to be rented to such a family! All one day, and the next until near night, they wandered, tired and hungry when, happening to pass a graveyard, Smithers was suddenly seized with a brilliant idea.

"You and the children go in there, my dear, till I look around and see if there is anything in the neighborhood," he said.

The request was complied with, and soon Smithers found a house, just to his liking.

"Any children?" asked the landlord.

"All in the grave-yard," answered Smithers, with face as solemn as one of the tombstones.

Soon the bargain was struck, lease drawn, and first quarter's rent paid, and the father went rejoicing on his way. But the landlord's face was equally solemn when the father, mother, and nine children took possession on the next day.

"I thought," said he, with something that sounded very much like an oath, "I thought you told me your children were all in the graveyard?"

"So they were," said Smithers, with a very insinuating smile; "so they were, but I didn't say they were dead!"

He had taken the house and taken the landlord in at the same time.

IK MARVEL ON HIS FARM.

The following 'horse trade' is recorded in Ik Marvel's new book. One of the conditions of making money by a farm is the necessity of a constant dickering—a duty which was not at all to his taste, and which he endeavored to shirk as far as possible by handing it over to his shrewd foreman. But sometimes a customer arrives who insists on talking with the 'boss.'

Such an one had dropped in, on a morning on which you happen to be deeply engaged. He wishes to 'take a look' at a horse which he has seen advertised as for sale. The stable is free to his observation, and the attentive Pat is at hand; but the customer wants to talk with the 'Squire.'

It is a staunch Canadian horse, for which you have no further use. You paid for him six months ago, a hundred and fifty dollars, as his price. I never yet met a man who sold a horse for as much as he gave—unless he were a jockey; I never expect to.

'Mornin', Squire.'

'Good morning.'

'Bin a lookin' at yer hoss.'

'Ah!'

'Middlin' lump of a hoss.'

'Yes—a nice horse.'

'D'n know as you know it, but sich hosses ain't so salable as they was a spell back.'

'Ah!'

'They're gittin a fancy for bigger hosses.'

Silence.

'Put that pony to a heavy cart, and he wouldn't do nothin'.'

'You are slightly mistaken; he's a capital cart-horse.'

'Well, I don't say but what he'd be handy with a lightish load. Don't call him a spavined, do ye?'

'No; perfectly sound.'

'That looks kinder like a spavin,'—rubbing his hind off leg.

'Ain't much of a hoss doctor, be ye?'

'Not much'

'Don't kick, dooz he?'

'No.'

'Them little Kanucks is apt to kick.'

Silence and impatient movement, which I work off by pulling out my watch.

'What time o' day's got to be?'

'Eleven.'

'Thunder! I must be a goin'—should like to trade, Squire; but I guess we can't agree. I s'pose yo'd be askin' as much as—sixty—or—seventy dollars for that are hoss—wouldn't ye?'

'A hundred dollars is the price, and I gave fifty more.'

'Don't say! Gave a thunderin' sight too much, Squire.'

'Pat, you may put up the horse; I don't think the gentleman wants him.'

'Look o' here, Squire; ef you was to say—something—like—seventy, or—seventy-five dollars, now—there might be some use in talkin'.'

'Not one bit of use' (impatiently)—turning on my heel.

'——Say, now, Squire—ever had him to plow?'

'Yes.'

'Work well?'

'Perfectly well.'

'Fractious, any? Them Kanucks is contrary critters when they've a mind to be.'

'He is quite gentle.'

'That's a good p'int; but them that's worked till they git quiet, kinder gits the spirit lost out on 'em—ain't so brisk when you put 'em to a wagin. Don't you find it so, Squire?'

'Not at all.'

'How old, Squire, did ye say he was?' (looking in his mouth again.)

'Seven.'

'Well—I guess he is; a good many figgers nigher that than he is tew, any way.'

'Patrick, you had better put this horse up, now.'

'Hold on, Squire,'—and taking out his purse, he counts; 'Seventy—eighty—and a five—and two—and a fifty—there Squire, 'taint worth talkin' about; I'll split the difference with ye, and take the horse.'

'Patrick, put him up.'

At which the customer is puzzled, hesitates, and the horse is entering the stable again, when he breaks out, explosively:

'——Well, Squire, here's your money; but you're the most thunderin' oneasy man for a dicker I ever traded with—I'll say that for ye.'

And the horse is transferred to his keeping.

'S'pose you throw in the halter and blanket, Squire, don't ye?'

'Give him the halter and blanket, Pat.'

'And, Pat, you ain't nary curry-comb you don't use, you could let me have?'

'Give him a curry-comb, Pat.'

'Squire, you're a clever man. Got most thro' y'r hayin'!'

'Nearly.'

'Well, I'm glad on't. Had kinder ketchin' weather up our way.'

CHARGE OF THE MULE BRIGADE

[On the night when General Geary's Division of the Twelfth Corps repulsed the attacking forces of Longstreet, at Wauhatchie, Tenn., a number of mules, affrighted by the noise of battle, dashed into the camp of Hampton's Legion, causing much dismay among the rebels, and compelling many of them to fall back under a supposed charge of cavalry.]

Half a mile, half a mile,
Half a mile onward,
Right toward the Georgia troops
Broke the two hundred;
"Forward the Mule Brigade!"
"Charge for the rebs!" they neighed;
Straight for the Georgia troops
Broke the two hundred.

"Forward the Mule Brigade!"
Was there a mule dismayed;
Not when the long ears felt
All their ropes sundered.
Theirs not to make reply;
Theirs not to reason why;
Theirs but to make them fly;
On! to the Georgia troops
Broke the two hundred.

Mules to the right of them,
Mules to the left of them,
Mules far behind them,
Pawed, neighed and thundered.
Breaking their own confines,
Breaking through Longstreet's lines,
Into the Georgia troops
Stormed the two hundred.

Wild all their eyes did glare,
Whisked all their tails in air,
Scattering the chivalry there,
While all the world wondered.
Not a mule back-bestraddled,
Yet how they all skedaddled!
Fled every Georgian,
Unsabred, unsaddled,
Scattered and sundered,
How they were routed there
By the two hundred.

Mules to the right of them,
Mules to the left of them,
Mules far behind him,
Pawed, neighed and thundered;
Followed by hoof and head,
Full many a hero fled,
Fain in the last ditch dead,
Back from an "ass's jaw,"
All that was left of them,
Left by the two hundred.

When can their glory fade?
Oh, the wild charge they made!
All the world wondered.
Honor the charge they made,
Honor the Mule Brigade,
Long-eared two hundred.

[From the Portsmouth Journal.]

MOLL PITCHER, THE FORTUNE TELLER.

In the town, now city, of Lynn, famous for the slipper or shoe trade, resided the subject of this sketch with her daughter, near High Rock, where the Hutchinsons now have a romantic residence.

As the writer, when about a dozen years of age, resided in Lynn and daily sold Mrs. Pitcher milk, he is enabled to describe her and her place of residence. Her dwelling was a dark wood-colored one-story house, fenced in, with two rooms front, like many such to be seen on the outskirts of most any town. Her personal appearance was much like many of the women engaged in the more honorable and worthy business of selling berries or greens; but it was her notoriety as a fortune teller that caused her to be pointed out, or looked upon by the simple people with superstition; perhaps the more so, as she lived near Salem, the renowned hot-bed of witchcraft; and Moll, like, the witches, was accused of, and believed to have been assisted by, or to have dealings with the "devil." No doubt the accusations were as true in her case as in that of her more unfortunate neighbors. What a commentary on religion, legal acumen and learning was that shallow, ignorant, but stupendous humbug! and had it not been that some one had discernment enough to accuse the judges of the same crimes for which they passed sentences of death on poor and defenceless women, it would have been impossible to tell when and where the fanatical delusion would have ended. But our story at this time is not with the "witches" but with the fortune teller; and we think we can tell how she contrived some of her manœuvres, without any other aid than any one can acquire who has a mind to give the subject attention.

When the writer used to pour the milk into her half-pint dipper, he well remembers how she seemed to look into and around him, as he now thinks, to discover some clue whereby, if he should call to have his fortune told, she could say something that would astonish, or tell; or make less artful folks than herself wonder. Some two or three anecdotes may serve to give an insight to how she disclosed fate, or if others wish to set up fortune-telling they can do it as well as she (without any aid, or need any of assistance from his "horned majesty,") as any other "palmist;" the origin of which word comes from telling fortunes by the lines in the palm of the hand. But Moll Pitcher had the reputation of telling "by the tea grounds in the bottom of a cup" as she rolled them or the cup "over."

FIRST—A rather over-credulous woman, and it has been thought that our ancient mother was somewhat so, disposed to give credit to the satanic mystery, called to have Moll Pitcher tell, first, "what she had called for" and if for anything lost, "when and where she should find it." So the sibyl sets herself about to comply with the request, or perhaps her mind was more intent on the fifty cents which she usually informed her customers, if paid in advance, enabled her to be more successful. After receiving the important fee, she used to place her customer facing the window, her own seat to the right or left, as most convenient, so that she could see the working of the face. Taking the cup in her hand with a few of the grains of what made such a rile between mother "Bull" and her intensified son Jonathan, placing her iron bowed, large, round spectacles in position, so that the motion of her eyes could not easily be seen, leaving a doubt whether she looked on the customer or in the cup, she would commence somewhat in this wise: Holding her head down and turning the cup—"Let me see—what is it you have come for—a husband?" Looks her all over; she has not the appearance of a maid, or clothed like a widow; notices that the upper part of her dress is made of a motherly pattern, and very readily comes to the conclusion that she is a married woman, and has not come to "see" or be told of her future husbadd, and tells her what she has not come for. Turns the cup again and repeats—"Let me see." As she turns and pretends to look into the cup, she watches the woman's face to ascertain its workings, and says, "Now what is it that you have come for?" and as her female callers generally come to ascertain about future husbands, or articles lost, guesses as some guess at the sex of babies—that if it is not a boy it must be a girl—without much risk of being mistaken; and so she concludes that as the woman has not called to consult about a husband she must have lost something, and tells her so, and it is admitted. Well, next is to tell what it is that is lost; looks at the woman's hands; they look as if she had washed the day before; remembers that it was not a good drying day, and that the present day is Tuesday, and comes to the conclusion that she must have lost some clothes from the line the night before, and tells the amount of her divinations, and as would be most reasonably expected, has it confirmed. Next is to tell where she shall find them. Looks her over again; never saw her before; must come from out of town; don't know her or her neighbors; no confederate has furnished any information; has no clue; cannot tell her anything more. So the customer goes as she came, minus fifty cents, but returns to tell her neighbors her story, and they are wonder-struck, astonished "how she could tell what she did not and what she did come for, without her telling her."

ANOTHER CASE.—Two sailors came to Lynn to consult "Moll Pitcher;" and, as sailors are apt to, called at the tavern first, took a drink, sat down to warm themselves, and as the heat within and the heat without begins to operate, they begin to talk and tell their business. Now fortune tellers, palmists and such as pretend to tell fates by cards, the stars or otherwise, have (like Vidoc, the celebrated police officer of Paris,) their confederates or informers on pay for information in their line. So by the time the sailors had got warm and were ready to start, a waiter of the house had preceded them, described their persons, and told all they said, which by his or her assistance, was their whole story; and when they arrived, Moll was amply ready to astonish them by calling each by name, and telling them where they came from, and what they came for, and had her answers all ready, what she could do and what she couldn't, very much to their astonishment. And so they go home and tell. So Moll's supernatural powers are fully credited in their neighborhood, and perhaps to a great extent among their shipmates wherever they may roam.

CASE THIRD.—In the same town resided Dr. Lummus, a hater and denouncer of Moll Pitcher, who often expressed his opinion of her in no complimentary terms, for which she concluded to give him a touch of her practice. The doctor, as was customary in old times, rode on horse back with saddle and saddlebags. He was a short, stout gentleman of the old school. Moll directed her confederate to go in the night and steal the important saddle and bring it to her, which he did; but not wishing to be convicted by its being in her possession, placed it where it would answer her purpose.

Next morning the vender of "black cow's milk," paregoric and pills, missed the important appendage, when preparing, after a summons, to attend a case where the fee was "five dollars if you pay now, or six if charged." The case was urgent and did not admit of delay. The doctor in a foam, made known the cause to his family, and they did not contribute to his equanimity, by seeming to be joyous that he would have to go and consult "Moll Pitcher," who he had so often and so contemptuously denounced; and with something the appearance of a dog when he is called to be whipped, the gentleman of long stockings and short unmentionables, went to the old crone. Moll was in ecstacies when she saw him approach her den, and hurried to meet him and exclaimed—"Doctor, I know what you are coming for; you have lost your saddle. Now you give me my fee, then go north on the Goose road two furlongs, look over the wall from your left shoulder, and you will find it." With a mixture of humility and increased detestation, the doctor necessarily complied as directed, shouldered his saddle and went home, where his mortification received an addition, by the uproarous delight of his own household, which seemed to have the same weaknessus of human nature that the artful and designing know so well how to operate upon, and have done it from the time of Saul, and continue to do it so extensively at the present day.

☞ Send your little child to bed happy. Whatever cares press, give it a warm good-night kiss as it goes to its pillow. The memory of this, in the stormy years which fate may have in store for the little one, will be like Bethlehem's star to the bewildered shepherds.

☞ The beard is said to grow about six and a half inches per year. We read of enormous lengths of beard and Hans Seinihgen, of Brunn, forgetting himself while ascending the stairs leading to the Common Council Chamber, tripped over his beard, fell backward, and was killed.

☞ "Do you like the game of draughts, madam?" "No, I don't like any game where I can't take a man without having to first jump over him," was the reply.

☞ 'Dawkter,' said an exquisite the other day, 'I want you to tell me what I can put into my head to make it right. 'It wants nothing but brains,' said the physician.

☞ The Springfield Republican asks what military order is like a lady crossing the street on a wet day? Dress up in front and close up in the rear.

☞ What is worse than raining cats and dogs? Hailing omnibuses.

The Wizard.

WEDNESDAY, FEBRUARY 10, 1864.

THE NEW CALL.

The President's last call for 200,000 "more" needs the prompt attention of our citizens, if they would avoid the stigma of a draft to fill the quota of our town. The time is short. We cannot move too soon or too energetically. Let every motive of interest, as well as patriotism, be urged to induce our young men to join the great army of the Republic and finish up the war. Everything we learn from the rebel South indicates that, if a strong effort is made in the early Spring, this "cruel war" will be brought to a speedy end. Let us all, then, work with our might to place good men in the ranks of our armies, that the final victory may not only be secure, but overwhelming. Each man should make it a personal concern, and not only make exertions, but sacrifices for the good cause. Our neighbor town of Danvers has responded nobly to the call, and more than filled her quota. Let not South Danvers lag behind. Many are now directly and personally interested in avoiding a draft. The second class is now undrstood to be merged in the first, and those belonging to it will be liable to the conscription, if volunteers do not come forward before the day appointed. Let, then, everything be done to stir up the patriotism of the people—of all the people. Old as well as young should now take hold manfully in this final effort. If money is wanted, it should flow as freely as water in this great cause. Let it come ever so freely, the sacrifice to those who remain at home is nothing, as compared with that of those who go. Make it, then, for the interest, as well as the duty of the young to go into the field. Let the young, and the middle-aged, too, consider whether the duty is not imperative for them to go personally into the ranks at this eleventh hour, when they can receive the full reward of those who have borne the heat and burthen of the day. It is now the time for action—prompt and energetic action—and the work is done.

☞ We would invite special attention to the notice in another column of the lecture on IRELAND by Mr THOMAS RAFTERY. The press in the different towns where this address has been delivered has bestowed high encomiums upon it. Its reception at Princeton and Andover, where, perhaps, the author is best known, was most flattering. The Princeton Standard says: "We most heartily congratulate our young friend upon his success. His most sanguine friends could not have expected a performance more to his credit, or their own gratification."

Mr. R. has twice visited his native island recently, and with a glow of revived feeling and much fresh material, has compiled this lecture. It is believed that those who attend on Thursday (to-morrow) evening will gain much information entirely new, and accessible in none of our libraries. This young man is an animated and interesting speaker, and is said to be gifted with all that enthusiasm and warmth of heart which characterizes true Irish eloquence.

☞ Among the recent deaths of Union prisoners in Richmond we notice the name of "O. Alley, Co. B, 18th Massachusetts Regiment." It is feared that it must be Mr. ORLANDO ALLEY, of this town, one of our three drafted men, who, when conscripted, was placed in the above regiment and same company.—Measures have been taken to ascertain, if possible, something definite in regard to it. He was supposed to have been taken prisoner in a picket skirmish.

DANVERS.—The young ladies of the First Universalist Society will hold a Fair on Wednesday and Thursday, Feb. 17th and 18th, at Gothic Hall, Danvers Plains. On Wednesday afternoon the hall will be open for the sale of fancy articles, etc., when the admission will be 10 cents. On Wednesday evening there will be a dramatic exhibition, with other entertainments. On Thursday evening, dancing, etc.

FAST DRIVING.—A man has been lately arrested and convicted for rapid and dangerous driving through our streets. We hope all such will be brought up to the ringbolt of the law.

PHILLIPS' ACADEMY, ANDOVER.—We have received a copy of the Catalogue for 1863 of this long-established and well-endowed institution of learning, where have been trained so many of the best intellects of New England and other portions of the country. The book contains a list of the Trustees and Instructors, and among the latter we find the name of our respected teacher of the Peabody High School. The list of pupils shows a total of 256, showing a high degree of prosperity. It also gives the course of study in the Classical and English departments. The Catalogue is admirably printed at the press of Warren F. Draper, in Andover. SAMUEL H. TAYLOR, L.L.D., the veteran and accomplished Principal of this seminary, is well known all over the country, as one of the best skilled of all those whose vocation it is to prepare youth for admission to the higher seminaries of learning.

CAPT. ATWOOD'S LECTURE.

The lecture, last week, at the Peabody Institute, was given by Capt. N. E. ATWOOD, of Provincetown, on the "Fishes of Massachusetts Bay." The lecturer is a practical fisherman, and although his remarks were eminently practical, containing the experience of a lifetime on the salt water, it was also scientific, with but little of the technicalities of science. He gave an account of those fishes of our bay which are more commonly known, such as the mackerel, cod and haddock, with some account of the different varieties of the shark, some of which he represented as—contrary to the general belief—quite harmless. He also gave an account of their habits and the manner of taking them by fishermen, enlivening his discourse by anecdotes of their voracity and the circumstances of their capture. He was complimented by the close attention of his audience to the close of the lecture, which was over an hour long. There was much in the manner of the lecturer to interest an audience, it being genial and conversatorial in style, and given with a simplicity and transparent honesty which brings the audience into close sympathy with the speaker. He is evidently an enthusiast in this branch of natural history, and he has acquired the scientific names of these dwellers of the briny deep.

There is something certainly remarkable in the career of Capt. Atwood, who has had none of the advantages of early education since the age of ten years, when he went on board of his father's boat. He has ever since, and does now, pursue the calling of a fisherman, but by his Hugh Miller-like habit of perseverance and close observation, and an intense study of the great book of nature, he has acquired an amount of knowledge which has made him the friend and co-worker with such eminent naturalists as Agassiz and Storer.

He has twice represented his native town of Provincetown in the Legislature, where he was eminently useful as chairman, on the part of the house, of the Committee on the Fisheries; and he was sent to Washington on a delegation to procure defences for the harbor at the Cape.

There is something really commendable in a career like this — pursuing knowledge under difficulties so formidable—and we can well afford to overlook occasional violations of grammatical rules when such a man comes before the public with the fruits of his observation and experience.

FROM DANVERS.

Bowditch Club — Farmers' Club — Horse Railroad, &c.

The Bowditch Club is now to be numbered among the permanent institutions of the town. Its existence dates as far back as 1857, and has continued to increase in numbers as well as in interest. At the present time we find it to be attended by many of our most intelligent and influential citizens and discussing the most important questions of the time, among which is:—"Ought our Government to resort to retaliatory measures in the treatment of rebel prisoners?" The question called forth a very spirited discussion, after which a vote was taken, that our Government ought not to retaliate.

The Farmers' Club commenced holding their meetings last winter and they were well attended through the season, and were very interesting, particularly the lectures by DR. GEO. B. LORING. The doctor has a very good way of making meetings interesting, although sometimes would disagree with a majority of the members of the Club. This winter the interest has somewhat subsided; we hardly know why, except it be that they have gone over the whole ground; indeed we think such may be the fact, as the last question discussed was—"Will it be advantageous to the town of Danvers to have a Horse Railroad within its limits?" It would seem from the question that all has been said that could be in regard to farming; at least we cannot see that the question has anything to do with farming. However, we do not doubt their right to discuss it, or any other they may choose.

The most noticeable feature of interest is the singing school under the instruction of Mr. A. W. TRASK. The class numbers about seventy-five, and by having the pleasure of listening for an hour, was highly gratified, and think there is no doubt it will be a success, both on the part of teacher and scholars.

Among the rest, though not the least, by any means, is the picture saloon of Mr. JOSIAH GODDARD. Josiah is an odd genius, but for artistic skill and the taking of life-like pictures, we thind he can't be beat. Some say he takes them more like them, than they are themselves, and we advise all who want a good likeness of themselves or friends to go to Josiah's and get one "tooken."

LUBIN.

☞ The religious interests in Haverhill continues. Last week meetings were held about the town in the shoe factories. Rev. Mr. Hammond, who has been laboring there, continued his efforts; but his health failing, he is about to leave for a voyage to Palestine.

☞ In St. Paul, Minnesota, there are from 7,000 to 9,000 Catholics and 1,245 Protestants.

FROM NEWBERN.

The Rebels, in considerable force, made an attack on our advanced posts near Newbern, N. C., on Sunday evening, Jan. 31st, driving in our pickets at Bachelder's Creek, Dress Gully and Briar's Creek. Lieut. Col. Fellows, of the 17th Mass., with 117 men and a detachment of the 99th N. Y., with a section of a battery, went out on the Washington road the next morning. Another section went out on the Trent road and was captured entire. Only 50 of the 117 men of the 17th Mass. came back. The enemy came on them in overwhelming numbers, but our troops held them in check until the baggage and camp equipage could be removed or burned.

Lieut. Col. Fellows, Surgeon Galoupe, Capt. Loyd, Lieuts. Davy, Comins, Hill and Mann are missing. Lieut. Cheever, of Chelsea, was mortally wounded, and has since died. Capt. Loyd lost a log. The others are supposed to be alive.

A detachment of the 17th Mass., under Lieut. Conn, got to the camp of Col. Clossen, of the 132d N. Y. at Bachelder's Creek in time to help him save the camp and hospital stores.

Lieut. Conn saved the garrison flag, which in the confusion had been left flying. The rebels followed our men closely until they were under the guns of the forts. Our loss is probably 130 killed, wounded and missing. The 132d N. Y. lost five commissioned officers. The Acting Quartermaster was killed, and the others mortally wounded. The enemy's loss is supposed to be 60 killed and 100 wounded.

At 3 o'clock in the morning on the 2d inst., the rebels in barges boarded the Underwriter, and after a terrible struggle she was captured with her officers and a large number of the crew. Fortunately she was hard aground, and this alone saved her from being carried off by the rebels. The rebels that boarded her were 250 strong from Savannah, Ga., from whence they brought the barges by railroad. The rebels being unable to move the gunboat, set her on fire, and she soon blew up.

Nearly two-thirds of the crew of the Underwriter are safe. All the officers, except Third Asst. Engineer Allen, are captured. A large number of the crew, while being conveyed away by the rebels in a barge, seized the rebel officer and his men and brought them safely into port. The Underwriter had, before she was attacked, sent a boat's crew on a reconnoissance.

Later news report, officially, that the rebels have retired to Kinston.

Lieut. "Conn," of whom worthy mention is made in the above account, is undoubtedly Lieut. CANN of Danvers.

☞ At Gettysburg 28,000 muskets were taken. At least half of those which were loaded contained it is said, two or three loads, and in many instances half a dozen balls were driven in on a single charge of powder. In many cases the ball was put in first and the powder over it. This would show on the part of the rebels either a lamentable ignorance of the use of fire arms, or else a creditable desire not to harm their fellow creatures.

☞ The muskets that were imported during the first year or two of the rebellion are going back to Europe in large quantities. The steamer Bavaria took out 200,000 on her last trip. The speculators found they would not "go off" at satisfactory prices. American gunmakers are furnishing a better article so plentifully.

☞ Intercepted letters from rebel ladies show that of the 3000 cavalry sent into the Shenandoah valley during the recent cold weather not over 200 had returned. Many were frozen to death and others were frost bitten and sought refuge in farm houses and villages. The movement was an entire failure.

MURDER WILL OUT.

The perpetrator of the murder of Mr. Frank E. Converse, the assistant cashier of the Malden Bank, has at last been discovered in the person of one Edward W. Green, postmaster of Malden. On his arrest he made a full confession of his crime, stating that on the day of the murder he visited the Bank twice, and the first time he found a conductor there who left a pair of skates. The next time was at just half past eleven o'clock. Immediately on entering the Bank, he walked into the Director's room, and seeing that no one was there, he drew his pistol—placed the muzzle within a foot of young Converse's head, and fired, the ball taking effect under or back of his ear, the shot felling him to the floor. He instantly discharged a second barrel, the shot from which took effect in the temple, while his victim lay on the floor.

The murderous deed having been consummated, he seized the bills in the drawer, amounting to about $5000, and thereafter repaired to his office. After detailing these facts, Green informed the persons present, that a portion of the money was concealed in a piece of newspaper in an old boot in the Post Office, where $615 in bills on the Malden Bank was subsequently found. The balance of the stolen money, Green said, was secreted underneath the flooring in the attic of the "Volunteer" Engine House, and on making search there, the detectives found $3454, all in Malden Bank bills, making in the whole $4069. This, with the several sums paid away by him, accounts for the whole sum stolen from the Bank.

The arrest of Mr. Green took the citizens of Malden entirely by surprise, for very few of them had any suspicions against the accused. Although he did not seem to have been an influential man in the town, he possessed the confidence of the citizens and was considered worthy.

About a year since he was found to be in arrears in his Post Office accounts, and his removal was determined upon, but through the intercessions of his friends he was retained, and the circumstances were not generally known in town. This indebtedness, which he afterwards met, together with other debts which were accruing, prompted him to the commission of the double crime with which he now stands charged. The murder of young Converse and the robbery of the Bank are not the only crimes, however, that he has committed, for he confesses to having set fire to the post-office building on the first of November last, and also of expending $500 belonging to the town, entrusted to him by the School Committee to purchase some books, to make up the deficiency in the Post Office; and as he had no means of supplying this deficiency, and as the year was drawing to a close and his defalcation was more than ever likely to be found out, he was led to the commission of other and darker crimes.

THE MONOPOLIES.—The first thing Congress ought to do is to repeal, at the present session, the duty on foreign paper and foreign coal. The paper manufacturers and the coal dealers are taking an advantage of the public which can only be checked by opening a wider door to the free importation from abroad of foreign coal and paper. There is no good reason why paper, fit for newspapers, should sell for anything above twelve cents a pound, and yet it is now held at eighteen and upwards. There is no better reason why the best coal should sell for over seven dollars a ton, and yet it now brings eleven and a half. A conspiracy of certain parties to oppress the great public, in order to fill their private pockets, is the only and the true course why these two great necessaries of life now rule at prices full fifty per cent. above their real value. This conspiracy defies public opinion, and Congress alone has the power, in such a crisis, to protect the people. Let our representatives, then, do their duty. Let them see to it that the combination of paper manufacturers shall not continue, under the pretence of a scarcity of rags, to maintain their products at so enormous a figure. Let them see to it that the mining companies and certain railroad companies shall no longer have it in their power to withhold coal from public use except upon their own extraordinary conditions. Down with all monopolies that propose to make money unscrupulously out of the public necessities.—Dorchester News.

☞ We wonder how much wiser the people are for all the telegraphic matter relating to the condition of affairs in Dixie! A gentleman of our acquaintance kept an accurate account of 127 rumors and reports prior to Christmas, and 119 have proved to be false and the rest are doubtful. Recently we had a long article going the rounds of the papers, telling what John M. Botts wrote to G. S. Smith, treasurer of Gov. Pierpont's, Virginia, as to the Virginia Senatorship, Gen. McClellan and various other matters. The whole thing is pronounced a hoax by Mr. Smith, who denies that he has written to Mr. Botts to offer him the U. S. Senatorship, and of course received no reply to it; neither has he received a letter of any sort from Mr. Botts.—Newburyport Herald.

☞ The most striking illustration of the saying, that the pith of a lady's letter is the postscript, which we have heard of, was that of a young lady, who, having gone out to Indiana, and writing home to her friends, concluded with the following words: "You will see by my signature that I am married."

These instruments are scarce and high, and this will be found to be a favorable opportunity to procure them at low rates.

RETURN OF THE GALLANT NINETEENTH.—This glorious band of heroes arrived in Salem last Monday afternoon, at about 3½ o'clock, the train stopping at the foot of Hancock Street, South Salem. The escort consisted of the Salem Mechanic Light Infantry, Capt. Staten; the Salem Light Infantry, under Lieut. Reeves; the Salem Cadets, under Lieut. Foster; and the past members of the Salem Light Infantry, under Capt. Farless—all preceded by the Salem Brass Band; and after exchanging the usual military salutations, the column took up its line of march from Lafayette Street through the principal Streets of the city to Mechanic Hall, amid the booming of cannon and the ringing of all the bells in the city. The war worn veterans, with faces hard and brown with long service, and with their American and State standards begrimed with the smoke of cannon and musketry, and torn and tattered by the bullets of many a hard fought field, afforded inspiration enough in themselves to quicken the blood and awaken a thrill of gratitude in the hearts of all beholders. The veterans were accompanied by the band of the 59th Regiment, preceded by a small detachment of pioneers.

☞ In its record of Paris fashions for January, Le Tollet says the bonnets of the present season ought to please the most fastidious ladies, as they are so exceedingly becoming; being just large enough to form a framework round the face, and trimmed both inside and out without any exaggeration; so that we are almost tempted to wish they would remain as they are. Fur is used as trimming for bonnets, but has not a very graceful appearance. The best for this purpose are swandown or grebe, but chinchilla, ermine, and even sable, are used, but will not, we think, become at all general. Chenille fringe forms a very elegant trimming and is much used.

THE SIEGE OF CHARLESTON RAISED.—The New York World says it will be sad news for the country to learn that the siege of Charleston has been raised. Gen. Gilmore has come North; the Monitors and gunboats are simply doing guard duty inside the bar of Charleston harbor; and the troops, if our information is correct, have been sent to the Gulf, probably to re-enforce General Banks, preparatory to the projected siege of Mobile. Of course, Morris Island is garrisoned, and a continuous fire will be kept upon Sumter, the surrounding batteries, and the city of Charleston itself. But all hope of the capture of Charleston must be given up for the present.

GREAT NEWS FOR TOPERS.—Whiskey and brandy can now be made out of coal gas, which consists of carbon and hydrogen as does alcohol, with the addition of oxygen. For several years past the process of converting olefiant gas into spirit has been talked of, but now a French patent has been obtained for the purpose and sold to a company in London. You take away one half the hydrogen, add a little oxygen, and presto! you have a bottle of brandy.—Statesman.

ESSEX COUNTY RECEIPTS AND EXPENDITURES. The County Commissioners, as we learn from the Lynn Bay State, have published their Annual Statement of Receipts and Expenditures of the County of Essex, for the year ending Dec. 31, 1863, from which we gather the following items:—The receipts for the year were $149,334.90. The expenditure for the year were $151,103.58. Balance in the treasury, January 1, 1864, $24,968.18. The whole amount of the county debt is $240,000, all of which was incurred for the erection of county buildings, prior to 1860.

Of the population under 15 years old the excess of females is 371, and over 40 years old, it is 855, leaving 6397 marriageable females—that is between the ages of 15 and 40—more than males in that city. The best thing they could do would be to strike a bee line for Illinois, where are 92,000 more males than females.

A Memorial to the Union Leagues Throughout the Land.

Editors of newspapers throughout the Northern States are requested to give insertion in their papers to the following Memorial. Mr. Wm. Driver is generally known as "Old Glory" in connection with the re-hoisting, two years ago, of the American Flag on the National Capitol of Tennessee.

A Committee having been appointed by the National Union League of Tennessee, Council No. 1, to prepare a Memorial to their fellow-Leaguers, the following is respectfully submitted.

WM. DRIVER,
Chairman of Committee.

NASHVILLE, TENNESSEE, Dec. 4th, 1863.
ROOMS OF THE UNION LEAGUE, COUNCIL NO. 1.

To our Brethren of the Union Leagues throughout the Land, Greeting:

We, your co-laborers, of the Grand League of Tennessee, beg leave to lay before you our views of the necessities of the present hour. Satisfied, as we are, that there can be no permanent peace whilst the institution of Slavery exists in our midst, we protest against its further continuance in any form, or under any circumstances whatever; and recommend that Congress now in session be petitioned, at once to pass such laws as will produce its immediate abolishment, without an "if." Consequences belong to God. Duty to us. In hours like these, God and our country "expect every man to do his duty."

Further. We recommend that Congress be called on to act at once with respect to confiscation of rebel lands. That they say to the world and to us, what is to be done in the premises; and pass such laws as will insure their decisions being carried out to the full extent. There is no time for delay. The entire poor and working class of the South lie helpless at our feet. They look to us for aid and protection. They were driven along the dark track, a helpless mass, into the bloody vortex which has swallowed up their substance, and given their sons, "their first born," to the sword. Those of them who have thus far outlived the common ruin, are now without money; without stock of any kind to till the soil; and without protection for the production of that soil, should they have means to till it. We might further say they are, most of them, without land of their own; for nearly all the lands in the revolted States belong to the Rebel Dictators, AS WE ARE PREPARED TO PROVE. We must act at once, or another year's sun will shine on miseries without a parallel among the poor of our State and the South, such as have no historical record.

We feel that it is the duty of Government at once and forever to confiscate the entire property of all influential rebels, whether they be Planters, Farmers, Lawyers, PREACHERS, State officers, or military above a certain grade. These men made the war. These men continue it, by conscripting the poor, regardless of the laws of nations, of human rights, and of God. These men have never put their hands to the sword, except when it gave them power to rule as with a rod of iron. These men of "twenty slaves AND UPWARDS" are exempt by law INFERNAL from conscription on bearing arms; are "Lords of the manor;" have reduced the poor white man of the Slave States to a position lower than their wooly-headed chattles. Eighty-nine thousand of these in our midst, adults, can neither read nor write. (This alone should pronounce the doom of Slavery.) In the name of these poor; in the name of civilization; in the name of the nineteenth century and its hopes, we call upon you to unite with us in a call upon Congress for the total emancipation of all slaves, and the confiscation of the entire property of all influential rebels.

This done, advertise the confiscated lands far and wide. Call upon the free and good of the entire land, and of every land, to come down among us, buy these lands, settle on them, employ our freed men, as far as possible to cultivate these lands. Give our soldiers a portion therein. Do this, and ours will be a land of promise, the neutral ground of nations; the column of civil liberty will raise its head above the clouds, above the condor's swoop; the angels of Heaven will descend with garlands of eternal peace to crown this glory of the age, the emancipation of four millions of slaves, the triumph of Popular Government over Anarchy, Ruin, and the intrigues of the crowned heads of Western Europe.

At a regular meeting of Council 1, National Union League of Tennessee, Dec. 14th, 1863, the above was unanimously adopted, and ordered to be published for promulgation in the Order.

WILLIAM J. COCHRANE, Clerk.

☞ The newspapers are making great ado about the Princess of Wales' baby, which was born January 8th, just as though the dear woman had no right to it. She was married on the 10th of March, 1863, and we hope, to make sure that the succession shall not go out of the country, she may have as many as Queen Victoria, who, at 45, is mother of nine children, with four grandchildren. The Princess baby has no title yet; he belongs to the infantry. He is simply called Prince. The sovereign's eldest son is the only prince of the royal blood in England, who succeeds to any hereditary title. He is Duke of Cornwall, Duke of Rothsay, Earl of Carrick, Baron of Renfrew, and Hereditary High Steward of Scotland. The title of Prince of Wales is generally conferred on him, by patent, when he is a few days old. Not one of Queen Victoria's sons, the Prince of Wales excepted, has yet a peer's title, which alone would qualify them to sit in the House Lords. As the custom has been to settle on each prince, on his creation as peer, the sum of $60,000 per annum, for life, besides other emoluments, the British public will not be anxious for the present young princes to be converted into Royal Dukes.

☞ The girls of Marblehead, last week, gave a Leap-Year Levee at Shawmut Hall, in that town. It was a very respectable party, and is said in its arrangements to have reflected much credit on the managers. The masculine persuasion had to stand back, as the ladies hired the hall, music, attendants, etc., furnished the refreshments, and even provided carriages. Gentlemen were allowed to select partners but once during the evening. The hall was well filled and dancing was kept up till a late hour.

☞ The Louisville Journal says that Gen. Dumont, member of Congress from Indiana, is the father of 19 children, ten of whom came into the world in couples.

WO ELEGANT WORKS OF ART, Just Issued!

e Departure of the Pilgrim Fathers for America, and The Landing of the Pilgrims in America.

ach Engraving 26 x 34 inches, price only 0 each, by mail. These constitute the t pair of companion Engravings ever published in the United States. They were ened by the most eminent steel plate Engraver his country, JOHN C. McRAE, of New City, and for artistic skill and high beauvere never excelled. Mr. McRAE is great hatever he attempts, but in these gems he outdone himself. He was determined to er them enduring monuments of his skill, no pains or expense have been spared to e them perfect works of Art, and to far l any similar works ever issued in this try. They are of the same size, and in y respect equal to, the elegant English Engings of the same subjects, which cannot be ht in this country for less than twelve doland fifty cents, each copy.

COMMONWEALTH OF MASSACHUSETTS.

Head-Quarters, Boston, Jan. 19, 1864.
GENERAL ORDER, No. 4.

1. By General Orders of the War Department, Series of 1864, a Bounty of $400 will be paid to Veteran Volunteers who enlist or reenlist under existing orders, and a Bounty of $300 will be paid to raw recruits who enlist for any three years organization, authorizxd by the War Department, either in service or in process of completion, until the first day of March, 1864.

II. Under the present arrangement of the War Department, towns and wards which have filled their quotas under the present call, may go on and continue their enlistments, and their surplus men, so raised, will be credited to them under any future call. The Governor advises all to take advantage of the present enthusiasm for enlistment, and make it available. The State Bounty will continue to be paid, until the public promulgation of orders to the contrary.

III. Officers and men of regiments returning on furloughs and to recruit, will report immediately to the recruiting agents of their respective towns and wards, for such duty as they are able to perform. And such recruiting agents are desired to employ these returning veterans, as subordinate recruiting agents, and encourage their efforts by paying them the highest premium which they pay to any person for obtaining recruits. It is desired that every soldier, on returning to his regimental rendezvous, will take with him at least one recruit whom he has himself procured.

IV. In behalf of the people of Massachusetts, the Governor congratulates and thanks the officers and men of these noble organizations for what they have dared and what they have done.

By order of His Excellency John A. Andrew, Governor and Commander-in-Chief.

TEETH ON VULCANITE!

DR. J. H. BATCHELDER,
DENTAL SURGEON,
No. 20 Washington St., (near Eastern Railroad Depot), Salem, Mass.,

Is Licensed to make the New Patent Teeth on HARD RUBBER or VULCANITE, and from actual experience confidently recommends them for Strength, Beauty, and Cleanliness, to far surpass all other kinds of teeth;—are sure to fit the mouth; are much cheaper and better, being about half the price of teeth on Gold. Ill fitting Setts of Teeth on Gold can be exchanged for the Vulcanite, at very small expense. Specimens seen at Office. Teeth filled with Gold, Inserted, Extracted, and Children's Teeth Regulated—all with such care and gentleness as to be nearly painless.

Office Established in 1846.

PATENT VULCANITE DENTAL AGENCY.

NEW YORK.

This certifies that Dr. J. H. Batchelder is duly authorized by us to manufacture the PATENT VULCANITE or CORALITE GUMS AND PLATES, for Artificial Teeth, under the Goodyear Patents.

The public are cautioned against employing Dentists who have no license to manufacture such Plates and Gums, as patients using such Dentures made by infringers, are equally liable for damages with the maker or vender.

A Lecture on the Nature, Treatment & Radical

Cure of Seminal Weakness, or Spermatorrhœa, induced by Self-Abuse; Involuntary Emissions, Impotency, Nervous Debility, and Impediments to Marriage generally; Consumption, Epilepsy and Fits; Mental and Physical Incapacity, &c.—By ROB. J. CULVERWELL, M. D., Author of "The Green Book," &c.

The world-renowned author, in this admirable Lecture, clearly proves from his own experience that the awful consequences of Self-Abuse may be effectually removed without medicine, and without dangerous surgical operations, bougies, instruments, rings or cordials, pointing out a mode of cure at once certain and effectual, by which every sufferer, no matter what his condition may be, may cure himself cheaply, privately, and radically. This lecture will prove a boon to thousands and thousands.

Sent under seal, in a plain envelope, to any address, on receipt of six cents, or two postage stamps, by addressing the publishers,

☞ A clergyman, travelling in California, encountered a panther, of which he subsequently wrote as follows: "I looked at him long enough to note his brown and glossy coat, his big glaring eyes, his broad and well developed muzzle, and his capacious jaws, when both of us left the spot, and I am pleased to add, in opposite directions.

☞ An Irishman on board a vessel when she was foundering, being desired to come on deck as she was going down, replied that he had no wish to go on deck to "see himself drowned."

☞ "Why, Hans, you have the most feminine cast of countenance I have ever seen." "Oh, yah," replied Hans; "I know the reason for dat—mine moder vas a voomans."

☞ An exchange calls a wife a sewing machine. Marriage, then, is a 'lock stitch.'

Special Notices.

BELL'S SPECIFIC PILLS.—WARRANTED IN ALL CASES.—.—Can be relied on! Never fail to cure! Do not nauseate! Are speedy in action! No change of diet required! Do not interfere with business pursuits! Can be used without detection! Upward of 200 cures the past month—some of them very severe cases. Over one hundred physicians have used them in their practice, and all speak well of their efficacy, and approve of their composition, which is entirely vegetable, and harmless on the system. Hundreds of certificates can be shown.

BELL'S SPECIFIC PILLS are the original and only genuine Specific Pill. They are adapted for male and female, old or young, and the only reliable remedy for effecting a permanent and speedy cure in all cases of Spermatorrhea, or Seminal Weakness, with all its train of evils, such as Urethral and Vaginal Discharges, Gleet, the Whites, Nightly or Involuntary Emissions, Incontinence, Genital Debility and Irritability, Impotence, Weakness or Loss of Power, Nervous Debility, &c., &c., all of which arise principally from Sexual Excesses or Self-Abuse, or some constitutional derangement, and incapacitates the sufferer from fulfilling the duties of married life. In all sexual diseases, as Gonorrhea, Gleet, and Strictures, and in Diseases of the Bladder and Kidneys, they act as a charm! Relief is experienced by taking a single box.

Sold by all the principal druggists. Price $1.

They will be sent by mail, securely sealed, and confidentially, on receipt of the money, by

J BRYAN, M. D,
No. 76 Cedar street, New York,

Consulting Physician for the treatment of Seminal, Urinary, Sexual, and Nervous Diseases, who will send, free to all, the following valuable work, in sealed envelope:

BELL'S TREATISE on Self-Abuse, Premature Decay, Impotence and Loss of Power, Sexual Diseases, Seminal Weakness, Nightly Emissions, Genital Debility, &c., &c., a pamphlet of 64 pages, containing important advice to the afflicted, and which should be read by every sufferer, as the means of cure in the severest stages is plainly set forth. Two stamps required to pay postage.

December 9, 1863—1 yr.

IMPORTANT TO LADIES.—DR. HARVEY'S FEMALE PILLS have never yet failed in removing difficulties arising from obstruction, or stoppage of nature, or in restoring the system to perfect health when suffering from Spinal Affections, Prolapsus, Uteri, the Whites, or other weakness of the Uterine Organs. The Pills are perfectly harmless on the constitution, and may be taken by the most delicate female without causing distress—the same time they act like a charm by strengthening, invigorating and restoring the system to a healthy condition, and by bringing on the monthly period with regularity, no matter from what causes the obstruction may arise. They should, however, NOT be taken during the first three or four months of pregnancy, though safe at any other time, as miscarriage would be the result.

Each box contains 60 Pills. Price $1.

DR. HARVEY'S TREATISE on Diseases of Females, Pregnancy, Miscarriage, Barrenness, Sterility, Reproduction, and Abuses of Nature, and emphatically the Ladies' Private Medical Adviser, a pamphlet of 64 pages, sent free to any address. Six cents required to pay postage.

HOSTETTER'S
CELEBRATED
STOMACH BITTERS.

A pure and powerful Tonic, corrective and alterative of wonderful efficacy in disease of the
Stomach, Liver and Bowels.
Cures Dyspepsia, Liver Complaint, Headache, Debility, Nervousness, Depression of Spirits, Constipation, Colic, Intermittent Fevers, Cramps and Spasms, and all Complaints of either Sex, arising from Bodily Weakness whether inherent in the system or produced by special causes.

Nothing that is not wholesome, genial and restorative in its nature enters into the composition of HOSTETTER'S STOMACH BITTERS. This popular preparation contains no mineral of any kind, no deadly botanical element; no fiery excitant: but it is a combination of the extracts of rare balsamic herbs and plants with the purest and mildest of all diffusive stimulants.

It is well to be forearmed against disease, and, so far as the human system can be protected by human means against maladies engendered by an unwholesome atmosphere, impure water and other external causes, HOSTETTER'S BITTERS may be relied on as a safeguard.

In districts infested with Fever and Ague, it has been found infallible as a preventive and irresistible as a remedy and thousands who resort to it under apprehension of an attack, escape the scourage; and thousands who neglect to avail themselves of its protective qualities in advance, are cured by a very brief course of this marvelous medicine. Fever and Ague patients, after being plied with quinine for months in vain, until fairly saturated with that dangerous alkaloid, are not unfrequently restored to health within a few days by the use of HOSTETTER'S BITTERS.

The weak stomach is rapidly invigorated and the appetite restored by this agreeable Tonic, and hence it works wonders in cases of DYSPEPSIA and in less confirmed forms of INDIGESTION. Acting as a gentle and painless apperient, as well as upon the liver, it also invariably relieves the CONSTIPATION superinduced by irregular action of the digestive and secretive organs.

Persons of feeble habit, liable to Nervous Attacks, Lowness of Spirits and Fits of Languor, find prompt and permanent relief from the Bitters. The testimony on this point is most conclusive, and from both sexes.

The agony of BILIOUS COLIC is immediately assuaged by a single dose of the stimulant, and by occasionally resorting to it, the return of the complaint may be prevented.

As a General Tonic, HOSTETTER'S BITTERS produce effects which must be experienced or witnessed before they can be fully appreciated. In cases of Constitutional Weakness, Premature Decay and Debility and Decrepitude arising from OLD AGE, it exercises the electric influence. In the convalescent stages of all diseases it operates as a delightful invigorant. When the powers of nature are relaxed, it operates to re-enforce and re-establish them.

Last, but not least, it is The Only Safe Stimulant, being manufactured from sound and innocuous materials, and entirely free from the acid elements present more or less in all the ordinary tonics and stomachics of the day.

No family medicine has been so universally, and, it may be truly added, deservedly popular with the intelligent portion of the community, as HOSTETTER'S BITTERS.

HELMBOLD'S
GENUINE PREPARATIONS.

COMPOUND FLUID EXTRACT BUCHU, a Positive and Specific Remedy for diseases of the Bladder, Kidneys, Gravel, and Dropsical Swellings.

This Medicine increases the power of Digestion, and excite the Absorbents into healthy action, by which the Wtaery or Calcareous depositions, and all Unnatural Enlargements are reduced, as well as Pain and Inflammation.

—:o:—

HELMBOLD'S EXTRACT BUCHU.

For Weaknesses arising from Excesses, Habits of Dissipation, Early Indiscretion of Abuse, attended with the following symptoms:—

Indisposition to Exertion,	Loss of Power,
Loss of Memory,	Difficulty of Breathing,
Weak Nerves,	Trembling,
Horror of Disease,	Wakefulness,
Dimness of Vision,	Pain in the Back,
Universal Lassitude of the Muscular System,
Hot Hands,	Flushing of the Body,
Dryness of the Skin,	Eruptions on the Face,
Pallid Countenance.

These symptoms, if allowed to go on, which this medicine invariably removes, soon follows

Impotency, Fatuity, Epileptic Fits,

In one of which the patient may expire.

Who can say that they are not frequently followed by those "Direful Diseases,"

"INSANITY AND CONSUMPTION."

Many are aware of the cause of their suffering,

BUT NONE WILL CONFESS THE RECORDS OF THE INSANE ASYLUMS.

And Melancholy Deaths by Consumption bear ample witness to the Truth of the assertion.

The Constitution once effected with Organic Weakness requires the aid of Medicine to Strengthen and Invigorate the system,

Which HELMBOLD'S EXTRACT BUCHU invariably does. A Trial will convince the msst skeptical.

—:o:—

FEMALES—FEMALES—FEMALES.

In many Affections peculiar to Females the EXTRACT BUCHU is unequalled by any other remedy, as in Chlorosis or Retention, Irregularity, Painfulness, or Suppression of Customary Evacuations, Ulcerated Scirrhous state of the Uterus, Leuchorrhœa or Whites, Sterility, and for all complaints incident to the sex, whether arising from indiscretion or Habits of Dissipation, or in the

DECLINE OR CHANGE OF LIFE.

—:o:—

Take no more Balsam, Mercury, or unpleasant Medicines for unpleasant and dangerous diseases.

HELMBOLD'S EXTRACT BUCHU AND IMPROVED ROSE WASH CURES

SECRET DISEASES

In all their Stages,	At little Expense.
Little or no change in Diet,	No inconvenience.
And no Exposure.

It causes a frequent desire and gives strength to Urinate, thereby Removing Obsructions, Preventing and Curing Strictures of the Urethra, allaying Pain and Inflammation, so frequent in this class of diseases, and expelling all Poisonous, Diseased and wornout Matter.

Thousands upon Thousands who have been the Victims of Quacks, and who have paid heavy fees to be cured in a short time, have found they were deceived, and that the "POISON" has, by the use of "Powerful Astringents," been dried up in the system, to break out in an aggravated form, and perhaps after Marriage.

—:o:—

Use HELMBOLD'S EXTRACT BUCHU for all affections and diseases of the URINARY ORGANS, whether existing in MALE or FEMALE, from whatever cause originating and no matter of HOW LONG STANDING.

Diseases of these Organs requires the aid of a DIURETIC. HELMBOLD'S EXTRACT BUCHU IS THE GREAT DIURETIC, and is certain to have the desired effect in all Diseases for which it is Recommended.

Evidence of the most reliable and responsible character will accompany the medicine.

STURGIS'S
ELECTRIC COMPOUND!
AN EFFECTUAL CURE FOR
NEURALGIA AND RHEUMATISM.

Also, invaluable for Spinal Irritation, Hip Complaints, Ague in the Face, Tooth Ache, Pain in the Side, Back, Limbs, Ear Ache, Lumbago, &c.

The proprietor, in offering this medicine to the public, desires to state that this preparation does not belong to the class called patent medicines. Its value has been tested for many years, and it has been found fully adequate to the removal of many obstinate cases of the above complaints, which other celebrated remedies had failed to reach, and which had baffled the skill of eminent physicians. The proprietor does not claim that it will cure but one class of disease. All persons who are afflicted with any of these complaints are earnestly requested to try this Compound and judge for themselves.

AMONG THE ADVANTAGES OF THIS MEDICINE ARE THE FOLLOWING:

Its effect is very rapid—in most cases instantaneous.

It is external in its application, and the patient runs no risk in using it. It does not strike to the stomach.

It reaches the nerves and muscles, as it is believed no other medicine does.

It has cured some of the most violent and obstinate cases of Neuralgia ever known.

It can be used on a child or on an aged person alike.

While it is very powerful, it is perfectly harmless.

The proprietor has been allowed to publish the names of many persons who have used the Compound with the most beneficial results. He inserts here a few of them. They are among the most respectable citizens of Boston, and their residences and places are given:

Late Editor of "Boston Recorder."

And many others.

The proprietor is permitted to publish the following letter from O. C. Pitkin, Esq., Principal of the High School in the city of Chelsea, and well known as one of the most successful teachers in New England:

CHELSEA, April 30, 1863.

FRIEND WILLIAMS:—Yours of the 26th is received. My wife was troubled with severe Neuralgia in the face. She tried your Compound with decidedly good effect. I think it is an excellent article, and have recommended it in one instance, where it also produced good effect. You certainly have the liberty to refer it to me.

With much respect, yours truly,
O. C. PITKIN.

Important to the Afflicted.

DR. DOW continues to be consulted at his office, Nos. 7 and 9 Endicott street, Boston, on all diseases of a

PRIVATE OR DELICATE NATURE.

By a long course of study and practical experience of unlimited extent, Dr. D. has now the gratification of presenting the unfortunate with remedies that have never, since he first introduced them, failed to cure the most alarming cases of

GONORRHŒA AND SYPHILIS.

Beneath his treatment, all the horrors of venerea and impure blood, Impotency, Scrofula, Gonorrhoea Ulcers, pain and distress in the regions of procreation, Inflammation of the Bladder and Kidneys, Hydrocele, Abcesses, Humors, frightful Swellings, and the long train of horrible symptoms attending this class of disease, are made to become as harmless as the simplest ailings of a child.

SEMINAL WEAKNESS.

Dr. D. devotes a great part of his time to the treatment of those cases caused by a secret and solitary habit, which ruins the body and mind, unfitting the unfortunate individual for business or society. Some of the sad and melancholy effects produced by early habits of youth, are Weakness of the Back and limbs, Dizziness of the head, Dimness of sight, Palpitation of the heart, Dyspepsia, Nervousness, Derangement of the digestive functions, Symptoms of Consumption, &c. The fearful effects on the mind are much to be dreaded; loss of memory, confusion of ideas, depression of spirits, evil forebodings, aversion of society, self-distrust, timidity, &c., are among the evils produced. Such person should, before contemplating masrimony, consult a physician of experience, and be at once restored to health and happiness.

Patients who wish to remain under Dr. Dow's treatment a few days or weeks, will be furnished with pleasant rooms, and charges for board moderate.

Medicines sent to all parts of the country, with full directions for use, on receiving description of your cases. Dr. Dow has also for sale the French Capottes, warranted the best preventive. Order by mail. 3 or $1 and a red stamp.

CAUTION
TO FEMALES IN DELICATE HEALTH.

DR. DOW, Physician and Surgeon, 7 and 9 Endicot street, Boston, is consulted daily for all diseases incident to the female system. Prolapsus Uteri, or falling of the Womb, Fluor Albus, Suppression, and other menstrual derangements, are all treated upon new pathological principles, and speedy relief guaranteed in a very few days. So invariably certain is the new mode of treatment, that most obstinate complaints yield under it, and the afflicted person soon rejoices in perfect health.

Dr. Dow has no doubt had greater experience in the cure of diseases of women and children, than any other physician in Boston.

Boarding accommodations for patients who may wish to stay in Boston a few days under his treatment.

Dr. Dow, since 1845, having confined his whole attention to an office practice, for the cure of Private Diseases and Female Complaints, acknowledges no superior in the United States.

N. B.—All letters must contain four red stamps, or they will not be answered.

Office Hours from 8 A. M. to 9 P. M.

CERTAIN CURE
IN ALL CASES, OR NO CHARGES MADE.

Dr. Dow is consulted daily, from 8 a. m. to 8 p. m., as above, upon all difficult and chronic diseases of every name and nature, having by his unwearied attention and extraordinary success gained a reputation which calls patients from all parts of the country to obtain advice.

Among the physicians in Boston, none stand higher in the profession than the celebrated DR. DOW, No. 7 Endicott street, Boston. Those who need the services of an experienced physician and surgeon should give him a call. P. S.—Dr. Dow imports and has for sale a new article, called the French Secret. Order by mail. Two for $1 and a red stamp.

MY MOTHER'S SOOTHING VOICE.

BY S. RICKER.

My Mother's soothing voice! I hear it now,
As when she sang the hymn of evening praise;
Methinks I feel her hand upon my brow,
Imploring blessings on my future days,

As when my head, soft pillow'd on her breast,
Was hush'd to silence and to sweet repose;
When her soft lips to mine she softly press'd,
And breath'd that prayer that up to Heaven arose.

My Mother's soothing voice brought peace and joy
Throughout my childhood's helpless, tearful hour,
And latter years pour'd blessings on her boy,
And still is potent with its soothing power.

When, like an exile, I am far from home,
Her voice controls the feelings of my heart,—
Attending still my steps where'er I roam,
Bids my desponding, erring thoughts depart.

When I was cast upon a sea-bound shore,
I saw her gliding o'er the bounding wave,—
I heard her say, amid the deaf'ning roar,—
Thy guardian angel still is near to save.

When on a distant heathen shore I stand,
Where savage beasts are thirsting for their prey,
Or wandering o'er the desert's burning sand,
That voice shall cheer me on my weary way.

If I should sleep upon a mountain height,
Alone, beneath a dark and sombre sky!
I hear! I feel! in that dread hour of night,
My Mother's prayer for me ascends on high.

If I am doomed to lie beneath the wave!
Or in a snow-wreath on a mountain steep!
Or on a desert find a lonely grave!
My Mother's voice shall soothe my soul to sleep,

As when my head, soft pillow'd on her breast,
Was hush'd to silence and to sweet repose;
As when her lips to mine so soft she press'd,
And breath'd that prayer that up to Heaven arose.

Wells, Me., Jan., 1864.

THE CHRISTIAN FARMER.

The morning gems the eastern sky,
The shadows fade away,
The Farmer rais'd his thankful eye
And hail'd the light of day.

A prayer went up to Heaven, and love
Pour'd radiance on the sight,
The heart rejoicing, look'd above,
And hail'd the ray of light.

He rises with the early dawn,
With pleasure and with care,
And out upon the flowery lawn
Inhales the balmy air.

A thousand songsters tune their notes
With their sweet morning lays;
Amongst the trees the music floats,
To hymn their Maker's praise.

His loved ones gather 'round his board,
With ample viands neat,
While they repay his loving words
With smiles and kisses sweet.

A helping hand he freely gives
The partner of his joys;
To soothe her care and ease her toil,
His leisure hours employ.

'Tis thus he toils from day to day,
With plow, with hoe or cart;
To work amongst the new mown hay
Brings pleasure to his heart,

To see his barns and granary stocks—
The product of his soil;
A full supply for herds and flocks
Rewards him for his toil.

And thus he works from morn 'til night,
Sometimes with care oppress'd,
But when the evening shades the light,
His pillow gives him rest.

So pass the Christian farmer's life—
So honest and so true,
And freed from every care and strife,
He dies—with Heaven in view.

No marble block or lofty tower
To mark the lonely spot,
Save the low vine and tiny flower—
The true forget-me-not.

Give me a home on hill or dell,
By smiling waters fair;
Where the wild rose and pimper red
Shall fan the evening air.

Yes, give me but a Farmer's home—
The hills, the fields, the dell,
The singing birds, the flocks and herds,
The rose and pimpernel.

And give me with a Farmer's home,
A heart to feed the poor;
Supply me with enough to give,
And I will ask no more.

Wells, Me., Jan. 1864.

Selected.

THE PAINLESSNESS OF DEATH.

All who have thought upon the subject, know how nearly pleasure and pain are allied to each other. It appears as if they were two adjoining spheres or elements, and that you cannot overstep the domain of the one without entering the opposite state. It is this proximity of opposites that will explain many of those remarkable occurrences which are recorded in histories and biographies. Martyrs roasting at the fire, criminals under the rack, and soldiers mangled upon the battlefield, have all shouted in ecstacy, and never were so happy in their lives.—George Fox relates in his journal how that, on a certain time, when he had been beaten in a most horrible manner and thrown into a stinking prison, he was so happy that he sat up in the dungeon and sang for joy. Just think of that,—a Quaker singing when brutal populace thought they had killed him! and yet this is nothing more than what would have happened to any of us in similar circumstances. Here, then, are the limitations which the Creator has fixed to our susceptibility of suffering—faintness, delirium, pleasure, death, and all is over.

A still better conception may be formed of the painlessness of death by comparing it with what Homer calls for the phenomena in one case bear a close analogy to the other. We sleep whenever the circulation of the blood in the brain is so low as not to stimulate the gray matter which overlays the involutions and convolutions. If one particular part be excited and not the others, we dream; dreaming is, therefore, a partial wakefulness. If the circulation be entirely withdrawn, the sleep is profound, and if the brain be full of blood, we are thoroughly awake. I have now been awake for about thirteen hours, in the course of another three hours I shall retire to rest; a slight change will take place in the circulation, and sleep will ensue; and when sufficient excitability has accumulated to sustain another day's toil, I shall awake again. Now, I am not only unconcious of the time when I go to sleep, but may be burnt to death without ever waking at all. This often happens to people in case of fire, or to those sleeping upon lime kilns, when the limbs are burnt from the body without the sleeper ever being conscious of what is taking place. As therefore a person cannot go to sleep in pain, no more can they die in pain; the one event being as impossible as the other, and for the same reason.

"Death's half-brother, sleep;"

We may remark further, that this painlessness of death is the result of physical causes, and altogether independent of moral qualifications. Shakspeare, who is always true to nature, represents the death of boasting, cheating, guzzling old Falstaff as calm and peaceful.

'Nay, sure he's not in hell,' says Dame Quickly; 'he's in Arthur's bosom, if ever a man went to Arthur's bosom. 'A made a finer end, and went away an it had been any christom child; 'a parted even just between twelve and one; e'en at turning of the tide; for after I saw him fumble with the sheets, and play with flowers, and smile at his fingers' ends, I knew there was but one way, for his nose was as sharp as a pen, 'a babbled of green fields.' Henry V. Scene III.

A still more positive proof of the painlessness of death may, if you seek it, be found in the experience of those who, after being rendered insensible, and apparently dead, have been resuscitated.—Of these cases we have an abundance. Some have been hung, others drowned, and others suffocated for the want of air; but the experience is much the same in every instance. There was one keen sensation of pain, one moment of vivid memory, as though the whole life had been restored, succeeded by a series of pleasing sensations; but the consciousness of existence was never lost, and the person who had been hung amidst the yells and infamy of a public execution, or engulphed in the boiling surges of the sea, was, until restored to our actual life, surrounded by beautiful scenery, and in a state of tranquil bliss; the whole of the suffering encountered being scarcely more than the extracting of a tooth. We have abundant testimony that it is the case even when the muscular contortions might lead us to infer the contrary; for, as a person in convulsive fits is perfectly free from pain, so the spasmodic contortions sometimes observed in dying people are no indications of the conscious sensations of the subject; they are the mere resources of nature to retain her vitality. In the last moments of our existence, nature deals gently with us, and lays no burden upon the soul as it makes its exit from the body. We came unconsciously into existence, and found kind friends around, who rejoiced at our advent, and a mother's arms and heart ready to receive us; and as we make our exit from the stage of life, its cares and troubles, which have often pressed heavily upon us, are gently removed; we pass onward to our new home, and angel friends, more kind and beneficent than we of earth can ever be, wait our spiritual birth, and rejoice that another immortal is added to their number.—Dr John Mill.

A PRINTER ON A TRAMP.—A Dutchman, sitting at the door of his tavern in the West, is approached by a tall, thin Yankee, who is emigrating Westward on foot, with a bundle on a cane over his shoulder.

"Vell, Mishter Valking-shtick, vat you vant?"

"Rest and refreshment," replied the printer.

"Supper and lochin, I suppose."

"Yes, supper and lodging."

A BEAUTIFUL FAITH.—A pious woman, hunting up the children of want one cold last winter, tried to open a door in a wretched house, when she heard a little voice say, "Pull the string up high; pull the string up high." She looked up and saw a string, which, on being pulled, lifted a latch, and she opened the door upon two little half-naked children all alone. Very cold and pitiful they looked. "Do you take care of yourselves, little ones?" asked the good woman. "God takes care of us," said the oldest. "And are you not very cold? No fire on a day like this!" "Oh, when we are very cold, we creep under the quilt, and I put my arm round Tommy, and Tommy puts his arms round me, and we say, 'Now I lay me down to sleep;' then we get warm," said the little girl. "And what do you have to eat, pray!" "When Granny comes home, she fetches us something. Granny says God has got enough. Granny calls us God's sparrows; and we say, 'Our Father,' and 'Give us this day our daily bread,' every day. God is our Father." Tears came into the good woman's eyes. She had a mistrusting spirit herself; but those two little "sparrows," perched in that cold upper chamber, taught her a sweet lesson of faith and trust she will never forget.

☞ Harvard University, established in 1638, received its name in honor of John Harvard, who, at his death, bequeathed to it nearly £800. A monument was erected to his memory in 1828, on the summit of the burial ground in Charlestown.

☞ Brown University, at Providence, was named after Nicholas Brown, who did much by his liberality, to beautify the city and benefit the College.

ATTENDING ANGELS.

There are two angels which attend unseen
Each one of us, and in great books record
Our good and evil deeds. He who writes down
The good one, after every action closes
His volume, and ascends with it to God.
The other keeps his dreadful day-book open
Till sunset, that we may repent; which doing,
The record of the action fades away,
And leaves a line of white across the page.

A BRITISH MILITARY FLOGGING.

On Thursday, 14th ult., one of those sickening and brutalizing scenes of "reformation" in the army of the Queen of England, called "Military Floggings," was witnessed in the Old Parliament Buildings, Toronto. The victim was Private Welsh, of the 16th British Regiment, who was represented as an irredeemable character; but who, even if he be so, it would have been infinitely more humane and beneficial towards establishing a true spirit of subordination, to have taken out and shot.

The Toronto Leader gives the following account of the debasing scene, and the stolid courage with which the flogging was bourne:—

"Everything being prepared, the culprit was secured in the usual way to the triangle. His back and all the upper part of his body were bare, the only articles of dress he wore being his trousers and boots. His hands were bound together and securely fastened to the apex of the triangle, and his feet to either angle at the base. In this position, the muscles of the back rigid and the skin drawn tightly over the flesh, so that the application of the lash would have the most painful effect possible, he awaited the first blow with an air of resolution which would have been admirable in a martyr. A drummer, private Connell, who did not appear to have a great relish for the duty he was required to perform, stood at one side with the formidable 'cat-o'-nine-tails,' ready to begin his fearful work. The surgeon of the regiment was also present to give his advice with regard to the effect of the punishment, and suspend it should the man's powers of endurance give way before it was all administered. Before the order to commence was given, however, the adjutant of the regiment read the charges of which the culprit had been found guilty and the sentence of the court-martial. The drummer, then, amid the most painful excitement—the spectators holding their breath and feeling a wild throbbing at the heart—in obedience to the command of the superior officer, laid on the first lash. The leather thongs of the 'cat' were brought down with some hesitation and fell without much effect upon the culprit's back. The blow did not make him even wince, it produced no mark, it apparently caused little pain. The drummer again raised his arm, and again it came down with the same want of decision and force. He was evidently a stranger to the use of the lash, and felt nervous in the performance of his stern duty. He repeated the blows in the same manner till the twenty-fifth, when he was relieved by drummer Holland, who brought to the work more nerve and perhaps less compassion. The prisoner in the meantime had not uttered a word or a sound. He quietly stood all the blows that had been bestowed. The first lash inflicted by Holland, however, produced a different effect upon him. It was administered with no hesitation. The thongs descended sharply through the air, and fell upon the back with cutting effect, producing long red welts upon the skin, causing the prisoner to moan with agony. The second, the third, the fourth, and all the succeeding lashes by Holland were no less severe in their effects. The stripes upon Welch's back grew into cuts, from which the blood flowed sluggishly, and dropped in clots to the ground, and he gave utterance frequently to agonizing groans. At length, when Holland had administered nineteen lashes, and forty-four had been inflicted altogether upon the unhappy man, the doctor advised a suspension of the punishment, being of opinion that the entire number of lashes could not be inflicted with safety to Welch's life. He was then loosened from the triangle, and the usual appliances were made to his back to prevent excessive inflammation. After this had been carefully done, he was removed into the buildings, and afterwards to the military hospital, and the regiment was marched off the parade-ground and dismissed."

☞ Bowdoin College, Brunswick, Me., received its name in honor of James Bowdoin.

BY A MEMPHIS (TENN.) CORRESPONDENT.

I visited the port of Bridgeport, a day or two since, and remained several hours with Col. McDougal, of the 123d N. Y., who is in command. Witnessing a crowd of females around the commissary, I inquired the cause. "They are applicants for relief," replied Col. McDougal.

I approached the wretched creatures, and though familiar with the misery and destitution of cities, I must confess I never before witnessed a parallel to the scene which presented itself. I counted forty-seven females, of whom three possessed money to make purchases; the remainder were all pensioners upon the bounty of the government—all seekers for alms at the hands of the detested Yankees, who had been represented as the embodiment of all that was parsimonious. Of course, the whole throng must first apply to the provost-marshal, and when the proper hour had arrived, they were ushered into his tent, one by one, to relate their sufferings and the causes which had reduced them to their present condition. They were all new applicants, the old ones getting supplies at regular intervals without the intervention of the provost-marshal.

The first whose fortune it was to be called was a Mrs. Ricard.

Provost-Marshal—Are you a widow?

Mrs. Ricard—No, sir.

P. M.—Where is your husband?

Mrs. R.—With Bragg, in the Third Tennessee Cavalry.

P. M—Your husband is in the rebel army; when did he join it?

Mrs. R.—Two years since.

P. M.—Did he volunteer?

Mrs. R.—Yes, to keep from being conscripted.

P. M.—But the rebel conscription law was not then in force.

Mrs. R.—But they told him that it would soon be, and he had better volunteer.

P. M.—Was he not a strong secessionist from the start?

Mrs. R.—Yes; he thought you wanted to deprive us of our rights, and take all our slaves.

P. M.—How many slaves did he own?

Mrs. R.—None.

P. M.—Had he a plantation?

Mrs. R.—No, sir.

P. M.—What property had he?

Mrs. R.—Nothing; he lived by day's work.

P. M.—Why, then, was he so fearful about the slaves?

Mrs. R.—Because he was afraid the North would put the niggers on an equality with us.

P. M.—Your husband is in the rebel army and you ask us to supply you with bread. Why do you do this?

Mrs. Ricard threw aside the fly of the tent, and just outside stood five small children, who had but a single article of clothing—a light home-spun cotton wrapper—on each, though the wind was blowing chilly cold from the north. "They have not had a mouthful since yesterday morning," said Mrs. R., "and not half enough for six months."

The appeal was irresistible; the provost-marshal then told her he would administer the oath, and get her relief. On being asked to subscribe her name, she replied that she could not write, and accordingly a resort was had to the mark.

I continued with the officer till the whole number was disposed of, and noted the following statistics relative to the forty-four who were applicants for alms:

Number who could not write	35
" " wrote very badly	6
" " wrote well	3
Widows before the war	9
Women with husbands in the rebel army	20
Women with husbands in our army	1

The conversation related as occurring between the Provost-Marshal and Mrs. Ricard may be taken as a fair sample of that with nearly all, and it is unnecessary to repeat further; but it will be interesting to add a single exception to the general rule. It was of a lady, evidently well educated, as her chirography would have done credit to any one, and her language was entirely free from that peculiarity of dialect which marked the other applicants, but which I will not attempt to follow, as it is familiar to all your readers. By request I have suppressed the applicant's name.

Provost-Marshal—You are an applicant for relief?

Lady—Yes, sir.

P. M.—Where is your husband?

L.—He is dead, sir.

P. M.—When did he die?

L.—In 1859.

P. M.—Have you a plantation?

L.—Yes, sir; 400 acres.

P. M.—Where are your slaves?

L.—We had but four; one of them is a decrepit old woman, and is now with me. The remainder were carried off by Bragg's army, to keep them from falling into the hands of the Union troops.

P. M.—Were they carried away by your consent?

L.—They were not.

P. M.—Have you any objection to taking the oath of allegiance?

L.—I have not; I have always consistently opposed secession. I did so in the presence of Bragg's army, even more loudly than I oppose it now.

A PIECE OF LEGAL ADVICE.

The ancient town of Rennes, in France, is a place famous for law. To visit Rennes without getting advice of some sort, seems absurd to the country people round about.

It happened one day that a farmer named Bernard, having come to town on business, bethought himself that as he had a few hours to spare it would be well to get the advice of a good lawyer.

He had often heard of a lawyer named Fey, who was in such high repute that people believed a lawsuit gained when he undertook their case.

The countryman went to his office, and after waiting some time, was admitted to an interview. He told the lawyer that, having heard so much about him, and happening to be in town, he thought he would call and consult him.

"You wish to bring an action, perhaps?" remarked the lawyer.

"O, no," replied the farmer, "I am at peace with all the world."

"Then it is a settlement of property you wish to make?"

"Excuse me, lawyer, my family and I have never made a division, seeing as we drew from the same well, as the saying is."

"Will you tell me, then, what you do want of me?" said the lawyer, in a tone of surprise.

"Why, I have already told you, Mr. lawyer," replied Bernard; "I want your advice—I mean to pay you for it, of course."

The lawyer smiled, and taking pen and paper asked the countryman his name.

"Peter Bernard," replied the countryman, quite happy that the lawyer at length understood what he wanted.

"Your age?"

"Thirty years, or very near that."

"Your vocation?"

"What's that?"

"What do you do for a living?"

"Oh, that is what it means, is it? Why, I am a farmer."

The lawyer wrote two lines, folded the paper, and handed it to his client.

"Is it finished already?" said the farmer—"well and good! What is the price of that advice, Mr. lawyer?"

"Three francs."

Bernard paid the money and took his leave, delighted that he had made use of this opportunity to get a piece of advice from the great lawyer.

When the farmer reached home it was 4 o'clock, the journey fatigued him, and he determined to rest the remainder of the day. Meanwhile the hay had been cut two days, and was completely made. One of his men came and asked him if they should draw it out.

"What, this evening!" exclaimed the farmer's wife, who had come out to meet her husband. "It would be a pity to begin so late, since it can be done as well to-morrow."

Bernard was uncertain which way to decide. Suddenly he recollected that he had the lawyer's advice in his pocket.

"Wait a minute," he exclaimed, "I have an advice, and a famous one, too, that I paid three francs for; it ought to tell us what to do. Here, wife, see what it says; you can read written hand better than I can."

The woman took the paper and read this line—

"Never put off till to-morrow what you can do to-day."

"That's it," exclaimed Bernard, as if a ray of light had cleared away doubts. "Come, be quick! get the cart and away. It shall not be said that I bought a three-frank opinion and made no use of it."

Bernard himself set the example by leading the way in the work and not returning till the hay was brought in. The event seemed to prove the wisdom of his conduct, and the foresight of the lawyer.

The weather changed during the night, an unexpected storm burst over the
ley. The next morning it was found t

LECTURE ON IRELAND.

A large and very respectable audience assembled at the Peabody Institute last Thursday evening, to hear the Lecture of of Mr. RAFTERY, the eloquent young Irishman, who more than met the expectations of those who were least acquainted with his success as a lecturer in other places. He not only gave a historical and topographical sketch of the country, its legends and romances, but described in glowing eulogy its lovely scenery, the bravery of its sons and the beauty of its daughters. With that intense love of his native country so common to Irishmen, he grew eloquent in narrating her wrongs, and predicted the time as not far distant when there would be such an uprising of her people against her British oppressors as would most surely accomplish her complete deliverance.

His lecture was enlivened by specimens of wit and humor which so abound in the native Irish in all classes of life, and he also gave a specimen of the Irish language, which was somewhat musical, but more diverting than intelligible to audience. He dwelt with much fervor of eloquence on the noble deeds of the Irish patriots, and enumerated many names distinguished, the world over, as statesmen, warriors and patriots.

Although the lecture was more than an hour and a half long, there was no sign of weariness, but on the contrary, frequent manifestations of applause to the close. He made scarcely any reference to his notes, but spoke with the off-hand readiness of a practised orator.

ANTIQUARIAN SUPPER AND LEVEE.

The ladies of the Unitarian Society of this town have our most heartfelt thanks. The entertainment given by them on Wednesday and Thursday evenings last was one of the most pleasant and attractive gatherings it was ever our good fortune to attend. We are not alone in this. The Antiquarian Supper at Sutton's Hall is regarded by every one—that is, every one who was there—as the most successful, the most tasteful, and the most enjoyable affair of the kind which has of late years came off in this vicinity. The hall, the ante-rooms and the supper-room, if not crowded, were at least quite as full as the most sanguine could have desired. Every one was apparently in the best of spirits and seemed to be having a good time.

The supper, which consisted of that simple and wholesome fare with which our fathers nourished the inner man, was abundant and well served. The antique fashions were well re-produced, and in many instances the old-fashioned dresses worn both by ladies and gentlemen, were decidedly tasteful and becoming.

The dancing, which was participated in by large numbers of the gay and festive, was kept up to a reasonably early hour, and the party dispersed with a full conviction that the ladies of the Unitarian Society know how to get up a Levee.

SURPRISE PARTY.—A surprise and donation party was lately given to Rev. Mr. CHASE, rector of the Episcopal Church in Danvers. It was a very pleasant and happy affair. The donation, which was nearly $100, was presented to Mr. Chase by one of the party, who made a short speech, well adapted for the occasion. Mr. Chase responded in a few remarks, expressing his thanks for the liberality of his parishioners, and the kindness they conferred upon him; after which the company departed, satisfied with the result of the undertaking, feeling that they had realized the fact of its being "more blessed to give than to receive."

BURGLARY AND ARSON IN DANVERS. About 1 o'clock on Tuesday morning last, a shoemaker's shop, nearly opposite the residence of James D. Black, Esq., belonging to Mrs. Peabody of Andover, and occupied by Mr. William Wait and others—was discovered to be on fire. The usual alarm was given, but before the fire companies could reach the building, it was so nearly consumed that all efforts to save it were of no avail. The shop contained eight or ten sets of shoes, besides considerable stock for manufacture. As no remains of the leather, nails or heels of the shoes could be found among the ruins, it is believed by all that the shoes and stock were first stolen and the building then fired in order that no suspicion should rest upon the guilty parties. Shop breaking in Danvers has of late become quite common, but we hope the perpetrators of these offences may be discovered and brought to immediate and condign punishment.

DANVERS vs. HORSE RAILROADS.

MR. EDITOR,—I noticed in one of your late numbers an article upon the disadvantages of Horse Railroads—more particularly, however, upon the disadvantages of having one to connect Danvers with Salem. The writer of the article to which we allude, seemed to object to the proposed Horse Railroad for two reasons:—First, that it would injure our streets and make additional expense in keeping them in repair. Secondly, that it would injure trade in Danvers. These, we believe, were his principal objections to having a Horse Railroad to connect the towns of Danvers and Salem. But are such objections valid, when we consider the many advantages which would result from such a mode of conveyance? That there are not some objections to Horse Railroads in any locality, we shall not deny. In fact there is not an institution nor a corporation in the whole country which does not annoy or discommode a certain few. Houses of religious worship, colleges, literary institutions, the hundreds of different kinds of manufactories, the steam cars, telegraph lines, and everything else of the kind are, without doubt, detrimental to the interests or pleasure of certain individuals. But shall we throw them all aside because they deprive a few of certain enjoyments, that they would otherwise have? Shall we destroy our houses of religious worship for the reason that they may be a little too near some one's dwelling-house or shop, and therefore an annoyance to him on certain occasions? Shall we abandon the steam cars because certain persons, through whose land, or near whose dwellings they pass, are put to some trouble thereby? In short, shall we abandon every enterprise because some of their results may be objectionable? That is the question, and it is the only question for us to answer in the case of the proposed Danvers and Salem Horse Railroad.

There are some six or eight men in this town who keep a number of fancy horses, and who have but little else to do but exercise them by driving to Salem and back two or three times every day, that are opposed to the Horse Railroad. And is it not plainly to be seen why they are opposed to it? It is simply because it will discommode them a little in their rides for pleasure from here to Salem. There are also a few traders who think their business would be injured by the proposed Horse Railroad. But are either of the above objections to it sufficient? Shall ninety-nine one-hundreths of the inhabitants of the town of Danvers be put to trouble and expense daily on account of the present impracticable mode of conveyance to Salem, in order that the pleasure and interests of some few may be gratified and enhanced? In considering this question we ought to look to the greatest good of the greatest number. If nearly all of the people of Danvers are to be benefitted by the proposed new mode of conveyance to Salem, why not let them have it? It is evident to all that the horse car is much more convenient and preferable in many respects, to the omnibus; besides the omnibus does not run often enough to satisfy the wants of the people. There should be some means of going from Danvers to Salem, by public conveyance, as often as every hour.

The omnibus runs but six times during the day, leaving the post-office at 7 1-2, 9 and 12 o'clock A. M., and at 1, 3 3-4 and 6 o'clock P. M.; and here ends our means of going to Salem by public conveyance, except we can go on the steam cars three times during the day. It requires no argument to prove that there should be some plan adopted to remedy this matter. There is not a day passes when there are not more or less who are put to trouble and expense on account of the present inadequate means of conveyance to Salem. The wants of the people of both Danvers and Salem demand a Horse Railroad to connect the two towns, and in this way they can go from one place to the other as often as every hour, from 7 o'clock in the morning until 9 o'clock in the evening; and they will not be satisfied with any conveyance less convenient and practicable.

Instead of injuring the trade in Danvers, the Horse Railroad would increase it, if the Danvers traders would keep as great a variety of goods, and sell them as cheap as the Salem traders do; and we believe that, everything considered, goods can be sold at lower prices in the former than in the latter mentioned town. The Horse Railroad will have a tendency to raise the value of real estate in Danvers;—such has been the case in other places, and we know of no reason why such should not be its effect in this town.

It is not our purpose, in this article, to make mention of the many advantages of Horse Railroads; but it cannot be otherwise than that they add much to the prosperity and interests of the people of the many towns through which they pass. Such, at all events, is the almost unanimous opinion of those who, by observation and experience, know better about the matter than those entirely ignorant of it. We believe, on the whole, that no honest and unselfish man can deny that the proposed Horse Railroad would be of incalculable interest to the inhabitants, and general welfare of the town of Danvers and its neighboring towns.

FURLOUGHS.—We notice the return of several of our soldiers of the army who have re-enlisted for a second time of service, among them Eben S. Daniels, Timothy H. Lord, Nathan Lakeman, and J. A. Messer of the First Heavy Artillery, formerly the 14th Infantry.—Lieut. Peaslee, of the same regiment, is also home on furlough; so is Lieut. Hanson of the 39th Mass. Reg. Nelson Symonds, of the 39th, George B. Symonds, Thomas Riley, Joshua Very, and John Very, of the 19th, are with us, having re-enlisted. Nahum Morrison, of the same regiment, is also at home. These men have become hardened into veteran soldiers, and we cannot but rejoice that some such are found among us willing to continue in the service of the country at this time when our country so much needs their services.

JORDAN LODGE.—Below we give the names of the officers of Jordan Lodge for the present year:

☞ The Town Clerk sends us the number of Births, Marriages and Deaths in South Danvers in 1863, as follows:

BIRTHS—88 males; 62 females. Total, 150. Of this number, 78 were children of foreign parentage.

MARRIAGES—38.

DEATHS—100; of whom 47 were children under 8 years of age.

The births in town are decreasing every year. By the above figures, for 1863 we had 150; in 1862 we had 165; in 1861 we had 199; and in 1860 we had the large number of 234; yet our population, as near as we can judge, has not varied much the past four years.

AN OLD ROLL OF HONOR.—We have been presented with an old Temperance Pledge, containing about five hundred names of total abstainers, which is sixteen feet long and some inches. Among them are many of our citizens, who would be surprised to see their names on such a document. We have not room to publish it in this number. In the mean time we will only say that we should not be quite willing to trust a quantity of good liquor within reach of some of the signers with the expectation that it would be "let alone."

RECRUITING FUND.—At a meeting of the Rallying Committee, last Saturday evening, Feb. 13th, a sub-committee, consisting of A. A. Abbott, J. P. King, Stephen Blaney, Moses A. Shackley, A. A. White, William P. Clark, Joseph Poor, Chas. P. Low and A. L. Peirson, was chosen to canvass the town for subscriptions to assist in recruiting, and thus prevent a draft.

The committee, so far, have been quite successful, and they intend to follow up their patriotic work until all our citizens are called upon to contribute towards the good cause. Mr. F. Baker, although not a member of the committee, has been elected Treasurer.

JEFF DAVIS' ADDRESS.—The arch-leader of the sham Confederates, seeing the desperate state of his cause, has come out with an address to his army, in which he too plainly exhibits his desponding hopes by attempting to screw up their failing courage to the striking point. It is full of boasting and cajoling, and it may be considered by the Confederates as a kind of revival before death. Their drooping cause certainly needs some such stimulus.

☞ The desertions from the rebel army are multiplying. The conscription is sweeping into their ranks thousands of men who have always been loyal at heart, and who will seek the earliest occasion to desert; and the sufferings they are now called upon to endure tries the bravery of the fiercest traitors.

☞ The Charleston papers state that General Robert Toombs was ejected from a railroad car near Savannah because he had no pass, when he made a speech denouncing military despotism, and especially Beauregard, who afterwards had him arrested.

☞ The Richmond Despatch contains letters from Lee's army, showing that nearly all the regiments composing it have re-enlisted, and one letter says that, before the close of February, the whole army will have re-enlisted.

☞ The Republican caucus in Washington have voted to dispense with the name Republican and adopt that of Union.

☞ The annexed lines were written by the late lamented Mrs. HENRY C. TORR.

The following are the circumstances under which they were penned:—EBEN S. DUSTIN enlisted in April, 1861, and was in the Mass. 2d Regiment Vols.; shared all the hardships of that regiment in Co. A, until the battle of Antietam, where he was wounded; was then placed in hospital at Harrisburg, where he remained, and wrote to his widowed mother in complaining but hopeful letters, telling of times when he hoped to be able to return home. On Jan. 5th a letter came to announce to the poor mother if she wished to see her son living, to come quickly. She started immediately, and when she arrived and was shewn into the hospital, she did not know her son! he was so changed from a robust young man of 19 and a half years (he had been in the service one year and a half and was then 21,) to the skeleton she saw in that sick room! She said she thought if only she could take him in her arms and carry him home, how gladly she would have done it:—

A HOSPITAL INCIDENT.

Upon a narrow bed, weakened with pain,
A soldier lay, patient, complaining not,
But musing wearily upon the time
When, full of youthful life, he left his home,
Responsive to his country's earnest call.
The battles he had fought passed slowly on
Before his mind's reviewing eye, like some Vast panorama. Fearful sights were those,
Of falling comrades, hissing shot and shell;
While all the air was filled with sullen sound;
The roar, the crash, the trampling to and fro
Of officers intent on victory.
The martial orders ringing loud and clear
From throats that seemed of brass, so firm and strong
The tones that issued forth; and all around
Obedient lines of heroes, brave and true,
Poured death into the rebels' whelming ranks:
And then the sudden shot that made his arm
Drop nerveless by his side; ah! with that thought,
A twinge of fiercer pain throbbed through and through
The wasted frame of him who thus had lain
Looking with memory's vision on the past.
A step is heard; a gentle, home-like tread,
He looks around and sees an anxious face,
Scanning in vain those suffering faces pale.
Slowly the eyes of this new visitant
Wander around the Hospital.
"Mother!"
Weakened and hollow was the eager voice
That met the waiting ear of her who walked
With quiet step along that long, sad aisle.
She turned and saw—her son! Could it be he,
So thin and pale, that e'en a mother's eye
Had failed to recognize the well-loved face?
It was. She knelt beside the bed in grief
Too deep for tears. Her arms were round him thrown,
And in a loving, faltering voice she spoke:
"My son! would that these arms might raise thee up
And bear thee safely to thy childhood's home.
As when thou wert a child I carried thee,
I fain would lift thee now, close to my heart,
Soothe all thy pain, and bring thee back to health."
It could not be. A few short weeks she watched
And waited by the dying soldier's bed.
Gently his Maker took the weary soul.
We cannot follow her, as, bearing on
All that remained of that young hero brave,
She silently, in tearless woe, went home.
Peaceful at last he lay within the home
Hallowed by love of friends, peaceful and calm.
His pains were o'er. Freely he gave his life
To save the country that he loved so well.
Thousands on thousands thus have freely given
All that they had, a willing sacrifice.
Reader, whene'er thine eye sees the sad list
Of "killed and wounded," pause and off r up
A prayer for those who mourn in lonely homes.

☞ The reports from the South and the movements of the rebel armies show that the confederates will begin the spring campaign at the earliest moment. They are determined to make a desperate attempt to break through the Union lines, and invade the North again in the Spring. Refugees, deserters and contrabands all agree that the conscription now being enforced by the bayonet at the South is making a clean sweep. No substitutes are accepted, and exemptions are rare.—Every available man, the aged as well as the youth, is being forced into the service.

ST. VALENTINE'S DAY.

Of all the days in the calendar there is none more auspicious than the day of "Lovemates." And of all the saints in the calendar, perhaps there is none more bedizened with borrowed plumage than this same goodly Saint Valentine; or one whose character has been more misconstrued in the legendary lore of love. In a word, it is plain that the saint has been sadly libeled by that arch tactitian Cupid, and that he had no more to do with matchmaking than a North Sea iceberg.

Saint Valentine, as history tells us, was as staid an old philosophical saint as ever wore a rosary; and history further informs us, that his head was chopped off by order of the Emperor Claudius, not, certainly, for teaching the art of love, or feasting on hearts roasted at the flaming altar of Hymen. Be that as it may, he, or any other saint who may establish a claim as the patron of lovers, will ever be welcomed with open arms by the young, the beautiful and the good.

Valentine writing is a custom so old that we are at a loss to find its origin.—Lydgate mentions it as long ago as 1476; and that the custom was abused in the olden time as well as now, appears from the fact that it was at various periods suppressed, and divers other customs were substituted by the old and phlegmatic, in order to supersede the "choosing of valentines," and, if possible turn the day to some other account. All these efforts have, however, been in vain—youth will have its heydey so long as people are born young, and there is no impulse to which the young can so safely give free play, as that of pure and natural affection—

> 'The more thou dam'st it up, the more it burns;
> The current, that with gentle murmur glides,
> Thou know'st being stopp'd impatiently doth rage.'

Valentines, in their legitimate use, cannot be supposed to exercise any but good influences, and many a sweet damsel who

> 'Never told her love,
> But let concealment like a worm i' the bud,
> Feed on her damask cheek,' hath, under the rosy, enigmatic license of St. Valentine's day, opened the eyes of some doubting lover to renewed hope, and without a compromise of that native modesty which is "the variest jewel of the female mind," brought two loving hearts together.

But valentines have another pleasing effect;—they gratify a sort of innate and excusable vanity. We do not believe there is a being on earth so Platonic and callous as to be insensible to an expression of preference, come from what source it may, and especially if it comes from one of the opposite sex. All are fond of praise, and when praise cannot be legitimately bestowed.

> 'A little flattery sometimes answers well.'

So that people may be even cheated into a good opinion of themselves, and, as a natural consequence, placed on good terms with all the world and "the rest of mankind." We like the custom, in its proper use, and therefore hail the season just began, as one sacred to lovers, and to all the tender, out-of-sight, twilight paraphernalia peculiar to their calling. It is the season when, to them all things are beautiful, and all things good, except, perhaps, perverse papas, mammas and guardians, who are not supposed to understand these things, and consequently are unable to appreciate them. It is the season when, to them, the world seems worth inhabiting; the sweet breath of pure confidence is breathed into their souls; and thus the light bark of joyous youth is wafted gently on toward the boisterous ocean of maturer years.

LENT.—The Catholics are now holding Lent. It continues forty-six days, including six Sundays, which are not a part of Lent, leaving the forty days for fasting and prayer. Mondays, Tuesdays and Thursdays, meat is allowed by dispensation, and lard may be used in cooking, on all days. On Sundays all restrictions are removed. In this (so says the Newburyport Herald,) the Catholics show wisdom over the Protestants. Our old Puritans made Sunday the most gloomy of all days—absolutely frightful to children. One might have thought that instead of rejoicing in a risen Saviour, they lamented that Christ had ever risen from the dead. The Catholics give it its proper place—a day of worship—and also a day of gladness, since on it death, the grave, and hell were overcome.

☞ A Newfoundland paper, in speaking of the House of Assembly of that island, eulogizes it in the following unequivocal language:—"Take them for all in all, from their Speaker downward, we do not suppose that a greater set of low-lived and lawless scoundrels, as public men, can be found under the canopy of heaven."

☞ A correspondent of the Chicago Tribune says the largest and most powerful fleet yet seen on the Mississippi is now being fitted out for Admiral Porter. The greatest activity prevails in all the naval depots and yards in the Ohio and Mississippi. The workmen are employed day and night, so as to have the vessels ready at the appointed time.

WAR CORRESPONDENCE.

The following extract is from a letter received in this town from a member of Co. I, 17th Mass. Regiment, who participated in the engagement at Bachelor's Creek:

NEWBERN, Feb. 5, 1864.

* * * I suppose you have heard of the attack on Newbern before this time. I will give you an account of the part we had in the skirmish. The rebels attacked our pickets at Bachelor's Creek at 3 o'clock on Monday morning, Feb. 1. About 6 in the morning we were ordered out there to re-inforce the 132d New York (that is the five companies of the 17th that were encamped outside of Fort Totten were ordered out). We had a hundred and twenty men and a section of Battery C, Third New York Artillery, all under command of Lieut. Col. Fellows. When we got about half way there we met a cavalry man with orders for the battery to come on as fast as it could. We opened right and left to let them pass through. We had not gone much farther before we had orders to come on at double quick, when we run from there to the creek.

When we arrived the rebels were just crossing the creek. We had orders to deploy one company as skirmishers to the right, the others to form in line of battle on the right of them in a field. We had just got into line when we saw the enemy advance out of the woods in line of battle. Our skirmishers fell back. Col. Fellows gave orders for them to rally on the battalion. We thought they (the rebels) were going to make a charge as they began to yell, but we gave them such a volley that they fell back under cover of the woods. When the smoke cleared away a little, we found they had planted a battery right in front of us, about two hundred yards from us, and we fell back a little, the battery shelling us. We very soon heard a cheering in our rear and thought we had got reinforcements—for the rebels had succeeded in getting in our rear, and we received a heavy fire from the woods on the right at the same time.

We then had an order to fall back, but it came too late to save the men, for the rebels were right on us. We were cut off from the road, so we had to take to the woods. Lieut. Cann, with myself and twenty men, made our way through to the camp of the 132d and started down the railroad; but the rebels had got ahead of us, as they tried to take a train of cars that started before we did, so we had to take to the woods again. We went across and came out on the Trent road, about four miles above Newbern. I arrived in Newbern about ten o'clock, all safe, but about tired out.

We lost, in all, one man killed and fifty-eight missing, and eight officers missing. From our company (I) we lost one lieutenant and six men. I will give you a list of the officers missing. They are Lieut. Col. Fellows, Surgeon Galloupe, Capt. Loyd and Lieut. Hill, Co. H; Lieut. B. N. Mann, Co. K; Lieut. Day, Co. E; Lieut. Comins, Co. I; and Adjutant Cheever, who was wounded. We can't find out whether he is still living or not.

The rebels came down to within three miles of Newbern and encamped for the night. The next night they all left. The report is they have gone to Washington. There were about fifteen thousand of them in all. It was Gen. Picket's Division from Gen. Lee's Army.

The next day they attacked Newport and captured it, and cut the railroad between here and Morehead city. We have been expecting reinforcements from Fortress Monroe, but none have arrived yet. Two regiments arrived today from Plymouth. I don't think we have got rid of the rebels yet. I think they will make us another visit.

TRIAL FOR MURDER. — Charles L. Stackpole of Beverly was on trial before the Superior Court in Salem, last week, charged with attempting to poison his father, mother and sister, all of Beverly, by mingling poison with their food. The indictment contained four courts. One for attempting to murder Mary A. Stackpole, by mingling poison in her soup, on the 26th day of March, 1862. The second count charged the prisoner with attempting to murder Simon Stackpole, on the 7th day of April, by poison in a quantity of wheat meal. The third count charged the prisoner with mingling poison with the food of Mary Stackpole, to-wit, the soup, aforesaid. The fourth count charged the prisoner with mingling poison with the food of Mary A. Stackpole, to-wit, in a quantity of wheat meal. The trial was before Judge Lord; A. A. Abbott, Esq., District Attorney, and J. W. Perry, for the Government; W. D. Northend and E. W. Kimball for the prisoner. All the facts in the case were published at the time. The sentence of the jury was, "Confinement in the State Prison for life, the first seven days solitary confinement."

THE FIGURE FOR FURS.—The minks ought to feel proud. Last year these skins were worth about $3.50 a piece; this year they are worth $8. Under such circumstances they have a fair claim to the title of "American sables" with which some of our euphonious fur dealers dignify them. All other fur-bearing animals have, however, taken a higher pecuniary rank this winter than they ever held before. Even musk rats have experienced promotion, and the peltry of the domestic cat has achieved an unwonted respectability.—Seeing that musks, musk-rats and cats are "to the manor born," we cannot see why their hairy envelopes should have gone up cent per cent. If you ask the fur merchants, they will solve the problem for you in a jiffy: "It is in the consequence of the war." We can understand why the war should somewhat enhance the price of manufactured furs, but not to that extent. Have the musks and musk-rats concluded to postpone propagation until the rebellion is put down?

We are afraid that in the fur trade, as in many other trades, advantage is taken of the war by dealers to overcharge consumers. In many kinds of business, tradesmen are realizing inordinate profits on their sales, and all under cover of that universal scapegoat of extortion, the war.

Be moderate with us, ye retail merchants. Imitate the liberal example of the press, which is one among the few interests that have not made the nation's calamity an excuse for an exaction.—Milton News.

MONEY.

Though money is not everything,
As oft is vainly vaunted,
Yet will it many comforts bring,
By feeble mortals wanted.
'Tis only money's worth you need,—
'Tis that which truly blesses,—
To clothe the limbs, to warm, to feed,
And ornament your dresses.
So if you seek adorning,
To walk with grace the earth,
Go buy your goods at Peabody's,
And get your money's worth.

TEETH ON VULCANITE!

DR. J. H. BATCHELDER,

DENTAL SURGEON,

No. 20 Washington St., (near Eastern Railroad Depot), SALEM, Mass.,

Is Licensed to make the New Patent Teeth on HARD RUBBER or VULCANITE, and from actual experience confidently recommends them for Strength, Beauty, and Cleanliness, to far surpass all other kinds of teeth;—are sure to fit the mouth; are much cheaper and better, being about half the price of teeth on Gold. Ill fitting Setts of Teeth on Gold can be exchanged for the Vulcanite, at very small expense. Specimens seen at Office. Teeth filled with Gold, Inserted, Extracted, and Children's Teeth Regulated—all with such care and gentleness as to be nearly painless,

Office Established in 1846.

PATENT VULCANITE DENTAL AGENCY.

NEW YORK.

This certifies that Dr. J. H. Batchelder is duly authorized by us to manufacture the PATENT VULCANITE or CORALITE GUMS AND PLATES, for Artificial Teeth, under the Goodyear Patents.

The public are cautioned against employing Dentists who have no license to manufacture such Plates and Gums, as patients using such Dentures made by infringers, are equally liable for damages with the maker or vender.

Special Notices.

BELL'S SPECIFIC PILLS.—WARRANTED IN ALL CASES.— —Can be relied on! Never fail to cure! Do not nauseate! Are speedy in action! No change of diet required! Do not interfere with business pursuits! Can be used without detection! Upward of 200 cures the past month—some of them very severe cases. Over one hundred physicians have used them in their practice, and all speak well of their efficacy, and approve of their composition, which is entirely vegetable and harmless on the system. Hundreds of certificates can be shown.

BELL'S SPECIFIC PILLS are the original and only genuine Specific Pill. They are adapted for male and female, old or young, and the only reliable remedy for effecting a permanent and speedy cure in all cases of Spermatorrhea, or Seminal Weakness, with all its train of evils, such as Urethral and Vaginal Discharges, Gleet, the Whites, Nightly or Involuntary Emissions, Incontinence, Genital Debility and Irritability, Impotence, Weakness or Loss of Power, Nervous Debility, &c., &c., all of which arise principally from Sexual Excesses or Self-Abuse, or some constitutional derangement, and incapacitates the sufferer from fulfilling the duties of married life. In all sexual diseases, as Gonorrhea, Gleet, and Strictures, and in Diseases of the Bladder and Kidneys, they act as a charm! Relief is experienced by taking a single box.

Sold by all the principal druggists. Price $1.

They will be sent by mail, securely sealed, and confidentially, on receipt of the money, by

J BRYAN, M. D,
No. 76 Cedar street, New York,

Consulting Physician for the treatment of Seminal, Urinary, Sexual, and Nervous Diseases, who will send, free to all, the following valuable work, in sealed envelope:

THE FIFTIETH THOUSAND.—DR. BELL'S TREATISE on Self-Abuse, Premature Decay, Impotence and Loss of Power, Sexual Diseases, Seminal Weakness, Nightly Emissions, Genital Debility, &c., &c., a pamphlet of 64 pages, containing important advice to the afflicted, and which should be read by every sufferer, as the means of cure in the severest stages is plainly set forth. Two stamps required to pay postage. December 9, 1863—1 yr.

IMPORTANT TO LADIES.—DR. HARVEY'S FEMALE PILLS have never yet failed in removing difficulties arising from obstruction, or stoppage of nature, or in restoring the system to perfect health when suffering from Spinal Affections, Prolapsus, Uteri, the Whites, or other weakness of the Uterine Organs. The Pills are perfectly harmless on the constitution, and may be taken by the most delicate female without causing distress—the same time they act like a charm by strengthening, invigorating and restoring the system to a healthy condition, and by bringing on the monthly period with regularity, no matter from what causes the obstruction may arise. They should, however, NOT be taken during the first three or four months of pregnancy, though safe at any other time, as miscarriage would be the result.

Each box contains 60 Pills. Price $1.

DR. HARVEY'S TREATISE on Diseases of Females, Pregnancy, Miscarriage, Barrenness, Sterility, Reproduction, and Abuses of Nature, and emphatically the Ladies' Private Medical Adviser, a pamphlet of 64 pages, sent free to any address. Six cents required to pay postage.

The Pills and book will be sent by mail when desired, securely sealed, and prepaid, by

J. BRYAN, M. D, General Agent,
No. 76 Cedar street, New York.

☞ Sold by all the principal druggists.
December 9, 1863—1 yr.

TERRIBLE DISCLOSURES — SECRETS FOR THE MILLION!—A most valuable and wonderful publication. A work of 400 pages, and 30 colored engravings. DR. HUNTER'S VADE MECUM, an original and popular treatise on Man and Woman, their Physiology, Functions, and Sexual Disorders of every kind, with Never-Failing Remedies for their speedy cure. The practice of Dr. Hunter has long been, and still is, unbounded, but at the earnest solicitation of numerous persons, he has been induced to extend his medical usefulness through the medium of his "Vade Mecum." It is a volume that should be in the hands of every family in the land, as a preventive of secret vices, or as a guide for the alleviation of one of the most awful and destructive scourges ever visited mankind. One copy, securely enveloped, will be forwarded free of postage to any part of the United States for 50 cents in post office stamps or 3 copies for $1. Address, post paid, DR. HUNTER' No. 3 Dvision Street, New York. je 3—1y

THE GREAT CAUSE

HUMAN MISERY.

Just Published, in a Sealed Envelope. Price 6 cents.

A Lecture on the Nature, Treatment & Radical

Cure of Seminal Weakness, or Spermatorrhœa, induced by Self-Abuse; Involuntary Emissions, Impotency, Nervous Debility, and Impediments to Marriage generally; Consumption, Epilepsy and Fits; Mental and Physical Incapacity, &c.—By ROB. J. CULVERWELL, M. D., Author of "The Green Book," &c.

The world-renowned author, in this admirable Lecture, clearly proves from his own experience that the awful consequences of Self-Abuse may be effectually removed without medicine, and without dangerous surgical operations, bougies, instruments, rings or cordials, pointing out a mode of cure at once certain and effectual, by which every sufferer, no matter what his condition may be, may cure himself cheaply, privately, and radically. This lecture will prove a boon to thousands and thousands.

Sent under seal, in a plain envelope, to any address, on receipt of six cents, or two postage stamps, by addressing the publishers,

HOSTETTER'S
CELEBRATED
STOMACH BITTERS.

A pure and powerful Tonic, corrective and alterative of wonderful efficacy in disease of the

Stomach, Liver and Bowels.

Cures Dyspepsia, Liver Complaint, Headache, Debility, Nervousness, Depression of Spirits, Constipation, Colic, Intermittent Fevers, Cramps and Spasms, and all Complaints of either Sex, arising from Bodily Weakness whether inherent in the system or produced by special causes.

Nothing that is not wholesome, genial and restorative in its nature enters into the composition of HOSTETTER'S STOMACH BITTERS. This popular preparation contains no mineral of any kind, no deadly botanical element; no fiery excitant: but it is a combination of the extracts of rare balsamic herbs and plants with the purest and mildest of all diffusive stimulants.

It is well to be forearmed against disease, and, so far as the human system can be protected by human means against maladies engendered by an unwholesome atmosphere, impure water and other external causes, HOSTETTER'S BITTERS may be relied on as a safeguard.

In districts infested with Fever and Ague, it has been found infallible as a preventive and irresistible as a remedy and thousands who resort to it under apprehension of an attack, escape the scourage; and thousands who neglect to avail themselves of its protective qualities in advance, are cured by a very brief course of this marvelous medicine. Fever and Ague patients, after being plied with quinine for months in vain, until fairly saturated with that dangerous alkaloid, are not unfrequently restored to health within a few days by the use of HOSTETTER'S BITTERS.

The weak stomach is rapidly invigorated and the appetite restored by this agreeable Tonic, and hence it works wonders in cases of DYSPEPSIA and in less confirmed forms of INDIGESTION. Acting as a gentle and painless apperient, as well as upon the liver, it also invariably relieves the CONSTIPATION superinduced by irregular action of the digestive and secretive organs.

Persons of feeble habit, liable to Nervous Attacks, Lowness of Spirits and Fits of Languor, find prompt and permanent relief from the Bitters. The testimony on this point is most conclusive, and from both sexes.

The agony of BILIOUS COLIC is immediately assuaged by a single dose of the stimulant, and by occasionally resorting to it, the return of the complaint may be prevented.

As a General Tonic, HOSTETTER'S BITTERS produce effects which must be experienced or witnessed before they can be fully appreciated. In cases of Constitutional Weakness, Premature Decay and Debility and Decrepitude arising from OLD AGE, it exercises the electric influence. In the convalescent stages of all diseases it operates as a delightful invigorant. When the powers of nature are relaxed, it operates to re-enforce and re-establish them.

Last, but not least, it is The Only Safe Stimulant, being manufactured from sound and innocuous materials, and entirely free from the acid elements present more or less in all the ordinary tonics and stomachics of the day.

No family medicine has been so universally, and, it may be truly added, deservedly popular with the intelligent portion of the community, as HOSTETTER'S BITTERS.

HELMBOLD'S
GENUINE PREPARATIONS.

COMPOUND FLUID EXTRACT BUCHU, a Positive and Specific Remedy for diseases of the Bladder, Kidneys, Gravel, and Dropsical Swellings.

This Medicine increases the power of Digestion, and excite the Absorbents into healthy action, by which the Wtaery or Calcareous depositions, and all Unnatural Enlargements are reduced, as well as Pain and Inflammation.

—:0:—

HELMBOLD'S EXTRACT BUCHU.

For Weaknesses arising from Excesses, Habits of Dissipation, Early Indiscretion of Abuse, attended with the following symptoms:—

Indisposition to Exertion,	Loss of Power,
Loss of Memory,	Difficulty of Breathing,
Weak Nerves,	Trembling,
Horror of Disease,	Wakefulness,
Dimness of Vision,	Pain in the Back,
Universal Lassitude of the Muscular System,
Hot Hands,	Flushing of the Body,
Dryness of the Skin,	Eruptions on the Face,
Pallid Countenance.

These symptoms, if allowed to go on, which this medicine invariably removes, soon follows

Impotency, Fatuity, Epileptic Fits,

In one of which the patient may expire.

Who can say that they are not frequently followed by those "Direful Diseases,"

"INSANITY AND CONSUMPTION."

Many are aware of the cause of their suffering, BUT NONE WILL CONFESS THE RECORDS OF THE INSANE ASYLUMS.

And Melancholy Deaths by Consumption bear ample witness to the Truth of the assertion.

The Constitution once effected with Organic Weakness requires the aid of Medicine to Strengthen and Invigorate the system,

Which HELMBOLD'S EXTRACT BUCHU invariably does. A Trial will convince the msst skeptical.

FEMALES—FEMALES—FEMALES.

In many Affections peculiar to Females the EXTRACT BUCHU is unequalled by any other remedy, as in Chlorosis or Retention, Irregularity, Painfulness, or Suppression of Customary Evacuations, Ulcerated Scirrhous state of the Uterus, Leuchorrhœa or Whites, Sterility, and for all complaints incident to the sex, whether arising from indiscretion or Habits of Dissipation, or in the

DECLINE OR CHANGE OF LIFE.

—:0:—

Take no more Balsam, Mercury, or unpleasant Medicines for unpleasant and dangerous diseases.

HELMBOLD'S EXTRACT BUCHU AND IMPROVED ROSE WASH CURES

SECRET DISEASES

In all their Stages, At little Expense.
Little or no change in Diet. No inconvenience.
And no Exposure.

It causes a frequent desire and gives strength to Urinate, thereby Removing Obstructions, Preventing and Curing Strictures of the Urethra, allaying Pain and Inflammation, so frequent in this class of diseases, and expelling all Poisonous, Diseased and wornout Matter.

Thousands upon Thousands who have been the Victims of Quacks, and who have paid heavy fees to be cured in a short time, have found they were deceived, and that the "POISON" has, by the use of "Powerful Astringents," been dried up in the system, to break out in an aggravated form, and perhaps after Marriage.

Use HELMBOLD'S EXTRACT BUCHU for all affections and diseases of the URINARY ORGANS, whether existing in MALE or FEMALE, from whatever cause originating and no matter of HOW LONG STANDING.

Diseases of these Organs requires the aid of a DIURETIC. HELMBOLD'S EXTRACT BUCHU IS THE GREAT DIURETIC, and is certain to have the desired effect in all Diseases for which it is Recommended.

Evidence of the most reliable and responsible character will accompany the medicine.

STURGIS'S
ELECTRIC COMPOUND!
AN EFFECTUAL CURE FOR
NEURALGIA AND RHEUMATISM.

Also, invaluable for Spinal Irritation, Hip Complaints, Ague in the Face, Tooth Ache, Pain in the Side, Back, Limbs, Ear Ache, Lumbago, &c.

The proprietor, in offering this medicine to the public, desires to state that this preparation does not belong to the class called patent medicines. Its value has been tested for many years, and it has been found fully adequate to the removal of many obstinate cases of the above complaints, which other celebrated remedies had failed to reach, and which had baffled the skill of eminent physicians. The proprietor does not claim that it will cure but one class of disease. All persons who are afflicted with any of these complaints are earnestly requested to try this Compound and judge for themselves.

AMONG THE ADVANTAGES OF THIS MEDICINE ARE THE FOLLOWING:

Its effect is very rapid—in most cases instantaneous.

It is external in its application, and the patient runs no risk in using it. It does not strike to the stomach.

It reaches the nerves and muscles, as it is believed no other medicine does.

It has cured some of the most violent and obstinate cases of Neuralgia ever known.

It can be used on a child or on an aged person alike.

While it is very powerful, it is perfectly harmless.

The proprietor has been allowed to publish the names of many persons who have used the Compound with the most beneficial results. He inserts here a few of them. They are among the most respectable citizens of Boston, and their residences and places are given:

And many others.

The proprietor is permitted to publish the following letter from O. C. Pitkin, Esq., Principal of the High School in the city of Chelsea, and well known as one of the most successful teachers in New England:

CHELSEA, April 30, 1863.

FRIEND WILLIAMS:—Yours of the 26th is received. My wife was troubled with severe Neuralgia in the face. She tried your Compound with decidedly good effect. I think it is an excellent article, and have recommended it in one instance, where it also produced good effect. You certainly have the liberty to refer it to me.

With much respect, yours truly,
O. C. PITKIN.

Important to the Afflicted.

DR. DOW continues to be consulted at his office, Nos. 7 and 9 Endicott street, Boston, on all diseases of a

PRIVATE OR DELICATE NATURE.

By a long course of study and practical experience of unlimited extent, Dr. D. has now the gratification of presenting the unfortunate with remedies that have never, since he first introduced them, failed to cure the most alarming cases of

GONORRHŒA AND SYPHILIS.

Beneath his treatment, all the horrors of venerea and impure blood, Impotency, Scrofula, Gonorrhoea Ulcers, pain and distress in the regions of procreation, Inflammation of the Bladder and Kidneys, Hydrocele, Abcesses, Humors, frightful Swellings, and the long train of horrible symptoms attending this class of disease, are made to become as harmless as the simplest ailings of a child.

SEMINAL WEAKNESS.

Dr. D. devotes a great part of his time to the treatment of those cases caused by a secret and solitary habit, which ruins the body and mind, unfitting the unfortunate individual for business or society. Some of the sad and melancholy effects produced by early habits of youth, are Weakness of the Back and limbs, Dizziness of the head, Dimness of sight, Palpitation of the heart, Dyspepsia, Nervousness, Derangement of the digestive functions, Symptoms of Consumption, &c. The fearful effects on the mind are much to be dreaded; loss of memory, confusion of ideas, depression of spirits, evil forebodings, aversion of society, self-distrust, timidity, &c., are among the evils produced. Such persons should, before contemplating matrimony, consult a physician of experience, and be at once restored to health and happiness.

Patients who wish to remain under Dr. Dow's treatment a few days or weeks, will be furnished with pleasant rooms, and charges for board moderate.

Medicines sent to all parts of the country, with full directions for use, on receiving description of your cases. Dr. Dow has also for sale the French Capottes, warranted the best preventive. Order by mail. 3 or $1 and a red stamp.

CAUTION
TO FEMALES IN DELICATE HEALTH.

DR. DOW, Physician and Surgeon, 7 and 9 Endicott street, Boston, is consulted daily for all diseases incident to the female system. Prolapsus Uteri, or falling of the Womb, Fluor Albus, Suppression, and other menstrual derangements, are all treated upon new pathological principles, and speedy relief guaranteed in a very few days. So invariably certain is the new mode of treatment, that most obstinate complaints yield under it, and the afflicted person soon rejoices in perfect health.

Dr. Dow has no doubt had greater experience in the cure of diseases of women and children, than any other physician in Boston.

Boarding accommodations for patients who may wish to stay in Boston a few days under his treatment.

Dr. Dow, since 1845, having confined his whole attention to an office practice, for the cure of Private Diseases and Female Complaints, acknowledges no superior in the United States.

N. B.—All letters must contain four red stamps, or they will not be answered.

Office Hours from 8 A. M. to 9 P. M.

CERTAIN CURE
IN ALL CASES, OR NO CHARGES MADE.

Dr. Dow is consulted daily, from 8 a. m. to 8 p. m., as above, upon all difficult and chronic diseases of every name and nature, having by his unwearied attention and extraordinary success gained a reputation which calls patients from all parts of the country to obtain advice.

Among the physicians in Boston, none stand higher in the profession than the celebrated DR. DOW, No. 7 Endicott street, Boston. Those who need the services of an experienced physician and surgeon should give him a call. P. S.—Dr. Dow imports and has for sale a new article, called the French Secret. Order by mail. Two for $1 and a red stamp.

THE TELL-TALE LETTER.

BY ZETA PHI.

It was a Sabbath evening in August. The sermon was finished, the last notes of the majestic organ had ceased, and he congregation of Rev. Mr. B———'s church in Newton were dispersing to heir respective homes. Among the last o leave the church might be seen two young men, apparently over twenty years of age, who pressed rapidly on through he main street, pausing only to give a hasty salutation to the few friends they met, till they reached the quiet avenue eading to their own dwellings. Neither of them had yet spoken. Their hearts were too full for utterance. Playmates n boyhood, classmates and companions t school, their intimacy had ripened into he strongest friendship in after life, as he elder left his native town to complete is education in Dartmouth College, leav- ng the younger to enter the counting- oom of his father, then a wealthy merchant in Boston. Returning to his home, resh with collegiate honors, the few eeks which the two had spent together erved only to unite more firmly the onds of their mutual attachment. But n the morrow they were to be separated —perhaps forever. The return of the ne to Hanover, to commence the study f medicine, his chosen profession, was o be followed in a few weeks by the de- arture of the other to enter the army of he Potomac, in which he had enlisted, d a few days since received a commis- on. Previous, however, to his depart- re, he was to be united in marriage to e eldest daughter of a distinguished tizen of his native town, whom we will ll Cora Appleton. The well known oquette and envious rival of all the girls the neighborhood had, at last, after ushing the hopes of hosts of suitors een conquered by Edward Harris.— trong doubts were yet entertained by e village gossip of the faithfulness of er love, although her heart and hand had en pledged to him, whose ardent affec- on was only equalled by the utmost nfidence in the faith of his beloved.— he two young men thus walked on for me time in silence, when, after some fort, the elder spoke:—

"Edward, during all our intercourse ese few weeks, scarcely an allusion has en made to your approaching marriage; d I could not separate to-night without eaking one word. You know already at I have no faith in coquettes, and I em Cora no exception; my advice would for you to test the faithfulness of her tachment by delaying until your return om the war."

"No, no, Henry, that cannot be.— en were I so disposed, everything is w arranged for our marriage. Believe e, when you know her better, you will ve no such doubts of her."

"For your sake, I hope my fears are founded. Yet it would be useless for e to deny that I feel very anxious for ur future welfare. But may I ask if ra is to remain with her father after ur marriage till your return."

"After paying a long visit to some ends," was the reply. "Her arrange- nts are for a month's visit with her usin in Hanover, thence to New Haven l Trenton, and home."

"Indeed!" exclaimed the other; "it ll be a pleasure to know that, for a lit- time, at least, she is to be so near ."

"I am glad it is to be so. And I hope will see her frequently while in Han- er, and I feel sure you will form a bet- opinion of her than you have now."

"I shall endeavor to do so. Shall I you a moment in the morning before go?"

"Yes; I shall await you at the depot. od night."

"Good night, and God bless you."

Time passed rapidly on. Henry Allen l become busily engaged in his study the medical college with his wonted zeal and enthusiasm. Edward Harris had taken a farewell leave of his friends, and was occupied with scenes of bivouac and battle. In the mean time, the month of Cora's visit to Hanover had glided swiftly away, and she had departed for New Haven. Edward had seen but little of her, owing to her numerous engagements, and his own occupation in study; and, during the last two weeks, she had contrived to elude him almost entirely.

A few months later found our young student, one fine November morning, in his room enjoying a few moments of leisure. His thoughts involuntarily wandered far away to the tented field, and to the soldier with whom he had passed so many pleasant hours.

While thus engaged, a faint rap at his door was followed by the entrance of the little daughter of his hostess, holding in her hand a letter, which she gracefully gave him, saying:

"Is not this yours, Mr. Allen?"

He took the letter carelessly, supposing that it was only one which he might have accidentally lost from his pocket, in going to or from his room, but upon opening it, the first words which met his gaze were, "Dear Willie!" Surely that was not his name. Presently he espied a carte de visite enclosed, and what was his astonishment to find a perfect picture of Cora, his friend's wife. He turned to the signature; it was simply "Cora." He looked up to speak to the girl who brought the letter, but she had gone. Dashing the unread letter upon his desk, and giving his bell a violent pull, he awaited her re-appearance.

She soon entered, smiling at his apparent agitation, asking,—

"Was that bell intended for me to answer, sir?"

"It was. I wish to know where you found that letter."

"Under your window," was the reply. "Did I not see you throw it out with some other papers this morning?"

"Possibly. But are you quite sure that it came from my window?"

"Perfectly so. I did not think it was of any importance, till I saw the picture, and then I knew you must have thrown it out unintentionally."

A moment's thought convinced him that there could be but one place whence the letter could have originated. He had recently purchased a desk belonging to one of the students in college, in which he found a variety of old papers, apparently of no importance, and he had been engaged this morning in emptying it of its contents, and he must have thrown the letter from the window with the rest, as the girl had said. But what could it all mean? He felt perfectly confident that there had been no student in college whom Cora could fitly address as "Dear Willie." A vague suspicion that his worst forebodings were about to be realized filled his mind, and with it came the reflection that he had not yet read the letter, which might explain all. He turned, immediately, therefore, to its perusal, and, as he glanced quickly over the contents, the cloud upon his brow growing heavier and heavier, let us, also, read with him:

"HAN——, NEW HAVEN, Oct. 18th.

MY DEAR WILLIE:—Just see there! I forgot that I was not still in Hanover, really as well as in spirit. My watch points to 'quarter after five,' so I know you are going to prayers, though I cannot hear the chapel bell. I think I will go with you invisibly, and remind you of a certain friend of yours, called Cora, who walked with you the most of the way this morning. Can you recall her?—Naughty girl! Am I not to be planning to draw your thoughts so far away? but perhaps you think of me without the aid of impossibilities. Willie, dear, that same little Cora is as blue as possible this evening, just as you said you should be sometimes, but I hope you will not be ———. My pen suddenly stopped at the end of my last sentence, for my thoughts were wandering clear away, till now it has got to be quarter before six, and it seems almost as if I could look up and see you coming down the walk to supper, as I have a great many times when you did not know I was watching for you. When you sit down to supper to-night, at this very minute, probably, please feel just a little sorry that the seat opposite is vacant, or at least filled by somebody that does not think half as much of you as I do, Willie.

"When you get this letter, please don't say much about it, because the people might think strange, but I could not help writing so soon, because I miss you, and I know you miss me, and will like to hear from me. Please do write to me as soon as you want to, and direct care of James Freeman, New Haven; and when I get to Trenton, and write to you again, I will give you my direction there. My sheet is full, and it is time for me to say Good bye, dear Willie. Now for these three or four weeks, at least, remember your friend CORA."

"Falser than the falsest!" was his exclamation, as he finished reading this scandalous letter. "And thus she is spending her husband's absence in carrying on a worse than flirtation with our students. Yes, the villagers were correct in saying that she had no heart to bestow. Credulous as I was, I would not have believed it would come to this, and so soon, too, after her husband's departure. The former owner of my desk must be the Willie to whom her letter is addressed."

Here, then, was a dilemma. As those of the students who left college, left what furniture they wished to dispose of in charge of some one student to sell, it would be almost impossible to ascertain to whom the desk, in common with so much other property, had belonged. He examined it again and again, but could find no mark which would identify its possessor. After some thought, he concluded that it would be better for him to keep silent for a while, and in the mean time to watch carefully for any clue which would betray the person with whom this clandestine correspondence was held.

Several weeks passed on, and all his efforts to solve the mystery had proved utterly hopeless. He had frequently been on the point of enclosing a copy of the letter, which he had hitherto kept entirely secret, to his friend, but he still delayed, reluctant to inform him of his unwelcome discovery.

One evening, as our student returned from supper, and had seated himself for the perusal of some letters he had just obtained from the mail, he was interrupted by a loud knocking at his door, and at his summons "Come in," entered a student from the Junior Class, with whom he had a slight acquaintance, having met him at a social entertainment a few weeks since.

"Good evening, Howland. Have a seat."

"I have come on rather a novel errand," said the person thus addressed, "and as I was afraid before I entered your room, a fruitless one, but I see you can help me."

"I shall be very happy to do so. Pray inform me how I can serve you."

"Possibly you remember Blatchford, of the Senior Class, who recently enlisted."

"Indeed I do," was the reply, "and a noble fellow he was, too"

"Well, he left in such confusion that he neglected to take from his desk some papers which he prized very highly. I have been searching for some time for the purchaser, till to-day some one informed me that you had it, and I find he was correct, for there it stands," said Howland, pointing towards the desk.

"Do you refer to any particular thing?" queried our student, believing that he had at last found what he had long sought.

"Yes. There was a letter, in which a photograph was enclosed, which he is very anxious to recover, and he desired me to use all my efforts to obtain it, if possible."

"May I ask if you are acquainted with the contents of that letter? It appears to me that I should preserve such a one as that in a safer place than a common desk."

"It was, indeed," returned the other, smiling, "rather a singular letter. And the young lady now denies that she ever wrote it. Blatchford was a fool to have had anything to do with her."

"Is it possible?" exclaimed Allen, rising from his seat. "Well, Howland," he continued, "although I am the fortunate possessor of this letter, I must claim the right to refuse, at present, to give it up. I, too, like you, have been seeking for the owner of this desk, that I might discover to whom the letter was addressed; for the young lady in question is the wife of my dearest friend, Edward Harris."

"Wife!" ejaculated Howland; "do you give me to understand that she is married? Then Blatchford has been basely deceived."

"This is getting to be a serious affair. Can it be that Blatchford is one more added to her already numerous victims. It is indeed fortunate that you came here this evening. Did he ever see her before her arrival in Hanover?"

"I presume not. I judge, however, from your conversation, that you can give me some information of her previous history."

"I shall be pleased to do so," replied Allen, as he proceeded to relate what the reader is already acquainted with. At the close of a long conversation, in which Allen, in his turn, learned all the circumstances of Blatchford's connection with her while in Hanover, Howland rose to bid adieu to his friend, for such he could now call him, promising to come again the following evening. Allen immediately sent the letter, having now obtained convincing proof of its authenticity, together with a full account of the attendant circumstances, to his friend Harris. In due time he received an affectionate reply, thanking him for this new manifestation of his continued interest in his welfare, and for disclosing the true character of her whom he could never more regard as his wedded wife.

WIDOWED AND POOR.

BY T. S. ARTHUR.

If you must have it, Jane.

There's no must in the case, Harry. Why will you talk so to me, as if I were unreasonable and extravagant?

Mrs. Drayton looked hurt and offended.

I didn't say you were unreasonable and extravagant, Jane.

You might as well have said it, was retorted in a tone of voice far from amiable.

I think not; Mr. Drayton spoke in a depressed way, and rather to himself than to his wife.

Why, then, did you say if I must have it? asked Mrs. Drayton, in an imperative manner.

Now, of all things in the world, Mr. Drayton most dreaded what are known as family jars; and he was always ready to make concessions for peace. He could meet outside troubles, and stand up bravely, even with odds against him in the life-battle, but at home, he wanted rest and peace. And to secure these, he too often yielded things that should have been held firmly. Thence, it came to be understood with Mrs. Drayton and her eldest daughters that whatever they desired would be yielded, if the right degree of pressure were brought to bear on husband and father. The case now at partial issue involved a new parlor carpet; the English Brussels which had been on the floor for nearly five years, not being considered by many degrees elegant enough for exhibition on the occasion of a fashionable party, to be given in two weeks.

Mr. Drayton did not respond to his wife's sharp interrogation. He never entered into word encounters on the field of home.

It is as much for your credit as mine, added the lady, seeing her husband did not answer. Brussels went out of date years ago; and besides, ours is faded and shabby. Mrs. Langdon, whose carpet looked new along side of ours, has put down tapestry velvet; and so has Mrs. George and Mrs. Toner. Nobody that pretends to any sort of style has Brussels now.

What will you have to pay for new carpets? asked Mr. Drayton, consent in his voice.

Two dollars a yard.

How many yards will be required?

About fifty.

One hundred dollars, said Mr. Drayton.

That's all. Only a hundred dollars.

Very well. You had better see about it at once.

Go to Orne's.

And there is another thing we should have, said Mrs. Drayton.

What?

A kind of patient acquiescence was in the speaker's voice; as of one who suffered, yet veiled the signs.

Curtains.

Mr. Drayton evinced no surprise.

I've always set my heart on curtains, as you know. It is one of my weaknesses.

Mr. Drayton sighed faintly, so faintly that it was not perceived.

I guess the carpet will do now, he made answer, forcing a lightness of manner which he did nor feel. And taking up his hat he hurried off to his store.

We'll have the curtains, said Effie, the oldest daughter, in a gleeful tone, as her father shut the street door.

Of course we will, replied the vain extravagant mother. Silk damask and lace.

Effie struck her hands together, exclaiming—Splendid! Oh, I do so admire curtains! They give to a room such an elegant appearance. We must get them before the party.

Yes, I mean that.

And ma, said Effie, her manner changing, don't you think we ought to have a new sofa, and a set of chairs? Hair cloth has such a poor look.

Mrs. Dayton shook her head. Your father will say No to that.

Just look at them, ma! And Effie caught hold of a chair and turned it to the light. All the freshness has gone. They are dull and mean. After the new carpet is down, and the curtains at the windows, we'll be ashamed of the sofa and chairs. For my part, I'd rather not have elegant curtains, unless other things are to accord. This would-it-you-could way of doing things I despise.

Just my feelings, answered the weak, foolish mother. But, Effie, you know how hard it is to do anything with your father. We must manage the best we can, and get things by degrees. The curtains and carpet will do for this time. There will be a crowd in the room, and no one will observe the furniture.

But Effie was not satisfied. She argued for the new chairs and sofa, and argued so conclusively that her mother came over to her side. Soon after breakfast they started out to select the carpet. Between one and two dollars a yard, and one at three dollars, the contrast of quality and appearance was so great that the costliest one was chosen.

From Orne's they went to Carryl's, and after an hour's examination of curtains, selected a set for three windows, at one hundred dollars a set to be put up on the morning of the day on which the party was to be given.

Shall we call at White's? said Effie, as mother and daughter emerged on the street.

We can't go any further in this direction, was the answer, in a tone from which all life had departed.

Why not?

Mrs. Drayton shook her head and closed her lips tightly.

Why not? repeated Effie.

Because we have gone far enough.—Your father didn't say we might get the curtains, and I don't know what he'll think of it. I'm almost sorry I ordered them. He'll be angry when the bill comes in.

It will soon be over, returned Effie lightly. Father's anger isn't very terrible at any time. I'm not afraid of it.

The curtains and the carpet must suffice, said Mrs. Drayton, firmly.

Anyhow, persevered Effie, we can drop in at White's as we go up street, and look at his furniture. We needn't buy, you know.

So they dropped in, and it turned out as Effie had anticipated. A set of half a dozen brocatelle chairs, at ten dollars each, a sofa to match at seventy-five, three reception chairs at five dollars each, and a small sofa at forty dollars, were ordered to be sent on the day the curtains were to go up.

Mrs. Drayton returned home in a soberer mood than when she went out.—Her husband had not consented, with anything like pleasure to the expenditure of a hundred dollars for carpets; and now, as she mentally added up the price of carpets, curtains and furniture, the startling aggregate of six hundred and forty dollars looked her rebukingly in the face! Mrs. Drayton was unusually quiet for all the rest of the day; for she could not help looking forward, with a vague feeling of anxiety, to the time when her husband would know what had been done. Purposely she had directed that the curtains be put up, and the furniture sent home on the day of the party; and her hope was, that in the exhilaration and social delight of the occasion, her husband's displeasure, if any were felt, would be absorbed.

But something more than parlor adornments was to grace the occasion. These made only a part of the expense. There must be new dresses, and some costly, if not showy, ornaments befitting the hostess and her daughters, who were considerably vexed and annoyed at the perversity of Mr. Drayton in refusing to order a suit of clothes from his tailor.

Let us sum up briefly the cost of this party, to the giving of which Mr. Drayton had opposed many arguments, not the least earnest of them being, We can't afford it. Add to the six hundred and forty dollars already noted, two hundred for dresses, laces, jewelry, etc., for Mrs. Drayton and her two oldest daughters, and the cost of wines, confectionery, and more solid refreshments, for a party of over seventy, and we have a sum in excess of one thousand dollars, every cent of which was in the line of waste and extravagance, as will appear.

Don't ask me to get anything, was the almost impatient answer of Mr. Drayton to his wife, on the morning that preceded the grand party. She had asked him to stop at the florists and order some bouquets.

Father is as crusty and ill-natured as he can be, said Effie, after he had gone out.

He don't like this party, answered Mrs. Drayton; and I am almost sorry, now, that I ever attempted to give it.

It is just like him. I never saw such a man.

Mrs. Drayton did not rebuke her daughter for this remark.

In the mean time, staggering mentally under a burden that he felt was crushing him down, Mr. Drayton repaired to his store, to meet, and if possible overcome, in the day's strife, with advancing misfortune; for, after fifteen years of active and intelligent business life, he found himself on the verge of ruin, and the cause was excessive expenditure in living, by which a constant drain had been made on his profits, thus depriving him of needed capital, and the advantages it always gives a merchant. During the whole of these fifteen years, one thousand a year may fairly be set down in the charge of extravagant living; the amount having been expended to gratify the pride and vanity of his wife, in dress, style, entertainment and the hundred unconsidered that waste a man's substance for naught. We do not wholly exonerate Mr. Drayton. He knew, better than his wife, that he was living too expensively all this time, and it was, therefore, his duty to order the household differently.—But he was a weak man on this side, and yielded for the sake of giving pleasure. He saw that his wife's heart was set on living like her neighbors, most of whom were better off than they were; and so he complied, consented or acquiesced in silence, when he knew that things were going all wrong. And now an inevitable crisis was advancing upon him.

One thousand dollars, of the fifteen thousand wasted in fifteen years, would have saved Mr. Drayton on that day; for lack of it, his paper went to protest, and at four o'clock, he took his way homeward, stricken down in the prime of his manhood, and conscious that the blow, falling as it had done on a spirit exhausted by long endurance, had hurt him beyond the leech's skill.

The elegant carpet had been laid, the curtains hung, and the new brocatelle furniture arranged in the parlor. Mrs. Drayton had closed all the shutters, and lighted the gas in order to see and admire the effect.

Splendid!—had just fallen from her lips, when the rattle of her husband's key was heard in the latch, and, a moment afterward, Mr. Drayton stood, pale and bewildered, in the parlor door.—Though confounded by what he saw, he comprehended the scene.

Now don't be angry! said Mrs. Drayton, crossing the room quickly. But what's the matter, Henry? Are you sick? Her voice had changed from a tone of deprecation to one of anxiety.

Yes, was the low, faintly uttered response, and Mr. Drayton sat down like one whose strength had suddenly departed.

What ails you, Harry?

Oh, father! The children drew, frightened, around him.

For a little while he sat shrinking in the chair; then rising, he looked steadily, but not angrily, at his wife, and said:

Jane—this is all wrong; and it is hard for me to believe it of you. But I will not hurt any one now by reproaches. You will have enough of them born in your own thoughts. There can be no party here to-night. I am a ruined merchant, fallen under a weight too heavy to be borne. Send a notification to all that were invited; the reason will, in most cases, be understood.

Saying this, Mr. Drayton went with uncertain steps from the room, and ascending to one of the chambers, threw himself on a bed, from which he never arose. Soon afterward a servant started in haste for the family phpsician, who, when he came, found a white-faced man rapidly sinking under an exhaustive flow of blood from the lungs. Tears were vain; care was vain; love was vain. The overtasked and overburdened man had fallen half-way on his fruitless journey toward worldly competence—fallen to rise no more; and when he left his family, nurtured until then by pride on the lap of luxury, he left them poor and helpless, in a world that remembered all their social ambition, vain love of show and extravagance, as so much against them, instead of so much in their favor.

"Widowed and poor!" was the pitying answer made to an inquiry about Mrs. Drayton a year after her husband died.

And she lived so handsomely during Mr. Drayton's lifetime. What a sad change!

Yes, it is sad. Ah! if she and her children had now the hundreds of dollars that were wasted in entertainments, expensive dressing and social display, Effie and Ellen would not be far from home trying to earn, as teachers, something with which to help their mother support and educate their younger sisters and brothers; and Mrs. Drayton would not be that toiling slave, the poorly paid keeper of a second-rate boarding house. Wilful waste makes woeful want, says the proverb: every day we find its truth exemplified; yet who takes warning? This year we see a wife tricked out in jewels, silks and laces, like a queen, flinging to the public gaze, as the humming-bird or butterfly, all her wealth and beauty. Next year, missing her from the street and opera, we ask, What of Mrs. ——? And the low-voiced, pitying answer comes—Widowed, poor!—And still there is a better promise for the poor widow, struggling for existence, than for the vain, extravagant wife, smothering her true womanhood in a false ambition to seem weaker, prouder, and more extravagant than her neighbors. The trial may be severe, the journey hard; but at the end it is a truer peace. But why make misfortune a necessity? Why not, wisely and temperately, use the good gifts of God, building therewith temples for the indwelling of immortal virtues, instead of piling up vainglorious towers, on sandy foundation, that are sure to fall?

A FRIENDLY OFFER MISINTERPRETED.—Mr. Pilkington, a small farmer living in Pennsylvania, was lately drafted for the service of his country. His wife, though she possesses but a very small stock of information, is one of the best of conjugal partners, and she is much troubled at the thought of parting with her husband. The other day, as she was scrubbing off her doorsteps, a rough looking stranger came up and thus addressed her:

"I hear, marm, that your husband has been drafted."

"Yes, he has," answered Mrs. P., "though dear knows, there's a few men that couldn't be better spared from their families."

"Well, marm, I've come to offer myself a substitute for him."

"A what?" asked Mrs. P., with some excitement.

"I'm willing to take his place," said the stranger.

"You take the place of my husband, you wretch! I'll teach you to insult a distressed woman that way, you vagabond!" cried Mrs. P., as she discharged the dirty soap-suds into the face of the discomfitted substitute, who took to his heels just in time to escape having his head broken by the bucket.

☞ An Ohio stumper, while making a speech, paused in the midst of it and exclaimed: "Now, gentlemen, what do you think?" Instantly a man rose in the assembly, and with one eye partially closed, modestly replied: "I think, sir—I do indeed, sir—I think if you and I were to stump the country together, we could tell more lies than any other two men in the country, sir; and I'd not say a word during the whole time, sir!"

☞ A man seeing an oyster vender pass by, called out:

"Give me a pound of oysters."

"We sell oysters by the measure, not by weight," was the oysterman's reply.

"Very well," said the other, "then I'll take a yard of them."

☞ "Sambo, you fool, what makes you steal after that rabbit when your gun has no lock on it?" "Hush! hush! dar; de rabbit don't know that!"

☞ "Excuse me, madam, but I would like to ask you why you look at me so very savagely?" "Oh! beg pardon, sir. I took you for my husband!"

☞ What is the best line to lead a man with? Crinoline. And the best line to lead a woman with is a masculine.

The Wizard.

WEDNESDAY, FEBRUARY 24, 1864.

WASHINGTON'S BIRTHDAY.

On Monday last we had at the Peabody Institute a noble celebration of the Birthday of the Father of his Country, and it was well worthy of the great occasion which called it forth. It consisted of music, prayer, and addresses agreeably to the following programme:

Singing—"Columbia shall be free."
Prayer—Rev. Mr. Barrows.
Remarks by the Chairman.
Remarks by Rev. Mr. Barber.
Singing—"Sweetening English Tea."
Remarks by Rev. Mr. Safford.
Singing—"Banner of the Sea."
Remarks by Rev. Dr. Briggs.
Singing—"Emancipation Hymn."

The addresses of the President of the Day, and of Rev. Messrs. BARBER and SAFFORD, were eloquent, interesting and appropriate—the two latter dwelling on the character and career of WASHINGTON, from which they drew lessons of an exalted patriotism. Both productions were beautiful in sentiment, language and delivery, holding up to view the moral greatness of their illustrious subject, as a pioneer, a man, a warrior and a magistrate. The addresses abounded in felicitous passages which frequently brought down the applause of the audience, who listened attentively throughout.

Had the meeting closed here, all would have gone away abundantly satisfied, and it would have been considered as a most successful and appropriate observance of the day. The music, the prayer, and the speaking were all in keeping with such an occasion. But another speaker was presented to the meeting, Rev. Dr. BRIGGS of Salem, who came before the audience full of the inspiration of the day, and in a strain of impassioned and thrilling eloquence, enchained their close attention, interrupted by frequent applause, which only too feebly expressed the delight of the hearers. The eloquence of Dr. Briggs is just the kind to "fire the Northern heart," and our citizens are always glad to listen to his voice.

The music, which was pronounced excellent, was performed by a select choir, under the direction of Mr. WILLIAM P. CLARK, and it added much to the interest of the exercises. Thus closed one of the most interesting and successful celebrations which ever took place on such an occasion in South Danvers.

BENJAMIN GOODRIDGE.

The death of a man who has for many years occupied a prominent social and business position in our community, demands more than a passing mention. In early life, and during the more active period of his business career, Mr. GOODRIDGE was a man of mark among his townsmen and in this vicinity. No enterprise of interest to the town, or the general public, was undertaken without receiving either his sanction or opposition. Whichever side he adopted, he entered into its defense with his whole soul. He was a man of strong feelings, opinions and impulses, and engaged in all public measures with an energy and determination which usually commanded admiration, if not success. He was an ardent patriot, and his love of country and devotion to the cause of the Union was as strong in his last moments as in the more active period of his career. He was a Whig of the Henry Clay school, and he manifested his admiration of that distinguished statesman by the most active and untiring exertions to procure his election to the Presidency. It was mainly through his efforts that Rufus Choate was first elected to Congress, and that, too, without a nomination from any political convention. Mr. GOODRIDGE never was an aspirant for public office, yet very few men have had more influence in giving political positions to others. At the time of the second war with Great Britain, Mr. GOODRIDGE was lieutenant in the Danvers Artillery, then under command of Capt. Jesse Putnam, and was with that corps when it acted as coast guard at Beverly, and more than once aroused the sleeping citizens by their alarm guns.

In social life, Mr. GOODRIDGE was well known and highly regarded by all who knew him. Inflexibly honest and upright, he was a sworn foe to sham and pretense of every kind. Holding a high standard of honor, meanness in stations exalted or humble always had his scorching condemnation. He was a constant attendant and supporter of religious worship, and in his family relations his strong and energetic will, which gave him so much character abroad, gave place to the kind and gentler qualities of the husband and parent.

ANTIQUE PARTY.—We learn that it is in contemplation to have another Antique gathering at Sutton Hall, this time in behalf of the Soldiers' Aid Society, whose funds, we are sorry to say, have run very low and need replenishing. It will probably take place early in March. We hope to give further particulars next week. In the mean time there will probably be great search for old-time costumes. A band of music will be in attendance.

THE UNIVERSALIST FAIR AT DANVERS.—The Fair held on Wednesday and Thursday of last week by the young ladies of the Universalist Society in Danvers, was one of the most attractive and successful entertainments that has occurred in that town the present season. The Exhibition of Fancy articles was large and brilliant and the purchasers numerous.

On Wednesday evening a Dramatic Exhibition was given, which did great credit to the talent for comedy displayed by the young gentlemen and ladies who participated in the representation. The Comedy selected was the Honeymoon.

On Thursday evening, dancing and other festivities were the order of the hour.

We understand that the receipts amounted to about $450, and that the expected gains will be, after the expenses are paid, in the neighborhood of $350, which sum is, we believe, designed to be used for increasing the Library of the Sunday School.

It is expected that the Comedy will be repeated sometime next week, as large numbers were prevented from attending on Wednesday evening by the severity of the weather.

RE-ENLISTED.—Over 400 of the Mass. 24th Regiment have re-enlisted; so also has the Fourth (late Manning's) Battery, now under the command of CAPT. TAYLOR of this town. They arrived in Boston last Saturday, and a large number of the Battery boys visited this place on Sunday, coming from Boston in coaches. They were a hardy looking set of fellows, and the only damage a southern sun and climate had inflicted upon them was to so tan their faces that their friends could hardly recognize them. The battery, to a man, have re-enlisted, and CAPT. TAYLOR returns with them. Sergeant Sheen and Jacob Curtis, of this town, are also among the number. Of those in the 24th Regiment, belonging to this town, who have re-enlisted, are L. D. Cobb, C. W. Trask, Frank Plumer, Wm. F. Wiley and D. M. Bly. Wm. B. Hammond and Simeon R. Whipple wished to re-enlist, but could not pass with the examining surgeons, neither of them having as yet sufficiently recovered from late sickness. They have evinced good pluck at any rate.

LIEUT. A. A. PUTNAM.—For the information of the many friends of our late associate editor, Lieut. A. A. Putnam, we would state that he is at present commanding the Picket Guard stationed at Lambert's Point, a neck of land some six miles square, north of Norfolk city, Va., and bounded by the Elizabeth River and James Creek. The business of the guard is to intercept all illegal or contraband traffic between the city, river and creek, as there has been much smuggling of goods in this direction since the evacuation of Norfolk by the rebels. This position will give him a capital opportunity of becoming acquainted with the sentiments of the country people, with their manners, customs, mode of farming doing business, etc.

STEAM FIRE ENGINE.—A petition is in circulation in this town for a steam fire engine. It is headed by our Chief Engineer, WM. H. LITTLE, Esq., and will undoubtedly be one of the articles in our next town warrant. In speaking of the services of the Salem steamer at the Gloucester fire, the Boston Post says:

"The store of Mr. Cyrus Story, No. 89, on the northerly side of the street, was on fire, and if the north building should catch, no one could tell where the fire would end, for this yet untouched building was three stories high and close under it were some wooden buildings which must inevitably share the same fate. Here it was that the steam engine, No. 2, from Salem, was placed, and well did it maintain the reputation which the 'steamers' have enjoyed ever since their introduction. With arms of steel that never tired, and lungs of brass that were never exhausted, the 'machine' kept steadily at work and threw so much water that the fire here was 'drowned out.'"

THE CAPE ANN ADVERTISER.—Among the losses at the recent great fire in Gloucester, we notice that of Messrs. Proctor & Brothers, whose Office and Periodical Store were consumed. We very much regret their loss, not only on their own account, but on account of the people of Gloucester, who are deprived for the moment of the issues of a press which has always had an excellent influence in promoting the prosperity of one of the largest and most enterprising towns in the State. We shall look with earnestness and interest for the Phœnix which is to rise from the ashes of that great conflagration.

BLOW YOUR OWN HORN.—Blow your own horn. Yes, give a blast, and let Modesty blush, if she will. This false delicacy has been the stumbling block of more really good and capable men than we could enumerate in a year. Make a move; let the world know that you are awake. If you don't blow the horn, somebody else will, but not for your benefit—"IN A HORN."

OBITUARY.

Died in Danvers, February 12th, Miss Sarah R. Shillaber, aged 76 years 6 months.

To those who were acquainted with the subject of this notice, it will not seem unfitting that we remark upon some of the characteristic traits of a person who impressed all who beheld her, with a sense of power and originality.—Possessing an intellect of uncommon strength and quickness, her faculties without the aid of any unusual advantages, were well-cultivated by the medium of books and social intercourse, and she had laid up in her memory a varied store of information with which she enriched her conversation and charmed the listener.—With a fine form, a natural stateliness and dignity of bearing, an easy grace of manner and a sociable and hospitable disposition, she added to these advantages a ready tact in the adaptation of her conversation, while her power of sympathizing with others in their different moods, made her a pleasant companion to young and old. Her heart enriching itself by its outflowing kindnesses for others seemed proof against the chilling power of age, and preserved to the last an uncommon freshness of feeling. This youthfulness of spirit combined with the workings of a vigorous mind, prompted her to a lively interest in the welfare of her native land, and an anxious concern for the success of the government.

For her, death had no terrors: She felt the sublime wisdom of the sentiment, "Thy will, not mine," nor doubted any more the mercy of her Heavenly Father, in the earthly shadows she felt darkening around her, than in the more plainly beneficent exhibitions of his providential care. Fain would she have survived to see the tumult of war assuaged and the sweet waters of peace flowing once more to bless a happy and united land, but she heard the summons of Him by whom are ordered the destinies of individuals as of nations, and in the spirit of Christian resignation, bowed herself humbly to his will. The pains and sufferings of her illness, pangs often severe, she bore with characteristic fortitude, and cheerfully, not to say exultingly, spoke to her pastor and the friends who visited her, of her speedy passing-away to a better world. Warmly she expressed her sense of the mercies of God and her gratitude for the many kind manifestations of the sympathy of her friends which was so freely exhibited and which tended so strongly to cheer her latter days. The gift of a charming boquet of flowers awakened her enthusiastic admiration and refreshed her spirit, as if in their beauty and fragrance she caught a glimpse of the glory and breathed the air of that celestial land which is "fresher than rainbows, stabler than mountains, agreeing with flowers, with tides, and the rising and setting of Autumnal stars."—The devoted attentions of the companion of her household who had experienced so many kindnesses at her hands, and was able so beautifully to requite them, were to the suffering invalid as bread cast upon the waters, in the consolation which they ministered to her in her time of need.

Trusting in the arm of the Eternal; sustained by a lofty hope; desiring the forgiveness of friends as she herself forgave every thing; and leaving earth with a heart of love and good will for all,—bravely, but calmly as a child sinks to peaceful slumber, she cast forth upon the unknown sea, another instance added to the many, how grandly under the inspiration of the religious sentiment, a woman can die. P.

THE STRIKE among the journeymen curriers in this vicinity still continues.—The strikers have received pecuniary aid from other sections; the curriers' association of Boston having sent them some five hundred dollars, and other sums are expected from New York and Philadelphia. The Shoe and Leather Reporter says that the leaders also report that many master curriers in towns not affected by the strike, favor them and contribute largely to their relief, with the ulterior design of profiting by the stoppage of business competition in Salem and South Danvers to get higher prices and more customers for their stocks. We hear of large parties of workmen leaving town, but by the numbers we see every day in our streets, we are inclined to the belief that most of them are still here, waiting for "something to turn up."—The Register last Thursday contains an advertisement, headed, "To the Journeymen Curriers of Salem and South Danvers," from the officers of the National Union of Journeymen Curriers, Noah W. Crane of Newark, N. J., President, exhorting their brethren in this town and Salem to stand firm, and pledging themselves to sustain and support them.—Meanwhile the bosses still abide by their published declarations, refusing to hire any man belonging to the strikers' association, and are gradually filling up their shops with new, and in most cases, a different class of workmen.

GRAND TEMPERANCE JUBILEE.—We need scarcely remind our readers of the Temperance meeting to-morrow evening at the Institute. The fame of MR. CARSWELL's powerful eloquence, together with the importance of the subject must call together a large audience. See the advertisement.

☞ A bill was reported in the Legislature in aid of the families of volunteers, providing that parties who have a claim for State aid, and are refused by the Selectmen or City Council can appeal from such decision to the Governor and Council and their decision shall be final.

HARD ON FERNANDY. — Fernando Wood, in the House the other day said: "We of New York sent fourteen regiments into Pennsylvania when she was invaded!" "We of New York!" A witty Pennsylvania member replied sotto voce, "Yes you did, Fernando—the muskets that you sent to Georgia when the war broke out came back to Pennsylvania, at Gettysburg. Fourteen regiments of your friends, and more, brought them!"

THE CURRIERS' STRIKE.

[By request of one of our subscribers, we publish the following article, cut from the Shoe and Leather Reporter:]

The curriers of New York and Newark, as well as those of Salem and South Danvers and other places, have struck for higher wages under the lead of societies prescribing rules and regulations. Our readers need not be informed that we are on principle opposed to strikes, as well for the interest of the workman as of the employer. Even if successful for the time, they must inevitably in the end result in a reaction which will depress the price of labor just in the proportion in which it has been forced up by combination. A flood tide must be succeeded by an ebb. And generally the effect of a successful strike is to drive trade to other places and thus soon throw a portion of the workmen out of employment.

Our modern strikers do not often make any pretense of necessity. If they would courteously apply to their respective employers, the sense of interest would usually secure for them as favorable terms as the exigencies of the trade would warrant; but they are insane enough to believe that the employer can afford to pay them any figure by adding the increase to the price of the manufactured article, and that he is more likely to submit promptly to attempted coercion than to favorably entertain a respectful application from his individual workmen.

Aside from the objectionable features of a strike considered as a spontaneous movement for an immediate and specific object, the interference of organized societies establishing their regulations and rules both for employers and the employed, is not to be endured. No matter how disposed the journeymen of a particular establishment may be to come to terms with their employer, they must hold out for the benefit of other workmen. And these rules are often the most arbitrary, transposing the rates of labor, and affixing a higher figure to that which requires the least labor or skill. To submit to such dictation is humiliating to an employer. These societies, to accomplish their object, will of course laud those who are prompt in yielding to their terms, but such honors are rather equivocal; they serve only to mark the short sightedness and tame spirit of the manufacturer. A workman will often show a determination worthy of a better cause and hold out at great personal sacrifice for the benefit of his fellow workmen. His spirit is worthy of imitation by the manufacturers. It is worthy of serious attention how far it is honorable for a manufacturer, for the sake of temporary gain, to desert his fellows, and indeed whether he does not in the end lose vastly more than he gains by his prompt compliance.

To meet combination by combination is an evil, but it may be a necessary evil. And if there is no other way to counter-work these organized associations, we hold that both policy and honor require the employers to stand by each other and refuse to employ a member on any terms. In such a contest the issue cannot be doubtful. A general combination of manufacturers never yet failed and never will fail to break up any combination of operatives however strong and though supported by an ample fund—the accumulations of many years. The great machinist strike in England resulted in driving hundreds of journeymen forever from their trade and introducing hundreds of new men, thus insuring exemption from strikes for one generation at least. And it is far better for manufacturers to hold out, even long enough to instruct new men, than to allow these societies to gain prestige by success. But a prolonged contest is not generally necessary. It requires a large fund to support the men for a very few weeks. The shoe operatives four years ago raised thousands of dollars for this purpose, more than was ever raised before by any one combination of men in this country, but they soon eat it up and then were forced to yield. No strike can survive three weeks against a combination of manufacturers, when there is a belief that the employers are perfectly united and sincere. The mind of a workman may be blinded to his true interest; he may be intimidated or seduced by threats and shallow arguments; but no faith in the righteousness of his cause can stand an empty pokect and a forlorn hope.

IMPORTANT TO SOLDIERS' FRIENDS.—By a recent act of Congress, all packages of clothing, manufactured of linen, cotton or woolen, not exceeding two pounds in weight, may be forwarded through the mails to non-commissioned officers and privates in the army, at the rate of eight cents for every four ounces and fractions of four ounces, the same to be prepaid. The rates heretofore have been six cents per ounce, the same as letter postage.—The old rates are not altered in regard to packages sent for officers in the army.

☞ The Prince of Wales has presented to Harvard college a copy of the photographs of the Samaritan Pentateuch taken during the visit of his highness to Nabloos. This is claimed to be the oldest manuscript in the world. The Samaritans say that it is more than three thousand years old, and that it was executed by a grandson of Aaron.

CONTINENTAL MONTHLY.—This monthly for March is now before us. We find in this number an infusion by new writers, as well as solid reading from the old contributors, among the chiefest of whom is Hon. Robert J. Walker, who gives Part Third of his article on the Finances and Business of the Union. The poetry of this number is superior.

ATLANTIC MONTHLY.—Among the contributors to the Atlantic for March, we find Bayard Taylor, Dr. Holmes, Mrs. Shaw, Ike Marvel, Alice Cary, David A. Wassen and Whittier, who here appears not only as an author, but as the subject of an article. These papers, so far as we have read them, are characterized by the same good taste, elegant language and deep thought, which have made the Atlantic not only a household world, but necessary as a household possession.

☞ Perham's Mirror of the Rebellion is to be exhibited the rest of this week, at Mechanic Hall, Salem. It is well worthy of patronage.

This is an admirable illustration of the War of the Rebellion, and is one of the public Exhibitions which pays well for those who witness it. Go by all means, and send the children on Saturday afternoon.

THE GREAT FIRE IN GLOUCESTER.

According to the Gloucester Telegraph, which has six columns in reference to this great calamity, the number of buildings destroyed was 103, and the loss of property, $440,000, partially covered by an insurance of $178,850.

The fire was discovered about one quarter before four o'clock, and the alarm given, which soon became general. The streets were soon filled with people, and the engines were promptly on hand; the firemen used their utmost exertions to stay the course of the devouring element, but owing to the extreme cold, and high wind, their efforts were of little avail. The mercury at five o'clock stood at six degrees below zero.

The fire was first discovered in the store occupied by Andrew Elwell, Jr., in Sawyer's Block, and soon spread throughout the block, and was speedily communicated to the building easterly adjoining, and across the street. Thence the fire spread with wonderful rapidity, sweeping everything before it, and levelling every building, on each side the whole length of Front street, from Sawyer's block, where the fire originated, on one side, and from the building of Cyrus Story on the other, to the Custom House. A clean sweep was also made of nearly every structure in the rear of this half of Front street, and buildings were destroyed on Duncan, Spring, Pleasant, Hancock and Centre streets.

The scene presented was one of indescribable confusion. Men, women and children loaded with every conceivable article of furniture or stock in trade, seeking a place of safety; wagons loaded with goods and furniture; furniture and goods heaped up on the side of the street, in yards; much of which had again to be removed, as the fire spread with such unexpected rapidity.

Couriers were despatched to Annisquam and Rockport, and, at an early hour in the morning, two engines arrived at the scene of devastation, and worked with a will, but could accomplish but little. The people generally around the Cape, and from the adjoining towns, hastened to the rescue, and accomplished much good in saving property.

At a little after nine o'clock in the forenoon, steam engine No. 2, of Salem, arrived in the train, and was stationed at the reservoir on School street. A stream was soon doing good service upon the building of William West, then burning, and afterwards upon Cyrus Story's building, which was but partially destroyed. The arrival of this engine was most timely, as the fire was soon subdued. There can be no doubt that, but for the presence of this engine, the fire would have consumed many more buildings. Indeed, there is no telling where it would have terminated on Front street, and it could not have been kept out of Middle street, where the havoc would have been terrible.

To stay the fury of the elements and if possible check its progress several buildings along the route were blown up. We think the result demonstrated the fact that in case of wooden buildings, closely built, this course is of little avail, as in every instance the debris caught on fire and was destroyed, adding to the general conflagration. The house of Capt. Frederic G. Low, on Spring street, was the last building blown up, as also last one consumed, in this direction. It is possible that in this instance, the house being isolated somewhat from its neighbors, the blowing up, by hastening the fall of the walls after they caught, may have stopped the progress of the fire in this section.

The origin of the fire is unknown. It caught in the store of Andrew Elwell, Jr., who was in the habit of using the customary precautions in regard to fire.

The number of stores, dwellings and other buildings totally destroyed, was 103. Among the places of business destroyed were three lawyers' offices, the only ones in town; two extensive bakeries, the only ones in town; two dental establishments, the only ones in town; five fishing establishments; five dry goods stores; three clothing dealers; three large groceries; two boot and shoe establishments; two custom tailors; any number of liquor shops and drinking saloons; and the bookstore and printing office (the Cape Ann Advertiser) of the Proctor Bro's., together with their circulating library, containing 2000 volumes.

EAGLE ENGINE Co., of this town with their apparatus took the noon train from Salem for Gloucester, and arrived after the fire was pretty well subdued. The engine was not taken off the car.

RAPID MARCHING.—In Gen. Butler's late advance on Richmond, it is stated that his expedition went over in less than three days, the same ground that McClellan was four months in travelling. The distance traveled was about one hundred and twenty miles.

☞ People will tell good stories while they are about it. Read the following from a Western paper:—"In the late gale birds were seen hopping about with all there feathers blown off." We have heard of gales at sea where it required four men to hold the captain's whiskers on.

MCCLELLAN'S SPADES.—Colonel Freemantle an English officer, has recently published an account of a trip of "Three months in the South." He fell in with General Magruder and had a long and agreeable conversation with him, which as reported, resolved itself chiefly into abuse of the Puritans as "that pestiferous crew of the Mayflower," and praise of General McClellan. Magruder commanded at Yorktown the troops opposing McClellan's advance; and the former spoke with satisfaction of the delight with which he had seen the latter, "with his magnificent army, begin to break ground before earthworks defended only by eight thousand men."

☞ An Ecclesiastical Council convened at the Crombie Street Vestry on Friday afternoon, to act upon the resignation of the Rev. J. Henry Thayer. Rev. Mr. Sewall of Lynn was chosen moderator, and Rev. Mr. Barber of South Danvers, Scribe. After a hearing of the case the Council voted a dismission. It is seldom that a Society is called to part with a pastor more universally beloved. He will carry with him the best wishes of the whole community. Mr. Thayer is expected to sail for Germany about the 1st of March to spend a short time there before entering upon his duties as Professor at Andover.—Observer.

THE CALLS FOR MEN.—The calls for men to enter the military service of the government are thus dated and numbered:

April 16, 1861,	75,000
May 4, 1861,	64,748
July to Dec. 1861,	500,000
July 1, 1862,	300,000
August 4, 1862,	300,000
Draft, summer of 1863,	300,000
February 1, 1864,	500,000
Total,	2,039,748

☞ Thursday, February 18th, 1864, will ever stand forth prominently in the annals of Gloucester, as one of the most calamitous days ever experienced by our community, as the day when the fairer portion of our business street was, in a few hours, turned to smouldering ruins; when vast treasures were consumed, and many families made houseless. We shall no longer recur to the conflagration of 1830 as the GREAT FIRE, but to a more recent date.—Gloucester Telegraph.

☞ A Detroit letter to the Herald, says a great number of rebel deserters are flitting through the North as incendiaries; some are even to ship as crews of vessels and act as pirates at sea. The story is given for what it is worth.

☞ The Richmond correspondent of a South Carolina paper says that Secretary Memminger of the "C. S. A." caused his paper money stamping machines "to be muffled, lest the people should be driven crazy by their eternal 'click-clack!'"

☞ Manuscripts are occasionally to be met with printed on human skin—they are either Mexican or Peruvian. One of the former is to be met with in the library of Vienna, beautifully executed in colored figures, and a second in the library at Dresden, containing a fragmentary history of the Incas of Peru.

☞ The Springfield Republican discovers that Brigham Young is better off in one respect than the king of Ashantee. He can have as many wives as he wants, while the African sovereign is actually limited to 5333.

☞ A fellow went into a store in Gardiner and pulled a minister's ears, mistaking him for the editor of the Home Journal, as he sat back to him. "Got the wrong pig by the ear," says the Journal.

☞ Mrs. General Tom Thumb became a mother a few weeks since. Tom is said to have danced a hornpipe at the announcement.

☞ The English are alarmed by a fanatical belief said to be spreading in Southern India that a native king is to arise in 1864 and free all India from the invaders.

☞ The rebels, when they boarded the gunboat Underwriter, are said to have put a fat negro into the furnace to get up steam. Too brutal to believe.

☞ The law of Pekin, China, ordains that if a man is not married at twenty he shall be drummed out of town!

☞ A mason at Harrisburg, Pa., while dressing a block of stone, found a large petrified rattlesnake in it.

☞ Heenan's friends want him to fight King again in Canada for the sum of $30,000!

☞ Great Clothing Sale at G. BURBANK & Co.'s, No. 30 Washington street, Boston. The proprietors of this extensive clothing establishment are now opening their stock of Overcoats, Pants, Vests and Furnishing Goods, at greatly reduced prices. Certainly a better chance to secure bargains in clothing has never occurred in Boston. We advise our gentlemen readers to give this popular Boston firm a call.

TWO ELEGANT WORKS OF ART,
Just Issued!

he Departure of the Pilgrim Fathers for America, and The Landing of the Pilgrims in America.

Each Engraving 26 x 34 inches, price only 1,50 each, by mail. These constitute the nest pair of companion Engravings ever published in the United States. They were engraved by the most eminent steel plate Engraver this country, JOHN C. McRAE, of New ork City, and for artistic skill and high beau y were never excelled. Mr. McRAE is great whatever he attempts, but in these gems he as outdone himself. He was determined to nder them enduring monuments of his skill, d no pains or expense have been spared to ake them perfect works of Art, and to far cel any similar works ever issued in this untry. They are of the same size, and in ery respect equal to, the elegant English Engravings of the same subjects, which cannot be ught in this country for less than twelve dolrs and fifty cents, each copy.

We have undertaken a gigantic enterprise, d one in which we earnestly invite the coeration of all lovers of the beautiful in Art. e must sell fifty thousand copies of each of ese magnificent Engravings, and to accomish this have placed the price low enough to ing them within the reach of every one.—Will you help us? And in so doing confer life long pleasure on yourself! Such a great lue in Art for so little money, was never be e offered, and nothing short of a very large e will remunerate us. Such Splendid Par Gems are usually published at $5 or $10 ch, but we have determined to appeal to the blic, to sustain us in our efforts to bring them thin the reach of every family in the land.

The great historical value of these pictures—ir great elegance and beauty, will render m of incalculable value to every home.

VOLUNTEERS & CONSCRIPTS!

To Soldiers or any others wishing to increase their income, there is no better way of doing so at this time, than from the sale of our Watches. THEY ARE WARRANTED AS REPRESENTED!

"Particularly valuable for officers in the Army and travellers."—Frank Leslie's, Feb. 21.

"Prettiest, best and cheapest timepieces ever offered."—N. Y. Illustrated News, Jan. 10.

"Very pretty and durable Watches for the Army."—N. Y. Navy and Army Journ., [Government Organ,] Aug. 20.

"One of the oldest and most reliable houses in business."—Louisville, Ky., Journal, July 31.

MAGIC TIME OBSERVERS.

Being a Hunting or Open Face or Lady's or Gentleman's Watch Combined, with patent Self-Winding Improvement, a most Pleasing Novelty.

ONE of the Prettiest, Most Convenient, and decidedly the best and cheapest time piece for general and reliable use ever offered. It has within it and connected with its machinery, its own winding attachment, rendering a key entirely unnecessary. The cases of this Watch are composed of two metals, the outer one being fine 16 carat gold. It has the improved ruby action lever movement, and is warranted an accurate time piece. Price, superbly engraved, per case of half dozen, $204. Sample Watches, in neat morocco boxes, $35.

SILVER WATCHES!

First Class Hunting Time-Pieces for accuracy of movement, beauty of material, and above all, cheapness in price, these watches must insure universal approbation.

An imitation so faultless that it can hardly be detected by the most experienced judges. The material being of two metals, the outer one first quality Sterling Silver, while the inner one is German Silver, it cannot be recognized by cutting or heavy engraving, making it, not only in appearance, but in durability, the best resemblance of SOLID STERLING SILVER in existence.

The Sale of these Watches in the Army is a source of enormous profit, retailing, as they very readily do, at $25 and upwards. Many hundred dollars can be made in a single pay day by any one of ordinary business tact.

☞ AT WHOLESALE ONLY! In heavy hunting cases, beautifully engraved, white enamel dial, and fancy cut hands, in good running order, by the half dozen, $66. Sold only by the case of six!

Upon the receipt of two dollars, as a guarantee of good faith, we will send watches by express to any part of the loyal States, collecting balance of bill on delivery. This ensures buyers against fraud, giving them their watches before pay is required.

Soldiers in the disloyal States MUST remit CASH IN ADVANCE, as the express companies peremptorily refuse making collections in such dangerous localities. Remember, Cash in advance from within the army lines in rebel States. We guarantee the safe delivery of all Watches, whether they are sent by mail or express.

BELL'S SPECIFIC PILLS —WARRANTED IN ALL CASES.— —Can be relied on! Never fail to cure! Do not nauseate! Are speedy in action! No change of diet required! Do not interfere with business pursuits! Can be used without detection! Upward of 200 cures the past month—some of them very severe cases. Over one hundred physicians have used them in their practice, and all speak well of their efficacy, and approve of their composition, which is entirely vegetable and harmless on the system. Hundreds of certificates can be shown.

BELL'S SPECIFIC PILLS are the original and only genuine Specific Pill. They are adapted for male and female, old or young, and the only reliable remedy for effecting a permanent and speedy cure in all cases of Spermatorrhea, or Seminal Weakness, with all its train of evils, such as Urethral and Vaginal Discharges, Gleet, the Whites, Nightly or Involuntary Emissions, Incontinence, Genital Debility and Irritability, Impotence, Weakness or Loss of Power, Nervous Debility, &c., &c., all of which arise principally from Sexual Excesses or Self-Abuse, or some constitutional derangement, and incapacitates the sufferer from fulfilling the duties of married life. In all sexual diseases, as Gonorrhea, Gleet, and Strictures, and in Diseases of the Bladder and Kidneys, they act as a charm! Relief is experienced by taking a single box.

Sold by all the principal druggists. Price $1.

They will be sent by mail, securely sealed, and confidentially, on receipt of the money, by

J BRYAN, M. D,
No. 76 Cedar street, New York,

Consulting Physician for the treatment of Seminal, Urinary, Sexual, and Nervous Diseases, who will send, free to all, the following valuable work, in sealed envelope:

THE FIFTIETH THOUSAND.—DR. BELL'S TREATISE on Self-Abuse, Premature Decay, Impotence and Loss of Power, Sexual Diseases, Seminal Weakness, Nightly Emissions, Genital Debility, &c., &c., a pamphlet of 64 pages, containing important advice to the afflicted, and which should be read by every sufferer, as the means of cure in the severest stages is plainly set forth. Two stamps required to pay postage. December 9, 1863—1 yr.

IMPORTANT TO LADIES.—DR. HARVEY'S FEMALE PILLS have never yet failed in removing difficulties arising from obstruction, or stoppage of nature, or in restoring the system to perfect health when suffering from Spinal Affections, Prolapsus, Uteri, the Whites, or other weakness of the Uterine Organs. The Pills are perfectly harmless on the constitution, and may be taken by the most delicate female without causing distress—the same time they act like a charm by strengthening, invigorating and restoring the system to a healthy condition, and by bringing on the monthly period with regularity, no matter from what causes the obstruction may arise. They should, however, NOT be taken during the first three or four months of pregnancy, though safe at any other time, as miscarriage would be the result.

Each box contains 60 Pills. Price $1.

DR. HARVEY'S TREATISE on Diseases of Females, Pregnancy, Miscarriage, Barrenness, Sterility, Reproduction, and Abuses of Nature, and emphatically the Ladies' Private Medical Adviser, a pamphlet of 64 pages, sent free to any address. Six cents required to pay postage.

The Pills and book will be sent by mail when desired, securely sealed, and prepaid, by

J. BRYAN, M. D, General Agent,
No. 76 Cedar street, New York.

☞ Sold by all the principal druggists.
December 9, 1863—1 yr.

TERRIBLE DISCLOSURES—SECRETS FOR THE MILLION!—A most valuable and wonderful publication. A work of 400 pages, and 30 colored engravings. DR. HUNTER'S VADE MECUM, an original and popular treatise on Man and Woman, their Physiology, Functions, and Sexual Disorders of every kind, with Never-Failing Remedies for their speedy cure. The practice of Dr. Hunter has long been, and still is, unbounded, but at the earnest solicitation of numerous persons, he has been induced to extend his medical usefulness through the medium of his "Vade Mecum." It is a volume that should be in the hands of every family in the land, as a preventive of secret vices, or as a guide for the alleviation of one of the most awful and destructive scourges ever visited mankind. One copy, securely enveloped, will be forwarded free of postage to any part of the United States for 50 cents in post office stamps or 3 copies for $1. Address, post paid, DR. HUNTER, No. 3 Division Street, New York. je 3—1y

THE GREAT CAUSE
—OF—
HUMAN MISERY.

Just Published, in a Sealed Envelope. Price 6 cents.

A Lecture on the Nature, Treatment & Radical

Cure of Seminal Weakness, or Spermatorrhœa, induced by Self-Abuse; Involuntary Emissions, Impotency, Nervous Debility, and Impediments to Marriage generally; Consumption, Epilepsy and Fits; Mental and Physical Incapacity, &c—By ROB. J. CULVERWELL, M. D., Author of "The Green Book," &c.

The world-renowned author, in this admirable Lecture, clearly proves from his own experience that the awful consequences of Self-Abuse may be effectually removed without medicine, and without dangerous surgical operations, bougies, instruments, rings or cordials, pointing out a mode of cure at once certain and effectual, by which every sufferer, no matter what his condition may be, may cure himself cheaply, privately, and radically. This lecture will prove a boon to thousands and thousands.

Sent under seal, in a plain envelope, to any address, on receipt of six cents, or two postage stamps, by addressing the publishers,

HOSTETTER'S
CELEBRATED
STOMACH BITTERS.

A pure and powerful Tonic, corrective and alterative of wonderful efficacy in disease of the
Stomach, Liver and Bowels.

Cures Dyspepsia, Liver Complaint, Headache, Debility, Nervousness, Depression of Spirits, Constipation, Colic, Intermittent Fevers, Cramps and Spasms, and all Complaints of either Sex, arising from Bodily Weakness whether inherent in the system or produced by special causes.

Nothing that is not wholesome, genial and restorative in its nature enters into the composition of HOSTETTER'S STOMACH BITTERS. This popular preparation contains no mineral of any kind, no deadly botanical element; no fiery excitant: but it is a combination of the extracts of rare balsamic herbs and plants with the purest and mildest of all diffusive stimulants.

It is well to be forearmed against disease, and, so far as the human system can be protected by human means against maladies engendered by an unwholesome atmosphere, impure water and other external causes, HOSTETTER'S BITTERS may be relied on as a safeguard.

In districts infested with Fever and Ague, it has been found infallible as a preventive and irresistible as a remedy and thousands who resort to it under apprehension of an attack, escape the scourage; and thousands who neglect to avail themselves of its protective qualities in advance, are cured by a very brief course of this marvelous medicine. Fever and Ague patients, after being plied with quinine for months in vain, until fairly saturated with that dangerous alkaloid, are not unfrequently restored to health within a few days by the use of HOSTETTER'S BITTERS.

The weak stomach is rapidly invigorated and the appetite restored by this agreeable Tonic, and hence it works wonders in cases of DISPEPSIA and in less confirmed forms of INDIGESTION. Acting as a gentle and painless apperient, as well as upon the liver, it also invariably relieves the CONSTIPATION superinduced by irregular action of the digestive and secretive organs.

Persons of feeble habit, liable to Nervous Attacks, Lowness of Spirits and Fits of Languor, find prompt and permanent relief from the Bitters. The testimony on this point is most conclusive, and from both sexes.

The agony of BILIOUS COLIC is immediately assuaged by a single dose of the stimulant, and by occasionally resorting to it, the return of the complaint may be prevented.

As a General Tonic, HOSTETTER'S BITTERS produce effects which must be experienced or witnessed before they can be fully appreciated. In cases of Constitutional Weakness, Premature Decay and Debility and Decrepitude arising from OLD AGE, it exercises the electric influence. In the convalescent stages of all diseases it operates as a delightful invigorant. When the powers of nature are relaxed, it operates to re-enforce and re-establish them.

Last, but not least, it is The Only Safe Stimulant, being manufactured from sound and innocuous materials, and entirely free from the acid elements present more or less in all the ordinary tonics and stomachics of the day.

No family medicine has been so universally, and, it may be truly added, deservedly popular with the intelligent portion of the community, as HOSTETTER'S BITTERS.

HELMBOLD'S
GENUINE PREPARATIONS.

COMPOUND FLUID EXTRACT BUCHU, a Positive and Specific Remedy for diseases of the Bladder, Kidneys, Gravel, and Dropsical Swellings.

This Medicine increases the power of Digestion, and excite the Absorbents into healthy action, by which the Wtaery or Calcareous depositions, and all Unnatural Enlargements are reduced, as well as Pain and Inflammation.

—:0:—

HELMBOLD'S EXTRACT BUCHU.

For Weaknesses arising from Excesses, Habits of Dissipation, Early Indiscretion of Abuse, attended with the following symptoms:—

Indisposition to Exertion,	Loss of Power,
Loss of Memory,	Difficulty of Breathing,
Weak Nerves,	Trembling,
Horror of Disease,	Wakefulness,
Dimness of Vision,	Pain in the Back,
Universal Lassitude of the Muscular System,
Hot Hands,	Flushing of the Body,
Dryness of the Skin,	Eruptions on the Face,
Pallid Countenance.

These symptoms, if allowed to go on, which this medicine invariably removes, soon follows

Impotency, Fatuity, Epileptic Fits,

In one of which the patient may expire.

Who can say that they are not frequently followed by those "Direful Diseases,"

"INSANITY AND CONSUMPTION."

Many are aware of the cause of their suffering,
BUT NONE WILL CONFESS THE RECORDS OF THE INSANE ASYLUMS.

And Melancholy Deaths by Consumption bear ample witness to the Truth of the assertion.

The Constitution once effected with Organic Weakness requires the aid of Medicine to Strengthen and Invigorate the system,

Which HELMBOLD'S EXTRACT BUCHU invariably does. A Trial will convince the most skeptical.

—:0:—

FEMALES—FEMALES—FEMALES.

In many Affections peculiar to Females the EXTRACT BUCHU is unequalled by any other remedy, as in Chlorosis or Retention, Irregularity, Painfulness, or Suppression of Customary Evacuations, Ulcerated Scirrhous state of the Uterus, Leuchorrhœa or Whites, Sterility, and for all complaints incident to the sex, whether arising from indiscretion or Habits of Dissipation, or in the

DECLINE OR CHANGE OF LIFE.

Take no more Balsam, Mercury, or unpleasant Medicines for unpleasant and dangerous diseases.

HELMBOLD'S EXTRACT BUCHU AND IMPROVED ROSE WASH CURES

SECRET DISEASES

In all their Stages,	At little Expense.
Little or no change in Diet.	No inconvenience.
	And no Exposure.

It causes a frequent desire and gives strength to Urinate, thereby Removing Obstructions, Preventing and Curing Strictures of the Urethra, allaying Pain and Inflammation, so frequent in this class of diseases, and expelling all Poisonous, Diseased and wornout Matter.

Thousands upon Thousands who have been the Victims of Quacks, and who have paid heavy fees to be cured in a short time, have found they were deceived, and that the "POISON" has, by the use of "Powerful Astringents," been dried up in the system, to break out in an aggravated form, and perhaps after Marriage.

Use HELMBOLD'S EXTRACT BUCHU for all affections and diseases of the URINARY ORGANS, whether existing in MALE or FEMALE, from whatever cause originating and no matter of HOW LONG STANDING.

Diseases of these Organs requires the aid of a DIURETIC. HELMBOLD'S EXTRACT BUCHU IS THE GREAT DIURETIC, and is certain to have the desired effect in all Diseases for which it is Recommended.

Evidence of the most reliable and responsible character will accompany the medicine.

STURGIS'S
ELECTRIC COMPOUND!
AN EFFECTUAL CURE FOR
NEURALGIA AND RHEUMATISM.

Also, invaluable for Spinal Irritation, Hip Complaints, Ague in the Face, Tooth Ache, Pain in the Side, Back, Limbs, Ear Ache, Lumbago, &c.

The proprietor, in offering this medicine to the public, desires to state that this preparation does not belong to the class called patent medicines. Its value has been tested for many years, and it has been found fully adequate to the removal of many obstinate cases of the above complaints, which other celebrated remedies had failed to reach, and which had baffled the skill of eminent physicians. The proprietor does not claim that it will cure but one class of disease. All persons who are afflicted with any of these complaints are earnestly requested to try this Compound and judge for themselves.

AMONG THE ADVANTAGES OF THIS MEDICINE ARE THE FOLLOWING:

Its effect is very rapid—in most cases instantaneous.

It is external in its application, and the patient runs no risk in using it. It does not strike to the stomach.

It reaches the nerves and muscles, as it is believed no other medicine does.

It has cured some of the most violent and obstinate cases of Neuralgia ever known.

It can be used on a child or on an aged person alike.

While it is very powerful, it is perfectly harmless.

The proprietor has been allowed to publish the names of many persons who have used the Compound with the most beneficial results. He inserts here a few of them. They are among the most respectable citizens of Boston, and their residences and places are given:

Rev. N. Munroe,
Late Editor of "Boston Recorder."

Rev. H. M. Dexter,

And many others.

The proprietor is permitted to publish the following letter from O. C. Pitkin, Esq., Principal of the High School in the city of Chelsea, and well known as one of the most successful teachers in New England:

CHELSEA, April 30, 1863.

FRIEND WILLIAMS:—Yours of the 26th is received. My wife was troubled with severe Neuralgia in the face. She tried your Compound with decidedly good effect. I think it is an excellent article, and have recommended it in one instance, where it also produced good effect. You certainly have the liberty to refer it to me.

With much respect, yours truly,
O. C. PITKIN.

Important to the Afflicted.

DR. DOW continues to be consulted at his office, Nos. 7 and 9 Endicott street, Boston, on all diseases of a

PRIVATE OR DELICATE NATURE.

By a long course of study and practical experience of unlimited extent. Dr. D. has now the gratification of presenting the unfortunate with remedies that have never, since he first introduced them, failed to cure the most alarming cases of

GONORRHŒA AND SYPHILIS.

Beneath his treatment, all the horrors of venereal and impure blood, Impotency, Scrofula, Gonorrhoea Ulcers, pain and distress in the regions of procreation, Inflammation of the Bladder and Kidneys, Hydrocele, Abcesses, Humors, frightful Swellings, and the long train of horrible symptoms attending this class of disease, are made to become as harmless as the simplest ailings of a child.

SEMINAL WEAKNESS.

Dr. D. devotes a great part of his time to the treatment of those cases caused by a secret and solitary habit, which ruins the body and mind, unfitting the unfortunate individual for business or society. Some of the sad and melancholy effects produced by early habits of youth, are Weakness of the Back and limbs, Dizziness of the head, Dimness of sight, Palpitation of the heart, Dyspepsia, Nervousness, Derangement of the digestive functions, Symptoms of Consumption, &c. The fearful effects on the mind are much to be dreaded; loss of memory, confusion of ideas, depression of spirits, evil forebodings, aversion of society, self-distrust, timidity, &c., are among the evils produced. Such persons should, before contemplating marriage, consult a physician of experience, and be at once restored to health and happiness.

Patients who wish to remain under Dr. Dow's treatment a few days or weeks, will be furnished with pleasant rooms, and charges for board moderate.

Medicines sent to all parts of the country, with full directions for use, on receiving description of your cases. Dr. Dow has also for sale the French Capottes, warranted the best preventive. Order by mail. 3 or $1 and a red stamp.

CAUTION
TO FEMALES IN DELICATE HEALTH.

DR. DOW, Physician and Surgeon, 7 and 9 Endicot street, Boston, is consulted daily for all diseases incident to the female system. Prolapsus Uteri, or falling of the Womb, Fluor Albus, Suppression, and other menstrual derangements, are all treated upon new pathological principles, and speedy relief guaranteed in a very few days. So invariably certain is the new mode of treatment, that most obstinate complaints yield under it, and the afflicted person soon rejoices in perfect health.

Dr. Dow has no doubt had greater experience in the cure of diseases of women and children, than any other physician in Boston.

Boarding accommodations for patients who may wish to stay in Boston a few days under his treatment.

Dr. Dow, since 1845, having confined his whole attention to an office practice, for the cure of Private Diseases and Female Complaints, acknowledges no superior in the United States.

N. B.—All letters must contain four red stamps, or they will not be answered.

Office Hours from 8 A. M. to 9 P. M.

CERTAIN CURE
IN ALL CASES, OR NO CHARGES MADE.

Dr. Dow is consulted daily, from 8 a. m. to 8 p. m., as above, upon all difficult and chronic diseases of every name and nature, having by his unwearied attention and extraordinary success gained a reputation which calls patients from all parts of the country to obtain advice.

Among the physicians in Boston, none stand higher in the profession than the celebrated DR. DOW, No. 7 Endicott street, Boston. Those who need the services of an experienced physician and surgeon should give him a call. P. S.—Dr. Dow imports and has for sale a new article, called the French Secret. Order by mail. Two for $1 and a red stamp.

HOME FROM THE WAR.

'There'll be a bitin' black frost on the hills to-night, I tell ye!' said Moses Atterly, as he threw an armful of oak logs, fringed with silver-gray moss, upon the stone hearth, and rubbed his hands cheerily before the red, roaring blaze that encircled the rude iron fire-dogs in drifts of ruby sparks.

He was a tall, wiry-looking old man, with mild hazel eyes, and a skin well nigh as brown as the basket of butternuts that stood in the corner—a man whom you might easily fancy to have grown up among those rock-bound, wind-swept wildernesses, as one of the giant pines on the steep cliffs above had grown—stalwart, sturdy, and true to the very heart's core. The room was very plain, with no curtains at the narrow-paned windows, and no carpet save the odd zig-zag veins in the hickory boards that formed the floor; yet there was an air of comfort in the splint-bottomed chairs, with red moreen cushions, and the round table, neatly spread for the evening meal. Over the fire an apoplectic black tea-kettle kept up a dreamy song, and Moses Atterly's only child sat, watching the vaporous wreath curling from the spout—a pretty, soft-eyed girl, with a late rose in her braids of glossy, chestnut brown hair, and straight, clearly-cut features—now in shadow, and all irradiated by the capricious torches of flame that played at the hide-and-seek in and out among the crevices of the great bubbling, singing logs.

'Have you been to the post-office to-night, father?' she said, suddenly looking up as Moses gave the smouldering back-log a sort of remonstrating kick.

'No; but I met Jim Grayling down by the hemlock hollow, and he said he was goin' straight there; so I told him to ask if there was anything for our folks. He'll be here directly, I calculate, for it must be all of two hours ago.'

'I am sorry,' said Bessie, almost petulantly. 'Father, I detest the sight of that man!'

'My daughter!' remonstrated Moses, 'that ain't accordin' to either sense or gospel.'

'Well, I can't help it, father,' coaxed Bessie, stealing her soft, dimpled hand into the rough palm that lay on Moses Atterly's knee. 'He always seemed to me like—'

She stopped suddenly—so suddenly that the late rose fell out of her hair and lay on the stone hearth—for, as she turned her head, she saw James Grayling standing beside them, unfolding a coarse white-and-red worsted comforter from about his neck. He stooped, without a word, and picked up the rose for her.

'Why, Jim!' said farmer Atterly, 'where on airth did you drop down from? I didn't hear you come in!'

'Didn't you? I am sure I knocked loud enough,' said Grayling, with a deep red flush slowly fading from his cheek. 'Pretty well to-night, Bessie?'

'I am quite well enough,' pouted Bessie, without looking at him, and tossing her recovered rose in among the glowing cinders. Somehow or other it had lost its charms, after having lain in James Grayling's hand a second.

'Sit down, Jim,' said the farmer, heartily. 'Any mails for us to-night?'

'Nothing.'

What a strange smile passed over his face as he saw the sudden down-droop of Bessie Atterly's eye-lashes—the quiver around her mouth.

'Nothin'! That's queer. You see Bessie's feelin' kind o' worried 'cause she don't hear nothin' from Henry Ives.'

James Grayling paused, a little maliciously to note the sparkle in Bessie's eye as she leaned forward with reddening cheeks and intent look.

'What does he say?' she gasped.

'Well, I'm afraid you'll feel badly about it; but he says Harry Ives was captured with a half dozen others, by a skirmishing party, a week before he wrote.'

'Captured!'

'Yes; and that isn't all; he says they didn't half believe Harry Ives cared whether he was carried down South or not; for he had taken a great notion to some pretty girl down in Virginia—a planter's daughter—and—'

'I don't believe it, James Grayling,' said Bessie, springing to her feet, with flashing eye and passion-crimsoned forehead; 'I don't believe a word of it. You are repeating some vile falsehood.'

'I knew you'd feel bad,' said Grayling, with provoking mildness, 'but I thought that you ought to know how matters stood. I can show you Sam's letter, if that will be any more satisfactory. I never had much faith in Harry Ives—a careless, dashing fellow—who—'

'Hush! I will not listen to another sentence,' ejaculated Bessie, angrily, and with a certain strange dignity in her girl-face and slender form.

'Mr. Atterly,' said Grayling, with aggravating moderation and calmness, 'how long is it since your daughter received a letter from Harry Ives?'

'Well, it's a consid'able spell, said the old farmer, 'but letters do take time to reach us, you know.'

'Yes, particularly when they're never sent,' sneered Grayling.

'Father, don't listen to him,' cried Bessie, passionately. 'If the whole world were to tell me Harry Ives was untrue, I wouldn't believe them.'

And Bessie fainted quietly away, with her chestnut braids of hair drooping over her father's knee.

Poor child? Could she but have foreseen the weary months of waiting for the letter which never came from the far off Southern hills, the hope deferred which maketh the heart sick, that were in store for her, she might have been sorry that she had not died then and there, holding fast to that firm faith in Harry Ives's fidelity.

James Grayling, a crafty, patient man, bided his time. It came at last, when the tender green of the hill sides shriveled and grew brown under the starry, silent frost of the bitter December nights, and the keen wind rushed with thunderous swell through the lonely pine forests in these wild solitudes.

'Daughter, it's the dearest wish of my heart,' said Farmer Atterly, solemnly, as he sat with Bessie in the old, silent room. 'I'm gettin' well on in years; and if I could but see you married to some good and true man before I am taken away, I should rest easier in my grave. James Grayling has been almost a son to me these months of trial and trouble. He is coming for his final answer to-night. Let it be yes!'

Bessie shuddered. That year of sick, wistful grief had changed her into a pale, fragile girl, with large, frightened eyes, ever roving from side to side, as if vainly seeking something which never came.

'Wait, father,' she murmured eagerly, as if pleading for sweet life itself; 'wait a little longer—only a little longer!'

'I have waited, Bessie. It is a year and over since Henry Ives has sent you either word or message. He may be dead—better dead than a scoundrel!—but James Grayling has been true as steel to me all this time. He deserves you, Bessie; and when you're once married you'll learn to love him. Shall we say this day month for your wedding, daughter?'

That night Bessie laid her cold hand in James Grayling's eager palm, and said 'yes,' dreamily, to whatever he proposed. What had life left for her? As well be James Grayling's wife as anything else, since God willed that she should live and suffer on, and the dreary path of years lay spread out before her listless feet!

The old smoke-stained walls were wreathed with feathery garlands of cedar and pine, with the scarlet berries of the mountain ash glowing here and there; the great fire roared up the chimney with festive sound and all the neighbors were gathered round Father Atterly's hearthstone; for pretty Bessie was to be married that night.

'She don't look as a bride ought to, somehow,' whispered Mrs. Deacon Jennings to her companion, Mahala Bird. 'She seems to me jest like one o' them white snow-wreaths down in the hollow yonder.'

'Maybe it's that white dress,' said Mahala; 'but she does look like a corpse. Land o' Goshen! what be I sayin'? It ain't good luck to talk about corpses on a weddin' night.'

For the pretty bridemaids had just led Bessie in, robed in pure sheeny silk, with snowy geraniums in her hair, and not a vestige of color in her cheek.

'There! don't she look sweet?' said Susy Jennings. 'Is it time to go into the parlor yet?'

'Massy, no child!' said Mrs. Jennings; not for an hour. Why, Jim Grayling hasn't come yet!'

So Bessie sat down in the midst of the assembled maids and matrons, and played with the white flowers in her bouquet, thinking—who knows of what? Perhaps a lonely grave under the cruel southern stars; perhaps the fair face of the woman who had wiled her lover's heart away.

Somebody spoke to her, she looked up, and all of a sudden her frightened eyes traced a figure beyond the open door opposite to which she sat—a figure hurriedly pressing through the crowd.

'Where is she? I will see Bessie, wedding or no wedding! Who has a better right than I?'

The next moment, the pale, white-robed bride lay like a fair, still statue in Henry Ives' arms.

'Stand off, I say,' he cried fiercely, 'Let no one come between me and the woman I love. I have earned her to be my wife—earned her by long months of pain and suffering—earned her by wounds upon the battlefield of the country she loved!—Do you say she is to be married to James Grayling? What has James Grayling done with the letters I sent to his care?—with all the messages I entrusted to him! She had better be in her grave than married to James Grayling. Mr. Atterly, you are a just and good man; judge between me and the treacherous fox I fancied was my friend.'

'Harry, Harry,' faltered the old, 'I never dreamed of this. Tell us all about it, my boy, for my old head swims.'

And Harry Ives, still holding Bessie to his heart, revealed the story of his own truth and James Grayling's duplicity. When he had finished the impassioned recital, Moses Atterly clasped the brown, strong hand between his own horny palms, and said, solemnly:

'My boy, I ask your pardon for every doubt that ever crossed my mind, and I thank the merciful Providence that has spared Bessie from being Jim Grayling's wife. We were calculatin' to have a weddin' here to-night; and it isn't too late yet, if Harry hasn't no objections to bein' married in his soldier clothes.'

'Father,' interposed Bessie, rosy as a whole bouquet of carnations blended into one; but Harry took her hands into his, whispering:

'Love! I shall not feel secure until I can call you wife,'—and the remonstrance died away upon her lips.

'Are you all ready, Elder Wilkins?' said Moses; 'cause I b'lieve the young couple is.'

Ah! she looked like a bride now, with the hazel light burning in soft fires under her long curled lashes, and the carmine dyes coming and going upon her cheek, like a proud and blushing bride.

The ceremony was scarcely over before the silver chime of sleigh bells sounded at the door, and James Grayling's voice was heard, exclaiming:

'I'm afraid I am a little late; but the horse sprained one of his legs, and I had to get him changed at Squire Warrenton's. However—'

'Yes, Jim Grayling, you are a little late,' said Moses Atterly, taking a prodigious pinch of snuff; 'for my darter's married already.'

'Married!' ejaculated James Grayling, as if half uncertain whether his intended father-in-law were not a fit candidate for a lunatic asylum.

'Yes—to Harry Ives!'

As Grayling's bewildered eye caught sight, in the brilliantly lighted rooms beyond, of the young soldier, bending his head to listen to some whispered word from Bessie, he turned a dull, dead yellow, and a chill dew broke out around his mouth.

'What does this mean?' he asked.

'It means, Jim Grayling, that you're a scoundrel!' said the old man, with sudden fire flashing in his eyes.—'There's the open door—leave the house before Harry Ives sets eyes on you, for he's a spirited lad, and mischief might come of it! And hark ye—never let me see your villainous face again!'

Silently, and like a wounded snake, James Grayling crept out into the chill darkness of the tempestuous night, a detected, disappointed man. And so effectually did he take Moses Atterly's advice that the little village in the hollow knew his name and presence no more.

And Bessie Ives, the happiest little wife in the whole world, sings softly over her work, counting the days until, 'when this cruel war is over,' she shall welcome her soldier-husband back to the grand old pine forests of Maine once more.

HOW A ROMAN EMPEROR LIVED.

Bruce, in his "Classic and Historic Portraits," gives the following sketch of that effeminate creature, the Emperor Heliogabalus:

In his magnificence, Heliogabalus was truly oriental. He had beds and couches of solid silver. He adorned others of his beds with gold. His chariots glittered with gems. They were drawn sometimes by elephants, sometimes by stags, and sometimes by beautiful naked women. His drinking and cooking vessels were of silver. He was also guilty of the luxury which at a later period, St. Chrysostom charges as a sin against the Christian ladies of Constantinople—of using vessels of the most precious material for the most ignoble purposes.

He had cups artificially perfumed for drinking, and others on which lascivious designs were sculptured; an iniquity not confined to ancient and heathen times. At the table he reclined on couches stuffed with the fur of hares or the down of partridges. He wore cloaks heavy with gems, and used to say that he was burdened with a load of pleasure. He had gems in his shoes, sculptured with designs by the finest artists. He wore a diadem of precious stones, that he might resemble a woman. He is said to be the first Roman who wore robes of entire silk. He never, it is said, wore a ring for more than one day, or twice put on the same shoes.

In his more refined and elegant luxuries he was the rival of the ancient Demetrius Poliorcetes. He had beds and couches of roses, and walked amongst lilies, violets, hyacinths and narcissus.

When he wished to add the piquant flavor of cruelty to his enjoyments, he would stifle a courtier to death in a bed of flowers. He swam in water perfumed with saffron and precious unguents; and wine and aromatics were poured into his fish-ponds and his baths.

In eating and drinking he appears not so much a glutton, but as the chief of all royal epicures—the equal in gastronomic science of the renowned Apicius. He joined with all who studied the pleasure of the palate in admiration of the dish which the Romans made of the teats of a newly farrowed pig—the most celebrated of ancient luxuries. After the example of Apicius he indulged in dishes made of the tender parts of the heel of the camel, and of combs torn from the heads of living cocks. This latter delicacy, Cassaubon, in his commentary on the passage in the Augustan historian in which it is referred to, tells us, is at this day—that is, in his day, two hundred years ago—passionately sought after by men of learned palates. Like Vitellus, he seems to have his appetite whetted by the expensiveness of the dishes which he procured; and sacrificing the rarest and most beautiful birds for the sake of eating their heads, their brains or their tongues.

At one entertainment he displayed on his table the heads of six hundred ostriches, whose brains, as well as the flamingo and thrush, were among his favorite repasts. He also indulged in the tongues of peacocks and nightingales, believing that they had a medical virtue in averting epilepsy. He also made dishes of the entrails and sometimes of the beard of the mullet, of the eggs of partridges, and the heads of pheasants, peacocks and parrots. We wonder at the destruction of creatures so lovely to the sight as the peacock, the flamingo, the pheasant, for the particle of delicate eating to be got from them; but epicurism and gluttony consume and destroy all other tastes.

The genius of Heliogabalus shone particularly bright in the cooking of fish. In this department he is said to have invented new modes unknown to Apicius; but with a refined hatred of things common and cheap, he would never taste fish at all when he was near the sea, but always took delight in them when far removed from water, just as he took a fancy for having snow brought to him in midsummer. He offered rewards for the discovery of new dishes of exquisite flavor, and he had a humorous way of stimulating the invention of those around him in this science. When a courtier, after exerting his best skill to please him, produced a dish which he did not relish, he made the ingenious artist himself continue to eat of that dish, and nothing else, till his faculties, sharpened by disgust, enabled him to find out something superior for his master.

Like Nero and Caligula, Heliogabalus had his jocularities—generally practical ones—sometimes merely absurd, sometimes characteristically cruel. His most harmless entertainments in this way consisted of the suppers which he would give one night to eight men, all of them blind of one eye, sometimes to eight men afflicted with the gout, then to eight deaf men, eight black men, eight tall and eight fat men.

He kept lions and leopards, which lay at the table with him, in order to frighten his friends. He would get a company filled with drink, and after locking them up for the night, would let loose amongst them lions, leopards and bears, with their claws pared, to terrify them; many of them, it is said, died of fright.

At other times, when daylight would break in on the company who had been drinking the night before, they would find themselves in the arms of ugly black women. At other times he made sham entertainments, like the Barmicide's feast in the Eastern tale, setting his guests down to dishes made of wax, ivory or stone, painted after nature. He collected serpents together and let them loose to bite his victims. He would tie his courtiers to a wheel and have them whirled round in water, calling them, in allusion to the mythological fable, his "Ixionite friends."

Fearing a violent death from the vengeance of the people, Heliogabalus had made preparations, which turned out to be all in vain, for terminating his existence in an elegant manner.—He had poison mixed up with the most precious articles, he had ropes of crimson and purple silk ready to strangle himself with, and golden swords to stab himself with. He had also a high tower built with rich adornings, where he might breathe out his last in royal state.

The manner of his death was just the reverse of all that he desired.—After being slain, his body was thrown into the common sewer, then dragged through the streets and cast into the Tiber. According to Herodian and Dion, the same indignities were inflicted on the body of his mother, who was killed at the same time. Dion represents Heliogabalus as having been slain in her arms, and states that both their heads were cut off, and their bodies were stripped naked, and that one was thrown into one place of the river, and the other into another.

A TOUCHING INCIDENT.—The Washington correspondent of the Independent mentions the following incident, as showing the kindness of heart of President Lincoln:

At the reception on Saturday afternoon at the President's house, many persons present noticed three little girls, poorly dressed, the children of some mechanic or laboring man, who had followed the visitors into the house to gratify their curiosity. They passed round from room to room and were hastening through the reception room with some trepidation, when the President called to them: 'Little girls, are you going to pass me without shaking hands?' Then bending his tall, awkward form down, he shook each little girl warmly by the hand. Everybody in the apartment was spell bound by the incident, so simple in itself, yet revealing so much of Mr. Lincoln's character. His heart overflows with kindness, he possesses deep anti-slavery convictions, and he never takes a backward step, even if he does sometimes hesitate long before taking one in advance.

GENERAL GRANT.—The following anecdote is told of this officer:

When General Grant entered West Point and was assigned to a company of cadets, he was subjected to some of those practical jokes with which the older scholars always torment the green "plebs." After enduring several of these jokes with exemplary patience, Grant determined to put a stop to them and have peace. So one day, on a short parade, when another joke was attempted Grant immediately stepped out of the ranks, threw off his jacket and challenged the captain to a fair fight. The captain accepted the invitation, and was soon soundly whipped. Grant then offered the same challenge to the first lieutenant, who shared the captain's fate. Then, putting himself in position again, Grant expressed his willingness to fight the whole company, one by one,—all for the sake of peace. At this wholesale exhibition of pluck the boys raised a great shout, and shook Grant by the hand, declaring, 'You'll do,' 'We won't bother you any more,' and words to that effect.—Whereupon Grant put on his coat, took his place in the ranks, and was never troubled after that but was always called 'Company Grant,' in honor to the occasion.

☞ Gen. Rosecrans, in his report of the battle of Chickamauga, says 650,000 rounds of musket cartridges, and 7,335 rounds of cannon ammunition were expended.

BAD NEIGHBORS.

In a little village in Connecticut, several years ago, there lived one David Barnes, a person of excitable temperament and violent passions, especially,—as was often the case—when under the influence of strong drink. Not far from him resided old Squire Nelson, famous in all the region round about for his ready wit, with which few were able to cope successfully.

The Squire had, at the time of which I write, a pig of remarkable promise, which one day effected a stolen exit from its domicile, and wandered about seeking what it might devour, till finally it happened into Barnes' garden, where, following the impulse of nature, it (as Barnes himself graphically expressed it,) rooted around like all possessed.

The animal was at length espied by Barnes, who—it being the hour when his bitters were most felt—issued forth with murderous intent with a stick, and so gave vent to his emotions that the poor beast 'withdrew' as speedily as possible, and reached home more dead than alive.

When recovered from the effect of his potions, Barnes regretted his hastiness, and resolved to visit the Squire, explain and make it right, if possible. Off he started, and found the Squire at home. He hardly knew how to open the subject, so he began with,

'Wa'al, Squire, I'm-a thinkin' o' leavin' these parts.'

Squire—'You don't say? I'm sorry for that.'

Barnes (with some surprise) 'Be ye? An' why, may I ask?'

Squire—'Wa'al, I'll tell you.—Years ago there came a Mr. Robbinson to live where you do, and he was a mean sort of a man, and it was hard gittin' along with him. And after him come Tom Mullen, and he was a dreadful mean man—worse, if anything, than the other. And after he left, there come Bill Mosher, who was really tejus; and then one worse'n all the others together—old Fed Bolles. You see, they kept a growin' worce. And finally, you come; and I'm afraid that, if you go, the Evil One himself will be next!'

Barnes left.

MASSACRE OF RATS.—An extraordinary battue has just taken place in the sewers of Paris. Taking advantage of the frost, which drives this particular game into covert, the owner invited a Christmas party to partake of the sport of rat killing. All the great sewers were driven out in one direction till millions of rats, which fought among themselves like tigers as they were hunted along, were collected in the large drain by the bridge of Asnieres. Forty dogs were then let down into the sewers, and after a fight which lasted forty-five hours, and in which four dogs were killed and some blinded, no less than 110,000 rats were dispatched.

☞ Dean Swift once was called to preach a charity sermon. He read his text, which was in these words: 'He that giveth to the poor lendeth to the Lord; that which he hath will he repay him again.' 'My hearers,' said the Dean, 'you mark the offer. If you like the security, down with your dust!'

☞ Among the novelties of the age is a seedless apple. A tree has been found in Duchess County, New York, bearing this fruit. There are no blossoms; the bud forms and, without any show of petals, the fruit sets and grows entirely destitute of seeds. In outward appearance the apples resemble Rhode Island Greenings.

☞ Which of the English monarchs had the most reason to complain of his laundress? John, when his baggage was lost in the Wash.

The Wizard.

WEDNESDAY, MARCH 2, 1864.

☞ A Citizens Caucus will be held in this town next Saturday evening at Town Hall, to nominate Town Officers for the ensuing year.

A Caucus in Danvers for the same purpose will be held at Town Hall next Thursday (to-morrow) evening.

TOWN MEETING.

The warrant for the annual town meeting creates but little discussion, and the prospect is that the meeting will not be a very exciting one. There will be a change in some of the departments, but most of them will probably remain as they have for a number of years past. Four members for the School Committee are to be chosen, in place of Daniel C. Perkins, deceased; Alfred McKenzie, resigned; and Fitch Poole and C. Edwin Barrows, whose terms have expired. Two trustees of the Peabody Institute, are to be elected in place of Alfred A. Abbott and Eben S. Poor, whose terms have also expired. The usual appropriations for town expenses are to be made, and we believe there are no calls for special appropriations. The town will, as usual, be called upon to determine what method they will adopt to repair the highways, also to collect the taxes the current year, and we presume the same manner will prevail as last year.

The only really new articles to be discussed, are: To see what action the town will take in regard to the choice of Prudential Committees for the several School Districts; to see if the town will purchase a Steam Fire Engine, and the necessary apparatus, or to take any order thereon, agreeably to the petition of William H. Little, and others; to see if the town will enact By-Laws concerning truant children and absentees from school; also to see if the town will provide a place of confinement for offenders against such By-Laws, or take any order thereon; to see if the town will accept the Act of the Legislature, passed April 23d, 1863, entitled an Act relating to the sealing of weights and measures, agreeably to the petition of Thomas Trask; to hear and act on the report of the Committee appointed at the last annual meeting, to consider and report upon the subject of the purchase of a tract of land for a new burial ground; to hear and act on the report of the Selectmen, on the subject of Guide Boards; and to see what action the town will take on the subject of the drainage of Lowell street.

ANNUAL TOWN REPORT.

The annual Town Report is now in type, and will soon be ready for distribution. It contains but little matter of special importance, outside the ordinary expenses of conducting the affairs of the town. In the Selectmen's department the expenditures have been $41,525 12, being 17,086 21 less than the previous year. (It will be remembered that the expenditures for 1862 included the large amount paid as bounties to three years' and nine months' men.) The expenses of repairs on highways have been $1996 39—being 803 61 less than the sum appropriated. The receipts of the Liquor Agency are 407 96, expenditures 396 46. In 1862 the receipts were 305 58, expenditures 500 89. The amount of State Aid disbursed to families of volunteers is 16,961 00; year previous 18,152 50.

From the report of the Overseers' Department we learn that the present number of inmates of the Alms House is 42; average number for the year, 49; number of deaths, 3. The expenditures have been 9,446 89, receipts 6,301 35; actual draft on treasury, 3,145 54; for 1862 it was 3,351 26. The expenditures of the School department have been for the pay of teachers, 7,890 12; fuel, 721 71; care of houses, 519 60; miscellaneous, 140 14, making 9270 97. The amount of taxes committed to the Collector was 46,726 00; amount collected 40,725 31. The balance against the town is 55,967 16, which is less by 9,577 82 than it was the previous year.

Antique Festival.—We learn that preparations are going on for the antique levee at Sutton Hall, which is to come off next Tuesday evening. We think there must be a large gathering, both on account of the object and the attractiveness of the occasion. The visitor may expect to see a past age revive in the present, and perhaps see the forms of old Judge Holten, Gen. Foster, Parson Holt and Parson Meade, to say nothing of Molly Tucker and Mrs. Partington.

We learn that some youths, hardly out of their teens, intend to pass themselves off as elderly men of fifty or sixty. We are informed by the Deputy Provost Marshal that this will not save them from the draft.

Exhibition.—The Sabbath School connected with the Universalist Society, in this town, will give an exhibition in the Universalist Church this (Wednesday) evening, March 2d, commencing at 7 o'clock. Admission 15 cents. The exercises will consist of Dialogues, Recitations and Singing.

THE STACKPOLE CASE.

Since the sentence of the Superior Court in the Beverly murder case, we have several times heard the inquiry made why the prisoner did not receive the extreme penalty of the law? It may not be generally known to those who were not present at the trial, and have no special interest in the case, that Stackpole has not yet been tried for the poisoning case, where death resulted to the victim. That indictment still remains in abeyance. He was put on trial for attempting to murder one of those members of the family who survived. As he was sentenced to State Prison for life for this offence, we suppose that the government will hardly think it necessary to try him upon the other case, though it is competent to do so. It seems to our non-professional eyes that, if there are any cases known to the common law where a man should be hung and pay forty shillings, this is one of that sort. We confess almost entire ignorance of the legal effect of "filing an indictment," as it is expressed in the Boston Court reports, but if it practically operates to let the offender go scot-free the rest of his life—why all we have to say is, we hope the indictment in question will not be "filed," as it may sometimes work in handy if the defendant should chance to be at large again. We remember of a case, within a few years, where a prisoner was sentenced in our county upon two separate indictments to State Prison for life—for two lives—but he was pardoned out of prison within five years!

Yankee Growth and Pluck.—Among the members of the Fourth Massachusetts Battery which arrived at Boston week before last, was Mr. Jacob Curtis, of this town, whose age is twenty-seven, and who measures six feet, seven and a half inches in height in his stockings. The Boston Transcript says he is a genuine "son of Anak," and all his companions literally look up to him. He went out with his battery in November, 1861, and has been in all its dangers and exploits from the time he landed at Ship Island, below New Orleans, until they came home. The battery inscribes upon its banner the names of six battles—one of them the severe and unequal contest at Baton Rouge, under General Butler, and many sharp skirmishes. It lay under fire fifty-two days at Port Hudson. The men went out one hundred and fifty strong, received sixteen recruits, returned with ninety-one soldiers, all of whom, except one, have re-enlisted Very good for old Essex County.

Foster Guards.—Although we have no wish to lessen the opportunities of our South Danvers boys for winning honors in the field, yet we own up to a feeling of great satisfaction at hearing that Company B, of the 17th, did not happen to be in the detachment under Lieut. Col. Fellows, which was gobbled up by the rebels the other day near Newbern, but were doing guard duty in the city. We hear that the company still maintains the high rank in the regiment that it has ever had since it left Lynnfield.

Accident at the Bleachery.—On Wednesday last, as a son of Michael Murray was putting a belt on a pulley, at the Bleachery, he was caught by his clothes and carried over a pulley and through a space a few inches wide, tearing his scalp so as to leave a portion of his skull bare, and otherwise bruising him; he then fell some twenty feet and his clothes were torn off. His wounds were dressed by Dr. Kittredge, and the patient will probably recover. Truly a very wonderful escape from a dreadful death.

State Aid.—We see by the Legislative reports that the bill which passed the Senate for allowing appeals from Selectmen to the Executive Council on State aid claims, was defeated in the House. This is as it should be. Such a law as this would overwhelm the Governor and Council with "appeal cases," the cost of investigating, which would be enough to support an army of soldiers, although, instead, it would really support an army of lawyers.

Superior Court.—The March Term (civil) of this court will begin at Lawrence next Tuesday. We can reasonably count upon a portion of the term being held in Salem, as the custom has recently grown up, suggested by the soundest reasons of economy and convenience, and sanctioned by express legislation, of splitting the terms of the civil court—giving one part to the litigants of one portion of the county, and the other to the remaining portion.

Strikers' Meeting.—The strikers of this town and Salem held a grand mass meeting at Mechanic Hall, Salem, last Monday evening. The attendance was large, and speeches were made by Messrs. Scribner, Claffee and Wood of Woburn; Wright of Boston, and Dodge of Salem. The Salem Brass Band was present, and, from what we learn, the meeting was quite enthusiastic and spirited.

☞ The quota of Lynnfield (17) is full and running over.

HIRING TEACHERS.

"March meeting" is upon us, when the town must again decide the question yearly put to it by the statutes of the State, whether the Prudential, or the Superintending School Committee shall hire its teachers. We trust the town this year will decide to abolish the District system. The cities and nearly all the larger towns of the Commonwealth did away with it long ago, and the opinions of the Secretary of the Board of Education and leading educators of the day are decidedly averse to it. Why should we continue to walk the old way wrapped in the swaddling bands which we have outgrown? A few reasons why we should not:

1st. The town contracts for the labor of the teacher, against the town his bills are made out, and, therefore to the town only, or its representatives, ought he to be responsible. Now, these representatives are the Superintending School Committee, chosen to judge of the qualifications of applicants for the schools, with power to accept or reject as they may see fit. What more consistent, then, than that they should contract for the labors of our Teachers?

2d. The Superintending Committee, elected to guard the educational interests of the town, are supposed to be citizens best fitted by experience and education to perform that duty. But, by the District system, not only is their legitimate work of hiring teachers taken from them, but they are hampered, and often controlled, in the selection of them by District Committees, who know comparatively little of the wants and necessities of the schools. So that while the town creates a committee to carry out a beneficent purpose, it, at the same time, weakens the power of that committee for action by tying its hands.

3d. It makes the teacher responsible to the proper power—the one which pays him for his services—the Town and not the District. The change is doubly advantageous: advantageous to the teacher, because it takes away from him many temptations which tend to lure him from the path of duty. He knows that his work is being tried by the judgments of impartial, capable men, and not by the brains of capricious and over-looking parents. So he is not obliged ever to sacrifice self-respect to preserve his place and means of livelihood. Advantageous to the Superintending Committee, because it gives them fredeom from restraint, and greater independence. Its results are seen in the schools in better teachers, teachers longer kept and laboring more conscientiously—therefore better—for the welfare of their pupils.

Such are some of the reasons why we think the District system should be abolished. They are hardly more than suggestions, but important enough we trust to merit the serious consideration of the town at their coming annual meeting.

Temperance.—We learn from a gentleman, who was present at a recent meeting of the Legislative Temperance Society, that considerable interest is now taken by the members and other friends of temperance, in the new proposition for substituting a license law for the present probitory statute. An interesting debate upon a resolution involving this question, was had at the Legislative Hall, the other evening. Not having given sufficient attention to the reasons for and against the proposed change to form any very decided opinion upon the "weight of evidence," on either side we can say that this much is pretty clear to our vision, viz: that a decided majority of the best known friends of the temperance cause are opposed to any change of the present law.

Newport Barracks.—We learn from a letter from Quarter Master Sergeant Andrew D. Murray of this town, which we have been permitted to peruse, that the company (D) of the 2d Mass. Heavy Artillery and other forces stationed at this post, were subjected to very great hardships by the recent rebel raid in the vicinity of Newbern, having been overpowered by a large body of rebels, and driven to the necessity of passing a burning bridge or swiming a river to escape capture; and having lost all their effects and many of them their lives.

New Horse Rail Roads.—We hear it reported, but cannot vouch for its correctness, that the Legislative Committee have appointed to-morrow as the time for hearing the petitioners for the Horse Rail Roads to Lynn and to Danvers.

The Journeymen Carpenters of Salem have held a meeting, and voted that the price of labor be advanced 12 1-2 per cent., on and after the first Monday in March.

Express to Lynn.—Mr. Samuel Trask, of this town, is making arrangements to run an express between Salem, South Danvers and Lynn. He will probably commence by the first of next week.

☞ Mr. Daniel Woodbury, of this town, has been appointed by the Governor and Council a Justice of the Peace for the County of Essex.

☞ When is a man thinner than a shingle? When he is a shaving.

Daring Robbery.—The Salem Gazette gives the particulars of a daring and successful robbery on Tuesday night of last week, in the dry goods store of the enterprising firm of Messrs J. F. Almy & Co., 188 Essex street. The store is deeper than the depth of the main building on the second story, and its rear is lighted by a sky-light from the roof, which, of course, is only one story high. The robber effected the entrance through this sky-light, by lowering a doubled rope, securing it at the roof, and clambering down upon it by the aid of knots tied at convenient intervals. In entering through the light it was necessary to remove several of the glass panes, and also for the robber to squeeze between two of the iron bars upon the inside. These bars undoubtedly yielded sufficiently to allow of an easy ingress. The entrance once effected, the store was robbed of silk goods to the amount of about two thousand dollars, with a few shawls. Other goods were found packed up, and ready for removal; but some alarm or perhaps the approach of day, probably caused the precipitate departure of the robber.

News from Rebel Sources.—According to late rebel papers, the siege of Charleston is far from being raised. Dispatches up to the 25th ult. report that "one hundred and forty-six shots were fired at the city during the last 24 hours. The enemy were erecting a battery on Dixon's Island, commending Schooner Creek."

And one of the 27th ult. says: "The enemy continue to shell the city; 100 shells were thrown yesterday."

They also report that Sherman's advance has reached Pearly Pear, and that there was heavy fighting on the 21st at Pantotoc, Miss. "We killed 40 and captured over 100 of the Yankees. Our loss is not known. Col. Forrest is killed. Colonels Barksdale and McCullock are badly wounded. The battle closed by a charge from the enemy's cavalry, which was repulsed."

A later dispatch to them says:—"The Yankees have left Pantotoc. We have lost many officers and men."

Bathing Room.—It has been suggested to us, says the Woburn Townsman, that a town as large as Woburn ought to support a bathing room. We think this suggestion will apply to South Danvers, as well as any other place. We ought to have a place where at all seasons hot and cold baths could be obtained. Certainly such an enterprise would be a great convenience in many cases, and it might, perhaps, be made, it properly managed, a paying concern. Taken in connection with the business of our barbers, or with the hotel, at a small expense the necessary fixtures might be procured and maintained. Let the subject be thought of, and if it will pay, let us have a bathing room.

A Typo on Furlough.—Among the re-enlisted veterans now at home on furlough, we were glad to meet our young friend, Mr. Edward B. Putnam, who served at this office previous to his first enlistment. We must be excused for feeling a little pride that our protege has had the pluck to re-enlist, while so many older ones have given out.

We em ‸ this opportunity to hope that, when he goes back, he will make a — and put a . to the war. It will cause an ! of delight in every § of the country. He may thank his  that he has done so much to quell a rebellion which is without a ‖ in history.

Beverly.—A town meeting was held on Saturday afternoon, at which it was voted that the town of Beverly objects to the city of Salem being allowed to take water from Wenham Pond, unless the same shall be carried through the principal village of the town, and the citizens enjoy equal privileges with the citizens of Salem to use the same for protection from fires, and for domestic, manufacturing and all other purposes. Messrs. John Meacom, John I. Baker and Benj. D. Grant were appointed to represent the town before the Legislative Committee.—Reg.

☞ The Horse Railroad have petitioned the new board of Mayor and Aldermen for leave to complete their junction at the corner of Lafayette and Front streets, with the sweeping curve. They promised to re-lay the curve when the frost was out of the ground, if then desired; but the subject was laid on the table. A majority of the new board of Mayor and Aldermen doubtless entertain the same opinions on the "Front street question" as the board of last year.—Gazette.

Fire in Salem.—The large three-story brick dwelling house on the corner of Bridge and Osgood streets, belonging to the estate of the late Larkin Thorndike, Esq., was destroyed by fire last Sunday night. The alarm was given at about a quarter of 12 o'clock The house had not been occupied for some two years. The fire is supposed to have been the work of an incendiary. There was only $800 insurance on the house.—Register.

General Fremont.—Gen. Fremont has written a letter to the Chairman of Military Affairs in Congress, in which he says that he was relieved of his command in Virginia at his own request, considering service under Gen. Pope an unmerited insult, and that he has since remained out of service not because it was his wish, but because no other command was given him, though he has had the assurances of the President and the Secretary of War that he should receive one as soon as it could be given. Of his pay, he says "that since the close of the last session of Congress I have considered it a fund to be applied where it might alleviate distresses resulting from the war, and it has been used accordingly. I have regularly drawn it because I consider it something belonging with my commission, and I do not wish to seem by any neglect to acquiesce in my position of forced retirement from army duties. But it has merely passed through my hands back to the people from whom I received it, and this use of it I think I have the right to make."

☞ The news from Europe indicates the total defeat of the Danes in their attempt to hold the Duchies. Shorn of these, Denmark will become an unimportant kingdom with but two millions of people, and its government may fail.—The Danes appear to have been led into their troubles by the bullying Englishmen, who have drawn their heads out and left them to suffer. There is only one way for the Danes to retaliate, which is to seek annexation to Russia, and so place the Russian Bear in the face of the Bull, and his rival as a commercial nation.

☞ Gen. Smith has returned to Memphis, with his command, having failed to unite with Sherman. He distroyed immense quantities of property on his march, including a million bushels of corn, burned every tressle on the Memphis and Ohio Railroad, and tore up the track for miles. He also captured 1500 mules and horses, 200 negroes and 300 prisoners.

☞ The Bangor Whig learns that Messrs. Shaw & Brothers of Detroit, and H. Poor & Son of Boston, have purchased 17,000 acres of land, embracing nearly the whole town of Winn, Me., (at Five Islands, near Mattawamkeag,) and are about to establish, near the steamboat landing, the largest steam tannery in the State, if not in the country.

Escaped Union Officers.—Several more Union officers, who made their escape from Libby Prison, Richmond, have arrived at Fortress Monroe, making fifty in all who have reached there. The Richmond papers state that the rebels have recaptured fifty-eight. There are still a few to be heard from.

☞ The Democrats of Connecticut are to make one more struggle for power.—At New Haven, on Wednesday, they held the largest convention ever held in the State, and unanimously re-nominated Hon. O. S. Seymour for Governor, thus changing one Seymour for another, and a copperhead for a war democrat.

☞ The pension claims already allowed, on account of this war, amount to twelve million dollars annually. That was the total of government expenses in John Quincy Adams' administration, when also the pension list was large from the Revolutionary war and that of 1812.

☞ Vice-President Hamlin is said to be violent in his opposition to the re-nomination of Mr. Lincoln. Perhaps he expected to succeed; or he may not like to be dropped from the tail of the kite to make place for Gen. Butler.

☞ Mrs. Polk, widow of ex-President Polk, denies that she is a secessionist, as has been reported, and declares that she is for the government, notwithstanding her "womanly sympathies are with the South."

Hens.—Demerick Marble, Esq., one of the fathers of the town, who resides at Centre Hingham, has a flock of hens which refuse to give in to anybody's hens in egg-laying. There are but seven of them, but they beat the very Dutch in laying eggs. One day last week every hen deposited in the nest at least one snowy specimen of her own beautiful manufacture. In twelve consecutive days, the seven combining their efforts produced in the aggregate 61 eggs. Can the Quincy Patriot beat this? Can any other man? If so, come on! Meanwhile let us crow!—Dorchester News.

Union League Melodies.—Benjamin B. Russell, of Boston, has published, and E. B. Waitt, of Danvers, has for sale, a neat little pamphlet, of 32 pages, entitled "Union League Melodies; A Collection of Patriotic Hymns and Tunes, original and selected, adapted to Union League Meetings, Army and Navy, and Social Gatherings generally."

Godey's Lady's Book, for March, has been received, and is full of interesting matter for ladies, containing a large number of engravings, illustrating the toilet of the present time. His artists are among the most skilful in the country.

Harper's Magazine, for March, has been received by E. B. Waitt, Danvers, and is, as usual, a very readable number.

STRATEGY.

A SHORT AND TRUE STORY.

An old gentleman of this town, who is a retired fisherman, and dwells alone on a street that bears his own name, has for some time past been excessively annoyed by the frequent visits of a certain Irish boy to his place of abode, and his indulgence in various tricks and antics, tending much to the occupant's discomfort. Prominent among these insults was a constant knocking at the old gentleman's door, with a rapid "change of base" when he came to receive his visitor. The programme would be occasionally varied, however, by the boy's leaning over the fence, close to one of the ex-fisherman's windows, and "making faces," as the children call it, with other derisive gestures, at the victim of his malicious disposition:—calculating that he could do so with perfect impunity, as the object of his attacks was well stricken in years, and totally unable, as he thought, to pursue and capture him. The old man seemed to be of the same opinion himself, and wisely forbore any vain and futile attempts of the sort, but none the less determined on being even with his young enemy. Accordingly he put on his thinking cap, and constituting himself a council of war, sat down and cogitated. For sometime he was plunged in the profoundest meditation, and his countenance exhibited the most anxious and painful thought. At last, and suddenly, a most intensely sardonic grin, overspreading his whole face, announced the suggestion that he had caught an idea by the tail. It was even so. Figuratively speaking, our venerable friend's clutches were firmly closed on the caudal appendage of the imaginary animal, which he held up (still figuratively) for the inspection of his chairs, tables, and other household furniture, which he had taken into his confidence winking all the time with great violence. The council was dissolved. Years did not "roll on," as we find they do in novels sometimes, before the action of the story proceeds, but a day or two did, when our old friend once more heard a vigorous rapping at his front door. He turned a deaf ear thereunto, but stationed himself near his window. The manifestations soon ceased at the entrance, and the mocking and distorted visage of his impish foe was revealed to his vision over the fence and full in front of him.

The horrible substance, not "shadow," and not "unreal mockery," indulged his insulting humor for a brief space of time with huge satisfaction; but for a moment his face was turned and his attention attracted by something on the Square. When he again presented his amiable countenance to the venerable fisherman, swift as the lightning's flash, one end of a long and stout pole was darted through the closed window, and, striking him fairly on the frontispiece, pitched him heels over head into the gutter, with a bunged eye and a bloody and scarred visage, his howls of pain mingling with the rattling of the broken glass on the sidewalk beneath, and a heavy rumbling noise, that sounded like an elephant laughing, inside the house. He has not been seen lately near the old gentleman's premises.

LAUGHING GAS.

Laughing gas is the fashion just now, and entertainments of all sorts are concluded by its administration. We had heard of it often, but had never seen its effects until a few nights ago, when, after a temperance meeting, several ladies and gentlemen agreed to make fools of themselves for the edification of their fellow mortals. Any one anxious to make a favorable impression would certainly shrink from the process of inhaling, during which, be it known, it is necessary to hold one's nose with the thumb and finger, and suck insanely at the mouthpiece of an immense bag, but the effects produced afterwards are so utterly absurd, that one's only wonder is that, after seeing the first man under its influence, a second was ever found to follow his example.

The specimens which came under our inspection were at first overwhelmed with a giddiness similar to that produced by intoxication, and pitched about with an evident belief that the world was turned upside down, and that they were in danger of falling from it into space. After which, with scarcely an exception, the masculine portion of the inhalers stripped off their coats, and forthwith "pitched into" some bystander. From the result of our observation, we should judge that combativeness is the most highly developed organ of the brain, for every one of those well-conducted young gentlemen seemed "spoiling for a fight." One who had delivered a discourse full of good advice to other youth, not ten minutes before, advanced to the edge of the stage, and, with a decidedly drunken leer, requested the immediate production of Heenan and Morrissey, who were to be annihilated with one hand while he finished Sayers with the other; and a very mild-looking small boy of fourteen attacked his grandfather with such violence as to oblige a committee of four to convey the old gentleman out of harm's way.

THE VETERANS.

All hail to the Veterans who come from the war,
Who draw their bright swords in liberty's cause;
We greet them with joy as they come from afar—
Those gallant defenders of Country and laws.
Their names shall be blazoned on Liberty's dome,
Aloft in the air where the wild eagles soar;
And here we will cherish their loved ones at home,
And serve them with trimmings from Peabody's Store.

The Sheet Picture of the Proclamation of Freedom.

The first week in January, 1863, and within five days after the Proclamation of Emancipation was issued by the President of the United States, Mr. A. Kidder, formerly of Chicago, iow of this city, commenced illustrating it in in elaborate and artistic manner, so that from a olank sheet of paper there appears a beautiful picture of the Emancipation Proclamation lone exclusively with a pen. When finished t was enclosed in a heavy ornamental and cost y gilt frame, exhibited for a day or two in an office window, around which crowds of citizens hronged to look at this work of art which called forth their highest admiration and in which hey took a noble and emulative pride, that uch a meritorious work of art should hail from he resident State of the Honorable President f the United States. This picture was duly orwarded to and received by the President of he United States. The tardy success of the ar retarded until the success in East Tennessee he engraving of the picture.

Good business men wanted to take the agency in every county for this picture.

Price $1.50, per mail, pre-paid. Liberal disount to agents.

Commonwealth of Massachusetts.

ESSEX ss. COURT OF INSOLVENCY. In the case of BENJAMIN H. PALMER of South Danvers.

To the Honorable the Judge of Probate and Insolvency in and for said County of Essex:

The subscriber respectfully represents that he is a creditor of said insolvent debtor; that he has proved his claim, in said case, against the estate of said debtor, and that he believes it will be for the benefit of all concerned that the proceedings in the case of said debtor be stayed; wherefore he prays that an order may be passed vacating all the proceedings in said case.

Dated this twenty-third day of February, in the year eighteen hundred and sixty-four.

C. C. FARWELL.

Commonwealth of Massachusetts.

{L.S.} ESSEX ss. COURT OF INSOLVENCY. In the case of BENJAMIN H. PALMER, of South Danvers, gentleman, insolvent debtor.

On the foregoing petition it is ordered that the petitioner give notice to all persons interested in the estate of the said insolvent debtor, by publishing a copy of the said petition and of this order thereon, twice inside the newspaper called the South Danvers Wizard, printed at South Danvers, the last publication to be three days at least before the time for the hearing thereon hereinafter mentioned, and by sending by mail, postage paid, a copy thereof to each known creditor, that they may appear at the Court of Insolvency, to be held at Salem within and for said County of Essex, on the seventh day of March next at ten o'clock in the forenoon, then and there to shew cause, if any they have, why the prayer of said petition should not be granted.

Witness George F. Choate, Esquire, at Salem, the twenty-fifth day of February, in the year of our Lord one thousand eight hundred and sixty-four.   A. C. GOODELL, Register.

Essex ss. A true copy of petition and order thereon.   Attest:

TWO ELEGANT WORKS OF ART, Just Issued!

The Departure of the Pilgrim Fathers for America, and The Landing of the Pilgrims in America.

Each Engraving 26 x 34 inches, price only $1,50 each, by mail. These constitute the finest pair of companion Engravings ever published in the United States. They were engraved by the most eminent steel plate Engraver in this country, JOHN C. McRAE, of New York City, and for artistic skill and high beauty were never excelled. Mr. McRAE is great in whatever he attempts, but in these gems he has outdone himself. He was determined to render them enduring monuments of his skill, and no pains or expense have been spared to make them perfect works of Art, and to far excel any similar works ever issued in this country. They are of the same size, and in every respect equal to, the elegant English Engravings of the same subjects, which cannot be bought in this country for less than twelve dollars and fifty cents, each copy.

We have undertaken a gigantic enterprise, and one in which we earnestly invite the cooperation of all lovers of the beautiful in Art. We must sell fifty thousand copies of each of these magnificent Engravings, and to accomplish this have placed the price low enough to bring them within the reach of every one.—Will you help us? And in so doing confer a life long pleasure on yourself! Such a great value in Art for so little money, was never before offered, and nothing short of a very large sale will remunerate us. Such Splendid Parlor Gems are usually published at $5 or $10 each, but we have determined to appeal to the public, to sustain us in our efforts to bring them within the reach of every family in the land.

The great historical value of these pictures—their great elegance and beauty, will render them of incalculable value to every home.

All honor to the "Mayflower Puritans"—the brave and true.

What sought they thus afar?
Bright jewels, bright jewels of the mine?
The wealth of seas, the spoils of war?—
They sought a faith's pure shrine!
Oh! call it holy ground,
The spot where first they trod—
They have left unchanged what there they [found—
FREEDOM TO WORSHIP GOD!

Hunnewell's Great Remedies.

WHAT EVERY FAMILY SHOULD HAVE IN THE HOUSE AND WHY;

☞ They should have HUNNEWELL'S UNIVERSAL COUGH REMEDY, because it effectually cures Colds, Whooping and Common Coughs, Sore Throat, Hoarseness, and is the most simple and perfect Soothing Syrup in the world. For old and young, by day and night, it may be used with the greatest freedom, and three-fourths of the deaths by Consumption stopped.

They should have HUNNEWELL'S TOLU ANODYNE, because it is a perfect remedy for Neuralgia, Nervous or Sick Headache, Tooth, and Earache, Pain in Stomach, or Bowels, Genuine Cholera Morbus, Rheumatism, Distress after Eating, Nervousness, Hysteria, and the chief of all causes of disease, and Insanity, Loss of Sleep. Its character, though active, is simple, its action in perfect conformity to nature; its end cure, or relief.

For the pains in Monthly Menstruation a perfect relief, while nature's after work is not disturbed, and one of the most important points in Medicine.

They should have HUNNEWELL'S ECLECTIC PILLS, because with seldom but a single Pill for a dose all derangements of the Stomach and Bowels are cured. They cure Indigestion, Dyspepsia, Headache, when caused by foul stomach, Loss of Appetite, Biliousness, so often and so erroneously treated with Mercurials, Jaundice. For Worms a sure cure.

They act simple, assist nature, do not make a Pill Box of the stomach, as is the most fatal error of taking so many Pills at a dose and then, what is important to every Family and every Purse, one bottle goes as far as two or three of what is ordinarily sold.

The confidence of all is asked to test
Hunnewell's Universal Cough Remedy.

BELL'S SPECIFIC PILLS.—WARRANTED IN ALL CASES.—Can be relied on! Never fail to cure! Do not nauseate! Are speedy in action! No change of diet required! Do not interfere with business pursuits! Can be used without detection! Upward of 200 cures the past month—some of them very severe cases. Over one hundred physicians have used them in their practice, and all speak well of their efficacy, and approve of their composition, which is entirely vegetable, and harmless on the system. Hundreds of certificates can be shown.

BELL'S SPECIFIC PILLS are the original and only genuine Specific Pill. They are adapted for male and female, old or young, and the only reliable remedy for effecting a permanent and speedy cure in all cases of Spermatorrhea, or Seminal Weakness, with all its train of evils, such as Urethral and Vaginal Discharges, Gleet, the Whites, Nightly or Involuntary Emissions, Incontinence, Genital Debility and Irritability, Impotence, Weakness or Loss of Power, Nervous Debility, &c., &c., all of which arise principally from Sexual Excesses or Self-Abuse, or some constitutional derangement, and incapacitates the sufferer from fulfilling the duties of married life. In all sexual diseases, as Gonorrhea, Gleet, and Strictures, and in Diseases of the Bladder and Kidneys, they act as a charm! Relief is experienced by taking a single box.

Sold by all the principal druggists. Price $1.

They will be sent by mail, securely sealed, and confidentially, on receipt of the money, by

J BRYAN, M. D,
No. 76 Cedar street, New York,

Consulting Physician for the treatment of Seminal, Urinary, Sexual, and Nervous Diseases, who will send, free to all, the following valuable work, in sealed envelope:

BELL'S TREATISE on Self-Abuse, Premature Decay, Impotence and Loss of Power, Sexual Diseases, Seminal Weakness, Nightly Emissions, Genital Debility, &c., &c., a pamphlet of 64 pages, containing important advice to the afflicted, and which should be read by every sufferer, as the means of cure in the severest stages is plainly set forth. Two stamps required to pay postage.

December 9, 1863—1 yr.

IMPORTANT TO LADIES.—DR. HARVEY'S FEMALE PILLS have never yet failed in removing difficulties arising from obstruction, or stoppage of nature, or in restoring the system to perfect health when suffering from Spinal Affections, Prolapsus, Uteri, the Whites, or other weakness of the Uterine Organs. The Pills are perfectly harmless on the constitution, and may be taken by the most delicate female without causing distress—the same time they act like a charm by strengthening, invigorating and restoring the system to a healthy condition, and by bringing on the monthly period with regularity, no matter from what causes the obstruction may arise. They should, however, NOT be taken during the first three or four months of pregnancy, though safe at any other time, as miscarriage would be the result.

Each box contains 60 Pills. Price $1.

DR. HARVEY'S TREATISE on Diseases of Females, Pregnancy, Miscarriage, Barrenness, Sterility, Reproduction, and Abuses of Nature, and emphatically the Ladies' Private Medical Adviser, a pamphlet of 64 pages, sent free to any address. Six cents required to pay postage.

A Lecture on the Nature, Treatment & Radical

Cure of Seminal Weakness, or Spermatorrhœa, induced by Self-Abuse; Involuntary Emissions, Impotency, Nervous Debility, and Impediments to Marriage generally; Consumption, Epilepsy and Fits; Mental and Physical Incapacity, &c.—By ROB. J. CULVERWELL, M. D., Author of "The Green Book," &c.

The world-renowned author, in this admirable Lecture, clearly proves from his own experience that the awful consequences of Self-Abuse may be effecually removed without medicine, and without dangerous surgical operations, bougies, instruments, rings or cordials, pointing out a mode of cure at once certain and effectual, by which every sufferer, no matter what his condition may be, may cure himself cheaply, privately, and radically. This lecture will prove a boon to thousands and thousands.

HOSTETTER'S CELEBRATED STOMACH BITTERS.

A pure and powerful Tonic, corrective and alterative of wonderful efficacy in disease of the

Stomach, Liver and Bowels.

Cures Dyspepsia, Liver Complaint, Headache, Debility, Nervousness, Depression of Spirits, Constipation, Colic, Intermittent Fevers, Cramps and Spasms, and all Complaints of either Sex, arising from Bodily Weakness whether inherent in the system or produced by special causes.

Nothing that is not wholesome, genial and restorative in its nature enters into the composition of HOSTETTER'S STOMACH BITTERS. This popular preparation contains no mineral of any kind, no deadly botanical element; no fiery excitant: but it is a combination of the extracts of rare balsamic herbs and plants with the purest and mildest of all diffusive stimulants.

It is well to be forearmed against disease, and, so far as the human system can be protected by human means against maladies engendered by an unwholesome atmosphere, impure water and other external causes, HOSTETTER'S BITTERS may be relied on as a safeguard.

In districts infested with Fever and Ague, it has been found infallible as a preventive and irresistible as a remedy and thousands who resort to it under apprehension of an attack, escape the scourage; and thousands who neglect to avail themselves of its protective qualities in advance, are cured by a very brief course of this marvelous medicine. Fever and Ague patients, after being plied with quinine for months in vain, until fairly saturated with that dangerous alkaloid, are not unfrequently restored to health within a few days by the use of HOSTETTER'S BITTERS.

The weak stomach is rapidly invigorated and the appetite restored by this agreeable Tonic, and hence it works wonders in cases of DISPEPSIA and in less confirmed forms of INDIGESTION. Acting as a gentle and painless apperient, as well as upon the liver, it also invariably relieves the CONSTIPATION superinduced by irregular action of the digestive and secretive organs.

Persons of feeble habit, liable to Nervous Attacks, Lowness of Spirits and Fits of Languor, find prompt and permanent relief from the Bitters. The testimony on this point is most conclusive, and from both sexes.

The agony of BILIOUS COLIC is immediately assuaged by a single dose of the stimulant, and by occasionally resorting to it, the return of the complaint may be prevented.

As a General Tonic, HOSTETTER'S BITTERS produce effects which must be experienced or witnessed before they can be fully appreciated. In cases of Constitutional Weakness, Premature Decay and Debility and Decrepitude arising from OLD AGE, it exercises the electric influence. In the convalescent stages of all diseases it operates as a delightful invigorant. When the powers of nature are relaxed, it operates to re-enforce and re-establish them.

Last, but not least, it is The Only Safe Stimulant, being manufactured from sound and innocuous materials, and entirely free from the acid elements present more or less in all the ordinary tonics and stomachics of the day.

No family medicine has been so universally, and, it may be truly added, deservedly popular with the intelligent portion of the community, as HOSTETTER'S BITTERS.

HELMBOLD'S GENUINE PREPARATIONS.

COMPOUND FLUID EXTRACT BUCHU, a Positive and Specific Remedy for diseases of the Bladder, Kidneys, Gravel, and Dropsical Swellings.

This Medicine increases the power of Digestion, and excite the Absorbents into healthy action, by which the Wtaery or Calcareous depositions, and all Unnatural Enlargements are reduced, as well as Pain and Inflammation.

—:o:—

HELMBOLD'S EXTRACT BUCHU.

For Weaknesses arising from Excesses, Habits of Dissipation, Early Indiscretion of Abuse, attended with the following symptoms:—

Indisposition to Exertion,	Loss of Power,
Loss of Memory,	Difficulty of Breathing,
Weak Nerves,	Trembling,
Horror of Disease,	Wakefulness,
Dimness of Vision,	Pain in the Back,
Universal Lassitude of the Muscular System,
Hot Hands,	Flushing of the Body,
Dryness of the Skin,	Eruptions on the Face,
Pallid Countenance.

These symptoms, if allowed to go on, which this medicine invariably removes, soon follows

Impotency, Fatuity, Epileptic Fits,

In one of which the patient may expire.

Who can say that they are not frequently followed by those "Direful Diseases,"

"INSANITY AND CONSUMPTION."

Many are aware of the cause of their suffering, BUT NONE WILL CONFESS THE RECORDS OF THE INSANE ASYLUMS.

And Melancholy Deaths by Consumption bear ample witness to the Truth of the assertion.

The Constitution once effected with Organic Weakness requires the aid of Medicine to Strengthen and Invigorate the system,

Which HELMBOLD'S EXTRACT BUCHU invariably does. A Trial will convince the most skeptical.

—:o:—

FEMALES—FEMALES—FEMALES.

In many Affections peculiar to Females the EXTRACT BUCHU is unequalled by any other remedy, as in Chlorosis or Retention, Irregularity, Painfulness, or Suppression of Customary Evacuations, Ulcerated Scirrhous state of the Uterus, Leuchorrhœa or Whites, sterility, and for all complaints incident to the sex, whether arising from indiscretion or Habits of Dissipation, or in the

DECLINE OR CHANGE OF LIFE.

—:o:—

Take no more Balsam, Mercury, or unpleasant Medicines for unpleasant and dangerous diseases.

HELMBOLD'S EXTRACT BUCHU AND IMPROVED ROSE WASH CURES

SECRET DISEASES

In all their Stages,	At little Expense.
Little or no change in Diet.	No inconvenience.
	And no Exposure.

It causes a frequent desire and gives strength to Urinate, thereby Removing Obsructions, Preventing and Curing Strictures of the Urethra, allaying Pain and Inflammation, so frequent in this class of diseases, and expelling all Poisonous, Diseased and wornout Matter.

Thousands upon Thousands who have been the Victims of Quacks, and who have paid heavy fees to be cured in a short time, have found they were deceived, and that the "POISON" has, by the use of "Powerful Astringents," been dried up in the system, to break out in an aggravated form, and perhaps after Marriage.

—:o:—

Use HELMBOLD'S EXTRACT BUCHU for all affections and diseases of the URINARY ORGANS, whether existing in MALE or FEMALE, from whatever cause originating and no matter of HOW LONG STANDING.

Diseases of these Organs requires the aid of a DIURETIC. HELMBOLD'S EXTRACT BUCHU IS THE GREAT DIURETIC, and is certain to have the desired effect in all Diseases for which it is Recommended.

Evidence of the most reliable and responsible character will accompany the medicine.

STURGIS'S ELECTRIC COMPOUND!

AN EFFECTUAL CURE FOR

NEURALGIA AND RHEUMATISM.

Also, invaluable for Spinal Irritation, Hip Complaints, Ague in the Face, Tooth Ache, Pain in the Side, Back, Limbs, Ear Ache, Lumbago, &c.

The proprietor, in offering this medicine to the public, desires to state that this preparation does not belong to the class called patent medicines. Its value has been tested for many years, and it has been found fully adequate to the removal of many obstinate cases of the above complaints, which other celebrated remedies had failed to reach, and which had baffled the skill of eminent physicians. The proprietor does not claim that it will cure but one class of disease. All persons who are afflicted with any of these complaints are earnestly requested to try this Compound and judge for themselves.

AMONG THE ADVANTAGES OF THIS MEDICINE ARE THE FOLLOWING:

Its effect is very rapid—in most cases instantaneous.

It is external in its application, and the patient runs no risk in using it. It does not strike to the stomach.

It reaches the nerves and muscles, as it is believed no other medicine does.

It has cured some of the most violent and obstinate cases of Neuralgia ever known.

It can be used on a child or on an aged person alike. While it is very powerful, it is perfectly harmless.

The proprietor has been allowed to publish the names of many persons who have used the Compound with the most beneficial results. He inserts here a few of them. They are among the most respectable citizens of Boston, and their residences and places are given:

And many others.

The proprietor is permitted to publish the following letter from O. C. Pitkin, Esq., Principal of the High School in the city of Chelsea, and well known as one of the most successful teachers in New England:

CHELSEA, April 30, 1863.

FRIEND WILLIAMS:—Yours of the 26th is received. My wife was troubled with severe Neuralgia in the face. She tried your Compound with decidedly good effect. I think it is an excellent article, and have recommended it in one instance, where it also produced good effect. You certainly have the liberty to refer it to me.

With much respect, yours truly,
O. C. PITKIN.

MAGIC TIME OBSERVERS.

Being a Hunting or Open Face or Lady's or Gentleman's Watch Combined, with patent Self-Winding Improvement, a most Pleasing Novelty.

ONE of the Prettiest, Most Convenient, and decidedly the best and cheapest time piece for general and reliable use ever offered. It has within it and connected with its machinery, its own winding attachment, rendering a key entirely unnecessary. The cases of this Watch are composed of two metals, the outer one being fine 16 carat gold. It has the improved ruby action lever movement, and is warranted an accurate time piece. Price, superbly engraved, per case of half dozen, $204. Sample Watches, in neat morocco boxes, $35.

SILVER WATCHES!

First Class Hunting Time-Pieces for accuracy of movement, beauty of material, and above all, cheapness in price, these watches must insure universal approbation.

An imitation so faultless that it can hardly be detected by the most experienced judges. The material being of two metals, the outer one first quality Sterling Silver, while the inner one is German Silver, it cannot be recognized by cutting or heavy engraving, making it, not only in appearance, but in durability, the best resemblance of SOLID STERLING SILVER in existence.

The Sale of these Watches in the Army is a source of enormous profit, retailing, as they very readily do, at $25 and upwards. Many hundred dollars can be made in a single pay day by any one of ordinary business tact.

☞ AT WHOLESALE ONLY! In heavy hunting cases, beautifully engraved, white enamel dial, and fancy cut hands, in good running order, by the half dozen, $66. Sold only by the case of six!

Upon the receipt of two dollars, as a guarantee of good faith, we will send watches by express to any part of the loyal States, collecting balance of bill on delivery. This ensures buyers against fraud, giving them their watches before pay is required.

Soldiers in the disloyal States MUST remit CASH IN ADVANCE, as the express companies peremptorily refuse making collections in such dangerous localities. Remember, Cash in advance from within the army lines in rebel States. We guarantee the safe delivery of all Watches, whether they are sent by mail or express.

THE MAGIC SEA.

BY SAMUEL RICKER.

The weary sun sank slowly down
At the decline of day,
And upwards from his golden crown
Shot forth a beauteous ray;—

And slowly o'er the water stole
A mist of silver light,
Like an enchanted ocean's roll
Transfigured to the sight!

And lazily the long waves swell,
Burdened with ocean's store,
Of gathered weeds and bright sea shells,
To gem the wave-washed shore.

The blasted trees on yonder hill
Half hid the radiant skies;
The scraggy wall more darkly still
In sea-worn towers arise.

On the low line of sunken rocks
The matted sea-weeds fell,
Responsive to repeated shocks
Of the retreating swell.

The night sped on without a sound,
Except the dipping oar
Of weary boatmen homeward bound,
To rest upon the shore.

The moon arose as queen of night,
The stars came one by one,
And the last rays of golden light
Fled with the setting sun;

Then lo! a midnight silence reigns!
All but the smothered roar
That seemed to speak in mournful strains
Of those that come no more!

Who sleeping on their deep sea bed,
Must long in silence lie!
While the dark water o'er their head
Is rolling mountain high!

The booming of the billows sound
In murmuring accents flow;
Forever rolls the funeral dirge
O'er those that sleep below!

I turned me from the ocean graves,
I felt my bosom swell;
To those that slept beneath the waves
I bid a sad farewell!

REBELS IN A "FIX."

The "fix" in which the rebels find hemselves, about these days, is thus riefly summed up by a contemporary:—

1. If they increase their army they annot feed it.
2. Unless they increase their army hey are whipped.
3. Unless the press speaks out their iberties are gone.
4. If the press speaks out their Government will be gone.
5. Unless they draft the whole population they must surrender.
6. If they draft the whole population hey must starve.
7. Unless they recover East Tennesee they can get no saltpetre.
8. If they undertake to recover East Tennessee, they will get more saltpetre han they want.
9. Unless they free the negroes they've iothing left to fight with.
10. If they free the negroes they've ıothing left to fight for.
11. Ever since the rebellion begun negroes have been falling.
12. Nevertheless, their greatest fear now is, lest the negroes should rise.
13. Unless Jeff. Davis repudiates his present debts, he can't borrow from anybody.
14. If he repudiates, nobody will lend o him.
15. If he impresses food he turns the land into a desert.
16. Unless he impresses food he turns his men into deserters.
17. They can't succeed in war until they've got the means of building railroads.
18. They can't get the means of building railroads.
19. If they fight they lose the day.
20. Unless they fight they lose every day.

That is what was meant two years ago when we talked about getting them into the folds of the anaconda. Having rioted in the enjoyment of several vices for a long time, we will see how they feel in a vice.

THE PRICE OF A "MERE SONG"

When the Dutch were masters of the now somewhat populous Island of Manhattan, there lay embowered in the dense woods nearly opposite where the pretty, rural town of Astoria now stands, a quaint little French convent, occupied by certain good missionaries of the Franciscan order. Conspicuous among these gentlemen, as well as for his gravity of deportment as for his personal gifts, was one known as the Abbe de Fleury. He was a tall, spare man, about forty-five years of age, with an expression of geniality in his handsome features, which not even the severe garb and stern mien of the monk could altogether conceal. Gossip had it that Father de Fleury—whose monkish designation, by the way, was Pere Oriel—had been a fast man in his day; but, be that as it might be, his character as a religieux was unexceptionable, and the only traces of worldliness that remained with him were his cultivation of the arts of music and painting, in which he excelled.

About those days it was customary for the Dutch burghers to resort, in the summer season, to the woods bordering on the East River, for the enjoyment of the cool shade and rural relaxation afforded by those pleasant groves. One fine afternoon in June, a party of four young men sallied forth from the town, with the view of enjoying a rustic pic-nic. They selected an open glade of the forest, not far distant from the French convent, as their rendezvous, and, as became scions of the wealthy and luxurious class, they brought with them, in hampers slung upon a sturdy French pony, the materials for a very elegant repast, not forgetting a supply of good old wine from their fathers' cellars.

While lazily basking in the dappled sunshine, and sipping their Bordeaux, the attention of the young revellers was attracted by the mellow strains of a manly voice, the cadences of which came vibrating through the tree-stems with a sweet languor quite in accordance with the hour and the mood. As they listened, they recognized the air, which was that of a love-song well known to the swains of Fair Normandy, and equally familiar to the young Hollanders here introduced, who were of cultivated tastes, and well versed in the ravishing music of France.

"Hark!" cried Arnold Van Bruycker, the leading spirit of the little party, "there's a song-bird somewhere in the glades; let us steal through the bushes and surprise it. We are getting sleepy, here, and our constitutions require music to restore their flagging energies. Come along!"

Stealing cautiously through the vine-tangled underbrush, in the direction of the sound, our young Robinhoods discovered that it proceeded from a grave man in the garb of a priest, who sat upon the stem of a fallen tree, and exercised a remarkably fine tenor voice in a series of trills and tremulos that would have been creditable to a professional artiste of the operatic school.

A smothered burst of laughter from the inconsiderate young men warned the reverend singer that he was discovered, when, dropping his voice at once, he drew from his bosom a small book, and began to read it with great assiduity.

"This won't do," said Arnold Van Bruycker; "we must have our musical entertainment, if we have to fight for it. Hallo, Sir Priest, shut up your missal, and open your mouth. We are merry companions, here, and would hear some of the warmest songs of Normandy, interpreted by a voice so worthy of the theme as yours. Sing, then—sing, Nightingale, sing!"

Bowing his head meekly over his missal, the abbe waved a negative, and then, rising with dignity from his tree-stem, prepared to separate himself from a company that seemed so little suited to one of his staid deportment.

But Arnold, who was flushed with wine, was not thus to be baulked of the expected entertainment. He drew his long, slender sword, and, suddenly facing the priest, made a slight pass at him, just grazing his breast, and ordered him to sing the good song of "Belle Marie," on pain of instant death.

The blood rushed to the face of the poor Franciscan, and there was a flash from his eye that told of a time when he would not have submitted to an insult. But what could he do, unarmed, against four active young fellows with swords, and wine enough in their heads to prompt a reckless use of the weapon? So the abbe submitted, with the best grace he could, treating his audience to a number of French songs demanded by them, all of which he appeared to have at the tip of a very musical tongue; and when the revellers were satisfied with his entertainment, they called him a "jolly old cock" in Dutch, and suffered him to depart in peace.

Two or three days after the circumstance just narrated, Arnold Van Bruycker had a visit, in his father's counting-house, from a tall, elegantly-attired man, who requested a few moments' conversation with him. For this purpose they retired to an adjoining tavern, and, when in a private room, the stranger turned to Arnold and said:

"You do not recognize me, I see; to-day I am a cavalier, and my name is De Fleury. In the East wood, a day or two ago, I was nobody but Pere Oriel; see—here on my breast I bear the mark of your rapier; I am here to demand the satisfaction that a De Fleury never failed to exact for the slightest insult."

"On the spot, if you will, and on the instant," rejoined Arnold, who was always as ready for a fray as for a feast.—"The chamber is large enough, and by no means too much encumbered with furniture."

"No," replied De Fleury, with a slight curl of the upper lip. "I am fastidious on points of etiquette. Poetical justice has its charms for me. On the spot where I suffered a gross insult at your hands there, and nowhere else, is it fitting that I should receive satisfaction for the same. Shall I have it?"

"You shall," replied Arnold, who was chivalrous, and conscious of being in the wrong.

"Follow me, then," said De Fleury, as he enveloped himself in a long, dark cloak which he had upon his arm when he entered.

They took a path that led to the East River, where they found a boat moored to a linden tree that stooped over the edying water.

"Take an oar," said De Fleury, in his fine tender voice; "with two pair of such arms as yours and mine, we shall soon get within easy walk of our ground."

Having pulled to a distance of about three miles up the river, they landed, and De Fleury, followed by Arnold, took a winding path that led into the heart of the forest, until it brought them to a little glade with a fallen tree on the edge of it, which Arnold at once recognized as the scene of his adventure with the singing friar.

"About witnesses?" said Arnold, interrogatively. "Seconds would be necessary in an affair of this kind, I think."

"No witnesses for me," rejoined De Fleury. "They would spoil my arrangements, and I have to preserve a very strict incognito, besides."

On this, Arnold prepared to divest himself of his doublet, but De Fleury, stopping him, said:

"Not yet. The performance will open with a dance in full costume, if you please. Dearly as you love the joyous song, your affection for it is nothing to that borne by me toward the festive dance. Stand off a little, toward the center of the glade. There, now, dance a lively measure to the tune I whistle for you."

And De Fleury blew out, with a whistle clear as the nightingale piccolo of Herr Koppitz, the jingling notes of a French dance-tune.

"I shan't dance," said Arnold; "I came here to fight, and won't make a jack-pudding of myself for any man."

"O come now!" exclaimed De Fleury, quietly drawing a long pistol from his jerkin and bringing it to bear upon the head of his antagonist. "Six as brave fellows as ever you were have kissed the dust at the bidding of this pistol. Their initials are carved upon the stock. Dance away, or yours shall be added to them."

The click of a pistol-lock is a powerful persuader. I doubt, indeed, whether any regularly recognized music goes to the heart like it; if the click doesn't go to the heart, you see, the bullet may, and that's the philosophy of it.

Inspired by this last appeal, then, Arnold began to dance, very slowly, however, and with a bad grace, to the whistle still kept up by his tormentor. Presently the latter took his cloak from the bush on which he had hung it, and insisted upon the wretched dancer wrapping it closely around him, and thus continuing his exercise. At last, when the stout young Hollander was quite out of breath from his unusual exertions, the whistler stopped, saying:

"That will do for the present. I am rather disappointed in your dancing, which is anything but graceful, and by no means value for the songs you got out of me. Come, now, take your wind a little, and then we shall see how you can acquit yourself with the rapier."

The fight was a very brief one. In less than two minutes, Arnold found himself overmatched and disarmed, with a severe wound in his sword-arm. Surgeon as well as soldier and priest—he had been many a thing in his day—De Fleury dressed his wound for him, and, assisting him to the boat, dropped down the river with him to the landing whence they had started in the morning.

"Good-bye, my young sir," said De Fleury, when he had landed his passenger with care. "I shall be a priest again, in half-an-hour; but shall always be happy to resume the cavalier to oblige you. Remember that there are cheaper things in this world than a 'mere song.'"

WEATHER SUMMERSAULTS.—What a climate! Within the last six weeks we have been battledoored from fifty degrees of Fahrenheit to zero, and from zero to sixty degrees of Fahrenheit, to say nothing of the shorter flights varying from ten to twenty degrees. Shuttlecocks that we are, we make no abiding stay in any temperature, and, perhaps before this paragraph takes shape in type, we may have been knocked by a back-hander from some malicious weather god, into the frigid or torrid zone.

A more inconsistent winter, so far, lives not in our remembrance. No coquette ever blew hot and cold on a bewildered lover more capriciously than this fickle month has frozen and thawed us in turn. The result is that the body politic has a cold, and articulates as through a woolen stocking. There may be exceptions to this rule, but they have not come under our observation. The general lungs are sore, and there is a tickling sensation in the popular windpipe. Physicians say that the best way to escape the danger from atmospheric changes is to dress according to the weather. But how is it to be done when one is subjected to three or four different climates in twenty-four hours? A man would need to carry a travelling bag full of clothing with him every morning, to be prepared for all that a day may bring forth in this latitude.—No, the evil is beyond remedy. We must wheeze and bear it.—Propeller.

FULL AND EMPTY STOMACHS.—A business man, who has been to work all day, will enter his house as crabbed and hungry as a bear. The wife understands the mood, and, while she says little to him, is careful not to have the dinner delayed. In the mean time, the children watch him cautiously, and do not tease with questions. When the soup is gulped, and leans back and wipes his mouth, there is an evident relaxation, and his wife ventures to ask for the news. When the roast beef is disposed of, she presumes upon gossip, and possibly upon a jest; and when, at last, the dessert is spread upon the table, all hands are merry, and the face of the husband and father, which entered the house so pinched and savage, and sharp, becomes soft and full, and beaming as the face of the round summer moon. Children are very sensitive to the influence of hunger; and often when we think we are witnessing some fearful proof of total depravity of human nature in a young child, we are only witnessing the natural desire for bread and milk.—Timothy Titcomb.

A BLOODIER WAR THAN OURS.—It is generally supposed and stated that the war in which we are now engaged is the bloodiest that has been waged in modern times. This is an error which it may be well to correct by a reference to statistical facts. It appears from the best historical testimony, that of the one million two hundred thousand men enrolled in the armies of France in 1813, only one hundred thousand were alive in 1813; and that the loss of the Allied Powers in the war with Napoleon, was, according to the London Times, "not less than ten millions of men in the prime of life."—France in the same period lost about six millions. We have not yet approached the old world in wholesale bloodshed, and its some consolation to reflect that whereas England's ten millions were expended in the "Right divine of Kings to govern wrong,"

we, the people of the free States of the North are fighting to perpetuate republicanism, the dread of kings.

[From the Salem Gazette.]

THE OLD ELM TREE.

[These lines were suggested by the cutting down, a month or two since, of an old Elm tree near the depot in Ipswich, one of the largest and most noted among the many beautiful shade trees of which that picturesque village can boast, and under which the writer was used to sport through all the years of his childhood; to whom it was no common tree; hardly less, indeed, than a "Talking Elm."

It was set out by Aaron Kimball in the year 1775, on the twenty-first anniversary of his birthday, and for many years served as the roof-tree of himself and his descendants. When at length the old homestead was sold there was a clause in the deed reserving the tree, whenever it should be necessary to cut it down, to the heirs of the grantor.

Projected improvements on the part of the Eastern Railroad Company required the sacrifice of this ornament of the town, and five grandsons and the husband of a grand-daughter of him who planted it came together from different parts of the country to perform the sad but pious office of laying the axe to its aged trunk, and only after more than two days did it yield to their sturdy strokes. Its dimensions were over 100 feet in height, 12 1-2 feet in circumference, at a distance of 10 feet from the ground, and 18 1-2 feet across the roots at the surface of the earth. A large portion of the tree is already being used for ship-timber, so that it may yet see another generation of usefulness.]

Old, sacred Elm! must thy proud form,
Thy gnarled trunk and branches wide,
That long have laughed at wind and storm,
Fall like some monarch in his pride?

Cannot "improvement" spare the ground
Thy leaves have wet with dewy tears?
Cannot another spot be found?
Has progress no respect for years?

None? Then we'll keep thy memory
Sacred as that of "Charter Oak,"
Or that proud "Tree of Liberty"
Which still defies the woodman's stroke.

A patriot's hand did plant thee, when
Our Freedom struck its first great blow,
In days that tried the souls of men,—
Well nigh a hundred years ago.

Thus witness in thy earliest youth
Of what a righteous cause can do,
Would thou could'st watch this fight for truth
And live to see its triumph, too.

Better thy thirsty roots should drink
Deep of our nation's richest blood
Than let its hard-earned freedom sink
To be by slavery's heel o'ertrod.

Long years wert thou the proud roof-tree
Of a glad and bright New England home,
Which prized thee more than heraldry
And thought no place like thy dome.

Back in my childhood, free and wild,
Thy arms stretched o'er my careless glee,
Like an aged father blessing his child,
So you seemed to be blessing me.

Hallowed those days! and hallowed the scenes,
That are sweetly linked with "The Old Elm Tree!"
And so long as the light of memory gleams
On the days of my youth, will I think of thee.

But with those thoughts will come the sigh
That ne'er more shall thy arms extend—
With a nod of thy head so stately and high,—
A greeting and welcome to home and friend.

When progress has thy fate decreed
Thy patron's scions strike the blow,
But love, not anger, prompts the deed,
That lays thy lofty form so low.

And yet thy service is not o'er,
Thy days of usefulness not past;
In years to come, as years before,
Thou'lt brave the tempest and the blast.

Of thy strong arms and sturdy knees,
Shall some staunch vessel yet be wrought,
To bear our commerce through the seas,
Or skirt our coast from port to port.

Or thou may'st lend thy stalwart arm,
To help our navy in this strife—
To shield our merchant-fleet from harm,
Or battle for a nation's life.

Then hail! transformed to rib and plank,
Be with thy fortune still content;
For use now holds a higher rank,
Than beauty, show, or ornament.

Washington, D. C., Jan. 28, 1864.

☞ A friend of ours visiting a neighbor, found him disabled from having a horse step on his foot. Hobbling out to the stable, the sufferer explained how it happened:

"I was standing here," said he, "and the horse brought his foot right down on mine."

Our friend looked at the injured member, which was the No. 14 pattern, and said very quietly:

"Well, the horse must step somewhere."

☞ One thousand deserters a month from the rebel army in front of Grant argues something.

ILLUSTRIOUS WORKINGMEN.

Adam, the father of the human race, was a gardener. He had, however, a strange propensity for tasting unwholesome fruit, which produced very injurious effects, both upon himself and his offspring.

Noah was a shipwright and a husbandman, he navigated the whole earth in his ark, and got "seas over" in his vineyard.

Solomon was an architect, a poet, and a philosopher; his conduct, however, was not always by line and rule—he trod the circle of dissipation, in his imagination, and violated his own maxims.

The apostle Paul was a tent maker, and labored with his hands at his vocation, while he endeavored to infuse into the minds of his fellow men the important truths of revelation. While he screened them with earthly tabernacles from the weather, he held above their souls the ægis of divine protection.

Matthew was a fisherman. He relinquished his humble calling for that of a missionary, and toiled assiduously to draw men from the fiery billows of perdition.

Quintus Cincinnatus was a ploughman and was invoked to the government and dictatorship of Rome.

Arasces was a private mechanic, and was called to found the Parthian Empire. He built up a powerful nation, and erected for himself a mausoleum of fame which is indestructible.

Tamerlane, the conqueror of Asia, was also a mechanic. He rough hewed Bajazet, and carved his way to fortune and glory.

Massaniello, a Neapolitan fisherman, was raised to the command of fifty thousand men and gave up fish lines for lines of bayonets, and river seines for scenes of carnage.

John of Leyden, in Germany, was a tailor and rose to the dignity of a king. He cut out for himself a bad piece of work, however, and afterwards came to a miserable end.

Zeno, the famous bishop of Constantia, who had the largest diocese in that country, was a weaver. He directed his attention to the habits of both soul and body.

Peter the Great, Emperor of Russia, worked at ship building. He learned the Russian Bear how to manage a boat.

Louis XIV., of France, was one of the best watch-makers of his reign. He forgot the burdens of power in following the light footsteps of time, and escaped the flatterings of parasites on the pinions of chronometers.

William IV., of England, was a sailor, and rose from the forecastle to the throne. He managed the ship of state with nautical address, and beat her a considerable way up the harbor of reform.

☞ The house of ex-United States Senator Yulee, at St. Augustine, Florida, is now the headquarters of the federal commandant of that port, and a letter from there says that Yulee, who has not held any office since the state seceded, is getting ready to lend a hand in restoring her to the Union.

☞ An eastern exchange has the following; "The man who gets up early in the morning to steal his daily reading from his neighbor's door-step had better skip this paragraph."

☞ Rev. John Milton Holmes of Jersey City was waylaid a few nights since by some young men of his congregation who put a gold watch in his pocket.

☞ The hyacinths are in bloom at Vicksburg, and the soldiers play on the green grass. Here we may soon have a new ice crop.

☞ The wine drank in London, and called the Elbe sherry, is made out of Irish grapes, i. e. potatoes. There are no grapes on that river.

☞ A rebel letter-writer, discussing the ragged and shoeless condition of the rebel army in Virginia, calls them "Lee's Miserables."

☞ The peace and war democrats cannot agree on a candidate for President.—As things stand now, it would make no difference to them which wing carried.

☞ A substitute broker in Springfield is said to have made much money by passing in toothless men whom he supplied with teeth made of wax.

☞ Lieut. Col. Joseph A. Dalton has been appointed General Recruiting Agent for Essex County, headquarters in Salem.

THE TWINKLING OF THE STARS.—According to M. Arago, astronomers and others have failed to arrive at a satisfactory explanation of the twinkling of the stars, on account of their failure to give an exact definition of the term "scintillation." He affirms then, that, in so far as naked eye observers are concerned, scintillations, or twinkling, consist in very rapid fluctuations in the brightness of the stars. These variations are always accompanied by variations of color and secondary effects, which are the immediate consequences of every increase or diminution of brightness; such as considerable alterations in the apparent magnitude of the stars, and in the length of the diverging rays, which appear to issue in different directions from their centres. It has been remarked from a very early age that the phenomena of twinkling is accompanied by a change of color. It is asserted that the name of Barrakeach, given by the Arabians to the star Sirius, signifies the star of a thousand colors.—M. Arago also asserts that the planets twinkle.

A FISH STORY.—Four clergymen, a Baptist, Presbyterian, Methodist and Roman Catholic, met by agreement to dine on fish. Soon as grace was said, the Catholic rose, armed with knife and fork, and taking about one third of the fish, comprehending the head, removed it to his plate, exclaiming as he sat down, with great self satisfaction, "Papa est caput ecclesiæ," (the Pope is the head of the Church.) Immediately the Methodist minister arose, and helping himself to about one third, embracing the tail, seated himself exclaiming, "Finis coronat opus," (the end crowns the work.) The Presbyterian now thought it was time for him to move, and taking the remainder of the fish to his plate, exclaimed, "in med a est veritas," (truth lies between the two extremes.) Our Baptist brother had nothing but an empty plate and the prospect of a slim dinner, and snatching up the bowl of drawn (melted) butter, he dashed it over them all, exclaiming, "Ego baptizo vos," (I baptize you all.)

☞ It was Dow, Jr.,—sacred be his memory—who said that "Life is a country dance; down on one side and back;—tread on the corns of your neighbor;—poke your nose everywhere;—all hands around;—right and left;—bob your cocoanut—the figure is ended. Time hangs up the fiddle, and death puts out the lights.

☞ A young and beautiful but poor widow was looking after a rich old widower. Her friends wished to know what she wanted to marry him for. She replied, "For pure love. I love the ground (meaning farm, probably) on which he walks, and the very house in which he lives." There is platonic love for you!

☞ A new reading of an old couplet is thus rendered by a savage hater of hoops and that style of dress which leaves too little of woman's beauty to imagination:

"Lo! on a narrow neck of land,
'Twixt two unbounded she's I stand."

☞ A lady, making inquiries of a boy about his father, an intemperate man, who had been sick for some time, asked whether he had regained his appetite?

"No, ma'am," said the boy, "not exactly; his appetite is very poor, but his drinkatite is as good as ever."

☞ A grammarian conjugated the increasing heat in somewhat the following style: "Hot, hotter, hottest; hottentot, hottentoter, hottentotest; hottentotissime, hottentottissimus, hot as an oven, hot as two ovens, hot as four ovens, hot as seven ovens!" How comfortable to contemplate this weather!

☞ Poets are never young, in one sense. Their ears hear the far-off whispers of eternity, which coarser souls must travel toward for scores of years before their dull sense is touched by them.

☞ A youngster on coming home from his first term at a boarding school, and on being asked what he had been fed on, replied, "Multiplication tables hashed, and stewed substraction."

☞ Apes are human creatures who were left unfinished because they were made so late on Saturday night that Sunday put a stop to the work.

☞ The blush of true modesty is like the soul of a rose in the heart of a lilly.

The Wizard.

WEDNESDAY, MARCH 9, 1864.

THE ISSUE.

The past week has been one of very great activity in military affairs. The Spring campaign has opened in earnest. Both sides seem to be eager for the conflict. The Union armies move with celerity and force, and the insurgents oppose them with a spirit and bravery worthy of a better cause. The North are beginning to understand the military power of the South—their material resources, and the determination of their attitude. We also begin to understand the mission of the war—what we are fighting for. These are good omens. The great trouble from the start has been, that the North, like Polyphemus of old, has wielded the arm and dealt the blows of a blind giant who could not see the object of its wrath. It seemed for a while as if the moral vision of our country as a body politic was entirely obscured, so that we could recognize in this tremendous conflict nothing but a paltry struggle for political power, empire, constitutions, national honor, etc. The time was, at the beginning of the war, when the spread-eagle orator who talked of the "Constitution as it is and the Union as it was"—who glorified the Stars and stripes and apostrophized the majesty of the Government—was applauded to the echo, while he whose moral prescience saw through the smoke of battle the spirit of Liberty mounting the storm and the finger of God pointing out the way of freedom to our bondsmen, was derided as a dangerous fanatic. But times have changed. Even the New York World, the Herald, and the Boston Post virtually acknowledge that slavery is involved in the issue of the war. This is so. It is folly to deny it. It is impossible to disguise it. This, however, is no new phase of the war, but rather a recent discovery of the real phase. This war is not an insurrection to be put down by reading the riot act. It is a Revolution. It is our second Revolution. By the first we revolutionized foreign dominion out of our country; by the second we shall revolutionize domestic slavery out of existence among us.

It would be a libel upon the Christian race to say that this three years' slaughter of men and waste of property was simply to determine whether or not certain sovereign States should carry on their governments jointly with other sovereign States, or independently. So we respectfully say that, when the 37th Congress, with a Republican majority, gravely resolved that the object of the war was to re-establish the authority of the Constitution throughout the rebellious States, they wrote themselves down in history as Shakspeare wrote down Dogberry. Congress didn't make the war, nor the President; nor did either of them appear, at that time, to understand the war, or its cause, or its object. Or if they did, they most sadly misunderstand them now, and we, humbly sitting in our sanctum, can be guilty of no treason in simply saying that we have more confidence in the 38th Congress than we had in 37th, and more confidence in Abe Lincoln of 1864 than in Abe Lincoln of 1861.

Would Congress pass such a resolution now? If they would, we should want history "to repeat itself," as the saying is, and some new Cromwell to go into the capitol and say to such recreant statesmen, "For shame! Get you gone! Give place to honester men. I tell you you are no longer a Congress; the Lord has done with you."

We have not been so wise as our revolutionary fathers, who fought Great Britain only a year and a half before they discovered the object of the war, which they supposed at first to be constitutional liberty, but which was really national independence. It has taken us three years to find out that we are fighting a war of antagonistic social systems, instead of a war got up by ambitious politicians, as we have so long dreamed.

Instead of politicians having produced the war, as is so often echoed from mouth to mouth, it has been the aim and labor of politicians for the past century to delay this war of systems by cunningly devised compromises, the effect of which has been to postpone the conflict, certain to come sometime.

But when they ceased to hold these adverse elements apart they simply came together. But they came like fire and water. Each struggles for the mastery. God speed the right!

The politics of the North have been vitiated by a most dangerous heresy, now, however, about exploded—namely, that the Union has not been dissolved because of the theoretical reason that it can't be dissolved! Now, with due deference to the wisdom of these learned Thebans who promulgate this doctrine, we have to say—Gentlemen, you deal in names and shadows instead of ideas and things. The Union is dissolved in fact—and whether it can be in law or not is of no practical consequence. We should deal with the Southern States in the light of what they are and not of what they ought to be.

As another draw-back, it might be suggested that we went into the war with an overweening confidence in our own military prowess. We deceived ourselves. If a brigade of our men happened to meet a hundred rebels who retreated, instead of coming out to fight our overwhelming odds, we paraded it all over the country with caricature pictures of "how the F. F. V.'s defend the sacred soil." Indeed we made ourselves believe that we were all heroes and the rebels all cowards. We scorned the idea of retreating (always, excepting Bull Run, which is not to be referred to,) until the celebrated retreat of Banks from the banks of the Shenandoah. Then retreating became popular for a while, and Banks was compared to Zenophan of the famous "Ten Thousand," and McClellan established his great reputation as a soldier by his splendid retreat from Richmond, and General Pope immortalized his memory by his "magnificent advance on Washington," as Artemas Ward quaintly characterized it. Gens. Burnside, Hooker and Sherman also became very expert in executing masterly retreats. But before the era of Union retreats we came to look with contempt upon our foes. But we soon realized the truth of the old maxim, that "a despised enemy always gives a bloody battle." Though we have won many glorious victories, we have lost many a bloody field.

Then again, we expected to see the rebels dying with starvation at about the 12th month of the war. The last reliable account from the South is that they are amply supplied with provision—even Lee's army being restored to full rations.

Before we can bring this war to an honorable, triumphant and righteous close, we must dismiss four capital errors from our minds, viz:—

1. That the Union is not dissolved.
2. That the rebels will ever voluntarily return to the Union.
3. That we can ever starve out the Rebellion.
4. That we can beat them in the field without hard fighting.

Horse Rail Road Hearing.—The second hearing before the Legislative Committe took place last Thursday, at the State House. A. A. Abbott, Esq., appeared as cousel for Wm. H. Little and others, petitioners; S. H. Phillips and S. C. Bancroft, Esqs., for the Salem & South Danvers Railroad Company. Upon the petition for a road from Salem to Danvers, Messrs. John A. Putnam, I. W. Andrews, John W. Porter, Moses H. Hale, and Charles P. Preston were examined as witnesses, called by the petitioners. It is not proposed to have the Danvers road go to Salem through South Danvers, but through North Salem, by the Iron Foundry, and Danversport; though by this route it will be necessary to pass over a small portion of our territory which makes in that direction by the Gardner Farm. Upon the petition for a road from Salem to Swampscott, Messrs. J. P. Palmer, Eben Phillips and Representative Stimpson were examined as witnesses. They represent that an earnest desire exists in their town for the road. No witnesses appeared from Danvers or Swampscott in opposition to the projected enterprises.

The hearing will be continued next Friday, when the South Danvers and Lynn case will be taken up.

The Curriers' Strike.—The Strike still continues in our town with no apparent disposition on the part of bosses or journeymen to yield. We have heard of one or two instances where the strikers have withdrawn from their society, and resumed work with their old employers, but these are exceptional cases. Without stopping to discuss the merits of either side in this unfortunate controversy, we can spare room to record our prophesy, which we do here and now, that this state of feeling between the strikers and the strikees, can't in the nature of things continue much longer.

T. Starr King.—This well known orator died upon the 4th instant, at San Francisco, of diptheria. We formerly knew him well as a lyceum lecturer, when he was located at the Hollist Street Church, Boston. He was born in 1824; was once a school teacher, then clerk in the Navy Yard, then a minister. He attained the highest rank in his profession, and that without the advantages of a collegiate education. Take him all in all, he was one of the ablest men that New England has ever produced.

Politics.—The town elections in New York show a small Union gain. This is only important upon the principle that straws show which way the wind blows.

There seems to be more of a contest between the respective friends of the competitors for the Republican Presidential nomination than between the Democratic and Union parties. The present indications are that Old Abe has the inside track.

The Republican, or rather the Union Convention will be held at Baltimore, June 7.

TOWN MEETING.

Our annual town meeting occurred last Monday. Lewis Allen acted as Moderator, and Nathan H. Poor was chosen Town Clerk. The old board of Selectmen were chosen. Indeed there was no contest for any of the officers, except for Trustees of the Peabody Institute, the ballot for whom resulted as follows:

A. A. Abbott had	96 votes.
Robert S. Daniels had	86 votes.
Mayhew S. Clark had	92 votes.
Alexander B. Merrill had	92 votes.

Mr. Abbott, only, being elected, leaving one vacancy to be filled at the next meeting. Most of the important business was postponed to the adjourned meeting.

An interesting debate occurred upon a motion to authorize the School Committee to employ the teachers, instead of the Prudential Committee. Messrs. Phillips and Stimpson favored the motion, Messrs. Jonathan and James P. King, Proctor and Bancroft opposed it. The motion was finally lost by a decisive vote. The project of procuring a Steam Fire Engine was referred to a special committee of five to report at the adjournment. A list of By-Laws on Truancy was reported by Mr. Stimpson and adopted by the town. These, however, must be approved by the Superior Court before they become law. Five truant officers were chosen.

Further time was allowed the Committee on new burial ground, as they were not ready to report. The drainage of Lowell street came up, as a matter of course, but was finally referred to the Selectmen. The meeting finally adjourned to the third Monday current.

The following is the list of officers chosen:

Selectmen and Assessors—Joseph Poor, A. W. Bancroft, Dana Woodbury.

Collector—William Wolcott.

Treasurer—Francis Baker.

Overseers of the Poor—Wingate Merrill, James P. King, Alerson Galeucia.

Trustees of the Peabody Institute—A. A. Abbott. One vacancy.

School Committee—Fitch Poole, 3 years; C. Edwin Barrows, 3 years; Oscar F. Safford, 2 years; Jonathan King, 2 years (declined).

Fence Viewers—Augustus H. Sanger, Abraham C. Osborn, John G. Walcott, William H. Little, Benjamin Huntington.

Constables—M. A. Shackley, Stephen Upton, D. N. Stoddard, Charles Barker, Franklin Tyler, Bowman Viles, W. S. Osborne, D. S. Littlefield, James B. Newhall, W. H. Pingree, John Perkins, John H. Tibbetts.

Surveyors of Lumber—Mayhew S. Clark, Benj. M. Hills, Jas. B. Foster.

Field Drivers—Isaac B. Cowdrey, Horatio Bodge, John Bagley, Jas. B. Newhall, John G. Walcott, Chas. Barker, Bowman Viles, John Mansfield.

Pound Keepers—John Bagley, Benj. Taylor, John Needham.

Board of Health—M. A. Shackley, Dr. S. F. Bachelder, Joseph Poor, A. P. Phillips, Chas. E. Brown.

Truant Officers—Aaron F. Clark, M. A. Shackley, Isaac Hardy, W. S. Osborn, James B. Newhall.

Voted, That the Selectmen be authorized to establish a Night Watch for such time as they think it for the interest of the town, and to pay for the same.

The following were chosen as a Finance Committee:

Joseph Poor, Stephen Blaney, Francis Baker, Miles O. Stanley and Lewis Allen.

Voted, To lay on the table the petition of Thos. Trask, viz: "To see if the Town will accept the act of the Legislature, passed April 23, 1863, entitled an Act relating to the sealing of weights and measures."

Assault and Battery.—We are sorry to hear of several cases of personal violence that have arisen out of the strike excitement. One instance in particular is much talked of. It seems that a journeyman currier, who had altered his mind about the strike, took his name off the books of the association and went to work for his former employer; whereat somebody assaulted him with great violence, and with so much effect that the victim neither dares to continue his work nor disclose the names of the guilty party. We trust our peace officers will investigate this or any similar case, and see that the law is enforced.

Steam Fire Engine.—We are glad that there is good reason to think the town will speedily have a steam fire engine. This is a desideratum that should be no longer dispensed with. If the Gloucester conflagration awakens the minds of the community to the importance of getting this sort of engines, it will afford a very good illustration of the old adage, that "it's an ill wind that blows nobody any good."

New Dye House.—The new dyeing establishment connected with the Bleachery, is fast approaching completion. The buildings are finished, and the machinery is mostly set up. In the course of a few weeks, operations will commence. We are gratified to hear of such cases of business enterprise in our town. Every new establishment that gives additional employment to the laboring class, adds to the general prosperity of the town.

Superior Court.—The March term of this court for civil business commenced at Lawrence yesterday morning, Judge Morton presiding.—The Trial List contains 69 cases, 34 of which were put upon the "Salem List," to be tried in Salem at the adjournment.

ESSEX AGRICULTURAL SOCIETY.

At the last Annual Meeting of this Association, important amendments of their constitution were adopted, which we have not seen mentioned in any of the newspaper reports of the meeting. By one amendment the Board of Trustees, 30 in number, go out of office one third part each year till they are all out, the vacancies being filled annually. After they are all out, the whole board are afterwards to be elected annually. By another amendment a committee of one from each city and town in the county is annually chosen, whose duty it is to nominate the officers for the next year, and deposit their report with the Secretary for the inspection of the members prior to the 1st day of July each year. As this committee are to meet at Plummer Hall, Salem, next Thursday, we subjoin their names:

D. M. Tewksbury, Amesbury.
Isaac Carruth, Andover.
E. E. Lummus, Beverly.
J. K. Cole, Boxford.
Warren Ordway, Bradford.
Charles H. Gould, Danvers.
Edward K. Lee, Essex.
Sherman Nelson, Georgetown.
Edward H. Pearce, Gloucester.
John I. Ladd, Groveland.
Wm. A. Brown, Hamilton.
Charles Corliss, Haverhill.
John D. Cross, Ipswich.
Nathaniel Ambrose, Lawrence.
John Alley, 3d, Lynn.
Andrew Mansfield, Lynnfield.
Thomas P. Gentlee, Manchester.
Horace Ware, Marblehead.
Daniel T. Morrison, Methuen.
James Flint, Middleton.
Joseph Longfellow, Newbury.
E. G. Kelley, Newburyport.
John C. Gage, North Andover.
Ebenezer Row, Rockport.
Daniel G. Todd, Rowley.
Samuel A. Merrill, Salem.
Thomas J. Clark, Salisbury.
S. C. Bancroft, South Danvers.
E. R Mudge, Swampscott.
B. P. Adams, Topsfield.
Andrew Dodge, Wenham.
T. G. Ordway, West Newbury.

Danvers' Town Officers.—The following town officers were elected in Danvers last Monday:

Moderetor—Chas. P. Preston.

Town Clerk—A. S. Howard.

Selectmen and Assessors—Jacob F. Perry, John A. Putnam, William Dodge, Jr.

Treasurer—W. L. Weston.

Collector—William Dodge, Jr.

School Committee—James Fletcher, 3 years; James W. Putnam, 3 years.

Firewards—R. B. Hood, George Whittier, H. A. Perkins, C. W. Brown, W. B. Woodman.

Constables—Chas. H. Adams, Elijah Pope, Timothy Hawks, W. H. Herrick, Geo. Porter, Allen Knight.

Overseers of the Poor—S. P. Fowler, Simeon Putnam, Amos Pratt.

Fence Viewers—Nathaniel Pope, John Hood, Moody Elliott.

So. Danvers, March 7, 1864.

Dear Wizard,—I am a member of two societies in South Danvers that I have entirely lost the run of. One of them is the Agricultural Library Association, the other the South Danvers Chess Club. When did they have their last annual meeting, and who are now their officers? The former society did have a somewhat valuable library, the latter had valuable chess men, tables, etc. Have the officers "confiscated" all these assets and suppressed the institutions? Please advertise for these societies, and charge the expense to the cause of Public Justice.

Notice to Bad Boys.—The Town, at the annual meeting the other day, passed by-laws by which boys who hereafter play truant are to be severely punished, and five officers were appointed on purpose to enforce the law. So look out, boys!

School Examinations.

Friday, 11th inst., 9 to 11, A. M., Miss Lord—Mr. Poole.
Friday, 11th inst., P. M., Miss Tufts—Mr. Poole.
Friday, 11th inst., 8½ to 10 A. M., Miss Daniels—Mr. Barrows.
Friday, 11th inst., 10 to 12 A. M., Miss Peasley—Mr. Barrows.
Saturday, 12th inst., A. M., Miss Evans—Mr. Poole.
Saturday, 12th inst., P. M., Miss Burt—Mr. Barrows.
Saturday, 12th inst., 9 to 11, A. M., Miss Wiswell—Mr. Stimpson.
Monday, 14th, Mr. Davis—Messrs. Stimpson, Barrows, Poole.
Tuesday, 15th, Mr. Eaton—Messrs. Stimpson, McKensie, Barrows.
Wednesday, 16th, 9 to 11 A. M., Miss Potter—Mr. Merrill.
Wednesday, 16th, 11 to 12 and P. M., Miss Davis—Mr. Merrill.
Thursday, 17th, Mr. Upton—Messrs. Stimpson, Merrill, Barrows.
Friday, 18th, High School—whole Committee.
Saturday, 19th, 9 to 11, A. M., Miss Barnes—Mr. Merrill.
Saturday, 19th, 9 to 11, A. M., Miss Phillips—Mr. McKensie.
Saturday, 19th, 11 to 12 A. M., and P. M., Mr Martin—Messrs. Stimpson, Merrill.
Monday, 21st, P. M., Miss Welch—Mes. Poole, Barrows.
Thursday, 31st inst., P. M., Miss Felton—Mr. Stimpson.
Miss Skinner—not assigned.

New Hampshire Election.—The latest reports received by us last night indicated the success of the Union candidates and the discomfiture of the combined opposition.

THE PEABODY INSTITUTE LECTURES.

The Tenth Course has closed. A running criticism of the whole will not be inappropriate. Neither just praise nor blame will be withheld.

The first lecture, by Rev. Dr. Todd, discussed methods for The Improvement of the Mind. This was a plain, common-sense discourse, blunderingly delivered, yet quite interesting. Its fault was an illiberal fling at certain popular lecturers, who were in roundabout terms characterized as infidels. The lecture should be set down as one of the useful of the course.

The second was by Geo. W. Curtis—subject, The Way to Peace. This is probably, without exception, the finest of all the productions of this accomplished writer and orator. For practical philosophy, that is, a dispassionate insight into things, Mr. Curtis is almost without a rival. His late disquisitions on our national affairs are of great practical value. As an orator, he is graceful and fluent, never rising to remarkable positive power, and sometimes when his matter is abstract, liable to be in the least prosy. But he is deservedly popular, and there is no man in the lecture-field who makes to the public a better return for popularity.

The third lecture was an off-hand talk on the Nervous System, by Dr. Dio Lewis. Dr. Lewis is an enthusiast in a good cause. He may, like nearly all his class, sometimes over-state his points; but he does good by calling attention to the requirements of bodily health. It will be a time for rejoicing when we have one of his Gymnasiums established in our town.

The fourth evening was occupied with Readings, by Miss Henrietta Shaw. This lady is doubtless well-meaning, but mistaken. She is not by nature fitted for a public elocutionist, nor is her native ability, such as it is, rightly developed. The "prominent men" who recommend her to Lyceums ought to be compelled to hear her a whole evening.

The fifth lecture, by Dr. Briggs, as well as the ninth, by Mr. Matthews, the writer did not hear. Both of them are always well spoken of.

The sixth was by Bishop Clark of R. I. This production was chiefly composed of quotations from the old Puritan Records. It was well adapted for pleasant reading, but wanted interest as a lecture. It scarcely did Bishop Clark justice.

The seventh evening was occupied by Mr. Siddens and Miss Cameron in Readings. This was an entertainment worth going through the storm to enjoy. There can be no good objections to such readings taking the place of lectures.

The eighth lecture, by Rev. A. P. Putnam, was on the Nile. It was finely, often eloquently written; but with such exceeding elaboration that, together with the effects of a certain monotony in an otherwise pleasant voice, the hearer had to try hard not to be weary before its close.

The tenth lecture, by Rev. A. L. Stone, on Camp Life, was one of the best of the course. It presented with remarkable vividness passages from the author's experience as Chaplain. It gave such information concerning army-life as was very intersting to us civilians who see war only at a distance and through the newspapers. It ought to help every one to come into a truer sympathy with our citizen soldiers. The lecture was delivered with strong power of oratory.

The eleventh evening was occupied by Capt. Atwood of Provincetown, who spoke on the Science of Fishes. The speaker made no pretensions. He is a practical fisherman. He has under great difficulties learned something about fishes; for his acquirements he deserves praise. But (notwithstanding the opposite opinion has already been expressed in the Wizard) he can hardly interest a popular audience as a scientific lecturer. As a whole, the audience at the Institute was not pleased. This may have been in part their fault; but it is not too much to say that Capt. Atwood does not quite deserve a place among popular lecturers.

George W. Curtis lectured again, the twelfth evening, this time on Political Fidelity. Of course it was a good lecture. That it was not quite as good as the other one in the course by the same speaker, is not by any means saying that it was not worth waiting one whole evening and an extra hour of another to hear. Mr. Curtis never speaks without instructing as well as interesting. Even when his views are old or common, he gives them so thoroughly that they possess new meaning to his hearers.

The last lecture was by Rev. Mr. Hepworth of Boston. It was a production of strong merits and strong demerits.—That it gave an evening's entertainment to the audience, no one who was present could deny. There was grace as well as power in the elocution, and ease and perspicuity in the sentences. But, saying this, not much more can be said in praise of the lecture. It was sadly wanting in something—either logic, or coherency, or an idea,—and wanting which, it was, with all its merits named, scarcely a second-rate production. An audience should doubtless be pleased by a speaker, when it is possible; but not as an end, only as a means to some purpose. Thoughtful people are not permanently pleased with the man who is very successful in entrapping them for an hour with show minus substance. It may be justice to say that Mr. Hepworth is here alluded to only as a literary man. That he is a patriot, and that he incidentally inculcates patriotism, should doubtless be said to his credit.

In looking over this tenth course of lectures, we can on the whole pronounce it a success. The Lecture Committee deserve the thanks of the community for the faithful and efficient manner in which they have fulfilled their duties.

WAR CORRESPONDENCE.

Fort Norfolk, Va., Feb. 29, '64.

Dear Wizard,—The other day I turned out of my usual daily course, and took a ride to Sewall's Point—that former scene of rebel labors and hopes. The Point is reached by a drive of exactly six miles from the eastern bank of "Tanner's Creek," it is said, as twice measured by the rebels while occupying those extensive works which they had vainly constructed in defence of Norfolk. The telegraphic wire traverses the road, connecting Norfolk with Fortress Monroe, it being submarine athwart Hampton Roads. When you have arrived at the Point of a clear, pleasant day, the scene spread out before you is one of uncommon interest and by no means wanting in grandeur and beauty. At your left the Elizabeth sweeps round Lambert's Point, bearing numerous craft, mostly of the oyster sort, so incident to the locality, together with the ever occasional gunboat or other steamer on some mission of war. Across the Roads sits rather than rises Newport News, bounding on the north the James which so always makes one think of Richmond. There—at the James's mouth—day and night plies the stately Minnesota, blockading the everlasting river. Look northward and you see Old Point Comfort and the impregnable Fortress Monroe—take a glass and almost you discern the sentinel on the parapet; follow round seaward and you have the Rip Raps whereof everybody read twenty-four times every twenty-four hours about the time we began to read of Butler and the war. What are the Rip Raps? I used to think it must take a column to convey any idea of the immortals. Simply they are a prison and so forth rising out of the water. But I went to see the rebel works, or their remains, and should be speaking of them. That they were so extensive I had no thought. The kindness of a good and intelligent farmer, living within a stone's throw of the old fortifications, enabled me to learn considerable relative to the building of the works and of the life and conduct of the builders while occupying them. This man, Pumphrey—for his name ought to be known—has a farm of 220 acres, and is about the only man hereabouts who knows how many acres he has, or who cultivates them even proximately according to the ways of agriculture in New England. He was a bold Union man—and as such was quite alone in all the vicinity—while yet the rebels were conscripting his sons, stripping his farm and cutting down, as they did, nearly all his woods. He had four sons forced into the army, who, however, escaped into the woods during the army's retreat and are now at home. With his wife and daughter, at intervals every day and night, he was wont to flee into the woods for safety from the shells thrown by our gunboats. Many a fragment of shell and many a place struck, but too well attest that they were wise for thus quitting house and home during the frolic of Uncle Sam's boats.

These rebel works whose extent, strength, variety and completeness, as once existing, excite the surprise of every visitor not familiar with them, were built, says Mr. P., so far as the digging and lifting extended, entirely by negroes.—Besides Pumphrey's woods, another entire forest of some 15 acres was used in the construction of the entrenchments, breastworks, etc. Nor was any part of this material used in building the large village of barracks—still standing—two or three miles nearer Norfolk. The largest rebel force on the Point at any one time is estimated at 7000—a force sufficient, it would seem, for garrisoning the forts and manning the two lines of breastworks. Why this army ever abandoned such formidable places of defence, without a struggle, is still with many a matter of wonder. General Wool is said to have expressed his surprise when he saw the stronghold the enemy had left behind him, and remarked, according to report, that 40,000 men could not have dislodged the frightened cohorts who fled and left burning in their rear the "Indian Pole Bridge." Norfolk folks say—that is, some of them do—that their city was abandoned because there was always a rivalry between Norfolk and Richmond, and that Richmond demanded that her rival should be sacrificed. This will do well enough as an on dit. As however, the truth will do better, it must be said that it was necessary that the army of the Union should go marching on.

Since some of your readers may have never seen abandoned fortifications of considerable magnitude, an imperfect description of such may not be uninteresting. But who shall describe them?—Battered bulwarks, torn up parapets, exploded magazines, bursted cannon, scattered cannon ball, half burnt gun carriages, the tottering look-out, the old telegraph office, the half demolished headquarters, the guard-house—dungeon that was always full with naughty rebels—these and many more like things are easily mentioned, or, if you please, illustrated in Harper or Leslie; but the association of ideas, the sentiments and sensations arising out of a personal visit to such a scene of forsaken plans and withered hopes—these are less transferrable, whether by pen or pencil. Such is war! that is about all one can say such a place, and saying that, after a lay of three hours less or more, the wri turned away, and contemplated the ti when all rebel plans and hopes now b and building would be in ruin elsewh equally as at Sewall's Point. Special Notices.

TWO ELEGANT WORKS OF ART, Just Issued!

The Departure of the Pilgrim Fathers for America, and The Landing of the Pilgrims in America.

Each Engraving 26 x 34 inches, price only $1,50 each, by mail. These constitute the finest pair of companion Engravings ever published in the United States. They were engraved by the most eminent steel plate Engraver in this country, JOHN C. McRAE, of New York City, and for artistic skill and high beauty were never excelled. Mr. McRAE is great in whatever he attempts, but in these gems he has outdone himself. He was determined to render them enduring monuments of his skill, and no pains or expense have been spared to make them perfect works of Art, and to far excel any similar works ever issued in this country. They are of the same size, and in every respect equal to, the elegant English Engravings of the same subjects, which cannot be bought in this country for less than twelve dollars and fifty cents, each copy.

We have undertaken a gigantic enterprise, and one in which we earnestly invite the cooperation of all lovers of the beautiful in Art. We must sell fifty thousand copies of each of these magnificent Engravings, and to accomplish this have placed the price low enough to bring them within the reach of every one.—

Will you help us? And in so doing confer a life long pleasure on yourself! Such a great value in Art for so little money, was never before offered, and nothing short of a very large sale will remunerate us. Such Splendid Parlor Gems are usually published at $5 or $10 each, but we have determined to appeal to the public, to sustain us in our efforts to bring them within the reach of every family in the land.

The great historical value of these pictures—their great elegance and beauty, will render them of incalculable value to every home.

All honor to the "Mayflower Puritans"—the brave and true.

What sought they thus afar?
Bright jewels, bright jewels of the mine?
The wealth of seas, the spoils of war?—
They sought a faith's pure shrine!
Oh! call it holy ground,
The spot where first they trod—
They have left unchanged what there they [found—
FREEDOM TO WORSHIP GOD!

Hunnewell's Great Remedies.

WHAT EVERY FAMILY SHOULD HAVE IN THE HOUSE AND WHY;

☞ They should have HUNNEWELL'S UNIVERSAL COUGH REMEDY, because it effectually cures Colds, Whooping and Common Coughs, Sore Throat, Hoarseness, and is the most simple and perfect Soothing Syrup in the world. For old and young, by day and night, it may be used with the greatest freedom, and three-fourths of the deaths by Consumption stopped.

They should have HUNNEWELL'S TOLU ANODYNE, because it is a perfect remedy for Neuralgia, Nervous or Sick Headache, Tooth, and Earache, Pain in Stomach, or Bowels, Genuine Cholera Morbus, Rheumatism, Distress after Eating, Nervousness, Hysteria, and the chief of all causes of disease, and Insanity, Loss of Sleep. Its character, though active, is simple; its action in perfect conformity to nature; its end cure, or relief.

For the pains in Monthly Menstruation a perfect relief, while nature's after work is not disturbed, and one of the most important points in Medicine.

They should have HUNNEWELL'S ECLECTIC PILLS, because with seldom but a single Pill for a dose all derangements of the Stomach and Bowels are cured. They cure Indigestion, Dyspepsia, Headache, when caused by foul stomach, Loss of Appetite, Biliousness so often and so erroneously treated with Mercurials, Jaundice. For Worms a sure cure.

They act simple, assist nature, do not make a Pill Box of the stomach, as is the most fatal error of taking so many Pills at a dose: and then, what is important to every Family and every Purse, one bottle goes as far as two or three of what is ordinarily sold.

The confidence of all is asked to test
Hunnewell's Universal Cough Remedy.

BELL'S SPECIFIC PILLS.—WARRANTED IN ALL CASES.— —Can be relied on! Never fail to cure! Do not nauseate! Are speedy in action! No change of diet required! Do not interfere with business pursuits! Can be used without detection! Upward of 200 cures the past month—some of them very severe cases. Over one hundred physicians have used them in their practice, and all speak well of their efficacy, and approve of their composition, which is entirely vegetable, and harmless on the system. Hundreds of certificates can be shown.

BELL'S SPECIFIC PILLS are the original and only genuine Specific Pill. They are adapted for male and female, old or young, and the only reliable remedy for effecting a permanent and speedy cure in all cases of Spermatorrhea, or Seminal Weakness, with all its train of evils, such as Urethral and Vaginal Discharges, Gleet, the Whites, Nightly or Involuntary Emissions, Incontinence, Genital Debility and Irritability, Impotence, Weakness or Loss of Power, Nervous Debility, &c., &c., all of which arise principally from Sexual Excesses or Self-Abuse, or some constitutional derangement, and incapacitates the sufferer from fulfilling the duties of married life. In all sexual diseases, as Gonorrhea, Gleet, and Strictures, and in Diseases of the Bladder and Kidneys, they act as a charm! Relief is experienced by taking a single box.

Sold by all the principal druggists. Price $1.

They will be sent by mail, securely sealed, and confidentially, on receipt of the money, by

J BRYAN, M. D,
No. 76 Cedar street, New York,

Consulting Physician for the treatment of Seminal, Urinary, Sexual, and Nervous Diseases, who will send, free to all, the following valuable work, in sealed envelope:

THE FIFTIETH THOUSAND.—DR. BELL'S TREATISE on Self-Abuse, Premature Decay, Impotence and Loss of Power, Sexual Diseases, Seminal Weakness, Nightly Emissions, Genital Debility, &c., &c., a pamphlet of 64 pages, containing important advice to the afflicted, and which should be read by every sufferer, as the means of cure in the severest stages is plainly set forth. Two stamps required to pay postage.

December 9, 1863—1 yr.

IMPORTANT TO LADIES.—DR. HARVEY'S FEMALE PILLS have never yet failed in removing difficulties arising from obstruction, or stoppage of nature, or in restoring the system to perfect health when suffering from Spinal Affections, Prolapsus, Uteri, the Whites, or other weakness of the Uterine Organs. The Pills are perfectly harmless on the constitution, and may be taken by the most delicate female without causing distress—the same time they act like a charm by strengthening, invigorating and restoring the system to a healthy condition, and by bringing on the monthly period with regularity, no matter from what causes the obstruction may arise. They should, however, NOT be taken during the first three or four months of pregnancy, though safe at any other time, as miscarriage would be the result.

Each box contains 60 Pills. Price $1.

DR. HARVEY'S TREATISE on Diseases of Females, Pregnancy, Miscarriage, Barrenness, Sterility, Reproduction, and Abuses of Nature, and emphatically the Ladies' Private Medical Adviser, a pamphlet of 64 pages, sent free to any address. Six cents required to pay postage.

The Pills and book will be sent by mail when desired, securely sealed, and prepaid, by

HUNTER'S VADE MECUM, an original and popular treatise on Man and Woman, their Physiology, Functions, and Sexual Disorders of every kind, with Never-Failing Remedies for their speedy cure. The practice of Dr. Hunter has long been, and still is, unbounded, but at the earnest solicitation of numerous persons, he has been induced to extend his medical usefulness through the medium of his "Vade Mecum." It is a volume that should be in the hands of every family in the land, as a preventive of secret vices, or as a guide for the alleviation of one of the most awful and destructive scourges ever visited mankind. One copy, securely enveloped, will be forwarded free of postage to any part of the United States for 50 cents in post office stamps or 3 copies for $1. Address, post paid, DR. A Lecture on the Nature, Treatment & Radical

Cure of Seminal Weakness, or Spermatorrhœa, induced by Self-Abuse; Involuntary Emissions, Impotency, Nervous Debility, and Impediments to Marriage generally; Consumption, Epilepsy and Fits; Mental and Physical Incapacity, &c.—By ROB. J. CULVERWELL, M. D., Author of "The Green Book," &c.

The world-renowned author, in this admirable Lecture, clearly proves from his own experience that the awful consequences of Self-Abuse may be effectually removed without medicine, and without dangerous surgical operations, bougies, instruments, rings or cordials, pointing out a mode of cure at once certain and effectual, by which every sufferer, no matter what his condition may be, may cure himself cheaply, privately, and radically. This lecture will prove a boon to thousands and thousands.

HOSTETTER'S CELEBRATED STOMACH BITTERS.

A pure and powerful Tonic, corrective and alterative of wonderful efficacy in disease of the

Stomach, Liver and Bowels.

Cures Dyspepsia, Liver Complaint, Headache, Debility, Nervousness, Depression of Spirits, Constipation, Colic, Intermittent Fevers, Cramps and Spasms, and all Complaints of either Sex, arising from Bodily Weakness whether inherent in the system or produced by special causes.

Nothing that is not wholesome, genial and restorative in its nature enters into the composition of HOSTETTER'S STOMACH BITTERS. This popular preparation contains no mineral of any kind, no deadly botanical element; no fiery excitant; but it is a combination of the extracts of rare balsamic herbs and plants with the purest and mildest of all diffusive stimulants.

It is well to be forearmed against disease, and, so far as the human system can be protected by human means against maladies engendered by an unwholesome atmosphere, impure water and other external causes, HOSTETTER'S BITTERS may be relied on as a safeguard.

In districts infested with Fever and Ague, it has been found infallible as a preventive and irresistible as a remedy and thousands who resort to it under apprehension of an attack, escape the scourage; and thousands who neglect to avail themselves of its protective qualities in advance, are cured by a very brief course of this marvelous medicine. Fever and Ague patients, after being plied with quinine for months in vain, until fairly saturated with that dangerous alkaloid, are not unfrequently restored to health within a few days by the use of HOSTETTER'S BITTERS.

The weak stomach is rapidly invigorated and the appetite restored by this agreeable Tonic, and hence it works wonders in cases of DISPEPSIA and in less confirmed forms of INDIGESTION. Acting as a gentle and painless apperient, as well as upon the liver, it also invariably relieves the CONSTIPATION superinduced by irregular aotion of the digestive and secretive organs.

Persons of feeble habit, liable to Nervous Attacks, Lowness of Spirits and Fits of Languor, find prompt and permanent relief from the Bitters. The testimony on this point is most conclusive, and from both sexes.

The agony of BILIOUS COLIC is immediately assuaged by a single dose of the stimulant, and by occasionally resorting to it, the return of the complaint may be prevented.

As a General Tonic, HOSTETTER'S BITTERS produce effects which must be experienced or witnessed before they can be fully appreciated. In cases of Constitutional Weakness, Premature Decay and Debility and Decrepitude arising from OLD AGE, it exercises the electric influence. In the convalescent stages of all diseases it operates as a delightful invigorant. When the powers of nature are relaxed, it operates to re-enforce and re-establish them.

Last, but not least, it is The Only Safe Stimulant, being manufactured from sound and innocuous materials, and entirely free from the acid elements present more or less in all the ordinary tonics and stomachics of the day.

No family medicine has been so universally, and, it may be truly added, deservedly popular with the intelligent portion of the community, as HOSTETTER'S BITTERS.

HELMBOLD'S GENUINE PREPARATIONS.

COMPOUND FLUID EXTRACT BUCHU, a Positive and Specific Remedy for diseases of the Bladder, Kidneys, Gravel, and Dropsical Swellings.

This Medicine increases the power of Digestion, and excite the Absorbents into healthy action, by which the Wtaery or Calcareous depositions, and all Unnatural Enlargements are reduced, as well as Pain and Inflammation.

—:o:—

HELMBOLD'S EXTRACT BUCHU.

For Weaknesses arising from Excesses, Habits of Dissipation, Early Indiscretion of Abuse, attended with the following symptoms:—

Indisposition to Exertion,	Loss of Power,
Loss of Memory,	Difficulty of Breathing,
Weak Nerves,	Trembling,
Horror of Disease,	Wakefulness,
Dimness of Vision,	Pain in the Back,
Universal Lassitude of the Muscular System,
Hot Hands,	Flushing of the Body,
Dryness of the Skin,	Eruptions on the Face,
Pallid Countenance.

These symptoms, if allowed to go on, which this medicine invariably removes, soon follows

Impotency, Fatuity, Epileptic Fits,

In one of which the patient may expire.

Who can say that they are not frequently followed by those "Direful Diseases,"

"INSANITY AND CONSUMPTION."

Many are aware of the cause of their suffering, BUT NONE WILL CONFESS THE RECORDS OF THE INSANE ASYLUMS.

And Melancholy Deaths by Consumption bear ample witness to the Truth of the assertion.

The Constitution once effected with Organic Weakness requires the aid of Medicine to Strengthen and Invigorate the system,

Which HELMBOLD'S EXTRACT BUCHU invariably does. A Trial will convince the msst skeptical.

—:o:—

FEMALES—FEMALES—FEMALES.

In many Affections peculiar to Females the EXTRACT BUCHU is unequalled by any other remedy, as in Chlorosis or Retention, Irregularity, Painfulness, or Suppression of Customary Evacuations, Ulcerated Scirrhous state of the Uterus, Leuchorrhœa or Whites, Sterility, and for all complaints incident to the sex, whether arising from indiscretion or Habits of Dissipation, or in the

DECLINE OR CHANGE OF LIFE.

—:o:—

Take no more Balsam, Mercury, or unpleasant Medicines for unpleasant and dangerous diseases.

HELMBOLD'S EXTRACT BUCHU AND IMPROVED ROSE WASH CURES

SECRET DISEASES

In all their Stages, At little Expense.
Little or no change in Diet. No inconvenience.
And no Exposure.

It causes a frequent desire and gives strength to Urinate, thereby Removing Obsructions, Preventing and Curing Strictures of the Urethra, allaying Pain and Inflammation, so frequent in this class of diseases, and expelling all Poisonous, Diseased and wornout Matter.

Thousands upon Thousands who have been the Victims of Quacks, and who have paid heavy fees to be cured in a short time, have found they were deceived, and that the "POISON" has, by the use of "Powerful Astringents," been dried up in the system, to break out in an aggravated form, and perhaps after Marriage.

—:o:—

Use HELMBOLD'S EXTRACT BUCHU for all affections and diseases of the URINARY ORGANS, whether existing in MALE or FEMALE, from whatever cause originating and no matter of HOW LONG STANDING.

Diseases of these Organs requires the aid of a DIURETIC. HELMBOLD'S EXTRACT BUCHU IS THE GREAT DIURETIC, and is certain to have the desired effect in all Diseases for which it is Recommended.

Evidence of the most reliable and responsible character will accompany the medicine.

STURGIS'S ELECTRIC COMPOUND!

AN EFFECTUAL CURE FOR

NEURALGIA AND RHEUMATISM.

Also, invaluable for Spinal Irritation, Hip Complaints, Ague in the Face, Tooth Ache, Pain in the Side, Back, Limbs, Ear Ache, Lumbago, &c.

The proprietor, in offering this medicine to the public, desires to state that this preparation does not belong to the class called patent medicines. Its value has been tested for many years, and it has been found fully adequate to the removal of many obstinate cases of the above complaints, which other celebrated remedies had failed to reach, and which had baffled the skill of eminent physicians. The proprietor does not claim that it will cure but one class of disease. All persons who are afflicted with any of these complaints are earnestly requested to try this Compound and judge for themselves.

AMONG THE ADVANTAGES OF THIS MEDICINE ARE THE FOLLOWING:

Its effect is very rapid—in most cases instantaneous.

It is external in its application, and the patient runs no risk in using it. It does not strike to the stomach.

It reaches the nerves and muscles, as it is believed no other medicine does.

It has cured some of the most violent and obstinate cases of Neuralgia ever known.

It can be used on a child or on an aged person alike.

While it is very powerful, it is perfectly harmless.

The proprietor has been allowed to publish the names of many persons who have used the Compound with the most beneficial results. He inserts here a few of them. They are among the most respectable citizens of Boston, and their residences and places are given:

And many others.

The proprietor is permitted to publish the following letter from O. C. Pitkin, Esq., Principal of the High School in the city of Chelsea, and well known as one of the most successful teachers in New England:

CHELSEA, April 30, 1863.

FRIEND WILLIAMS:—Yours of the 26th is received. My wife was troubled with severe Neuralgia in the face. She tried your Compound with decidedly good effect. I think it is an excellent article, and have recommended it in one instance, where it also produced good effect. You certainly have the liberty to refer it to me.

With much respect, yours truly,
O. C. PITKIN.

MAGIC TIME OBSERVERS.

Being a Hunting or Open Face or Lady's or Gentleman's Watch Combined, with patent Self-Winding Improvement, a most Pleasing Novelty.

ONE of the Prettiest, Most Convenient, and decidedly the best and cheapest time piece for general and reliable use ever offered. It has within it and connected with its machinery, its own winding attachment, rendering a key entirely unnecessary The cases of this Watch are composed of two metals, the outer one being fine 16 carat gold. It has the improved ruby action lever movement, and is warranted an accurate time piece. Price, superbly engraved, per case of half dozen, $204. Sample Watches, in neat morocco boxes, $35.

SILVER WATCHES!

First Class Hunting Time-Pieces for accuracy of movement, beauty of material, and above all, cheapness in price, these watches must insure universal approbation.

An imitation so faultless that it can hardly be detected by the most experienced judges. The material being of two metals, the outer one first quality Sterling Silver, while the inner one is German Silver, it cannot be recognized by cutting or heavy engraving, making it, not only in appearance, but in durability, the best resemblance of SOLID STERLING SILVER in existence.

The Sale of these Watches in the Army is a source of enormous profit, retailing, as they very readily do, at $25 and upwards. Many hundred dollars can be made in a single pay day by any one of ordinary business tact.

☞ AT WHOLESALE ONLY! In heavy hunting cases, beautifully engraved, white enamel dial, and fancy cut hands, in good running order, by the half dozen, $66. Sold only by the case of six!

Upon the receipt of two dollars, as a guarantee of good faith, we will send watches by express to any part of the loyal States, collecting balance of bill on delivery. This ensures buyers against fraud, giving them their watches before pay is required.

Soldiers in the disloyal States MUST remit CASH IN ADVANCE, as the express companies peremptorily refuse making collections in such dangerous localities. Remember, Cash in advance from within the army lines in rebel States. We guarantee the safe delivery of all Watches, whether they are sent by mail or express.

REFLECTIONS.

When we look back upon the past and ieditate on scenes which have happened n our days of happiness, can we smother he melancholy feelings which arise in ur hearts, or check the falling tear, as oved objects, long past and gone, appear in our imagination to remind us of he dear associations of former years, vhen all was bright and joyful? We igh for the days of childhood, when we nnocently prattled by our parents' side, r mingled in childish sports, day after ay, without one care or troubled thought! ut we reflect upon those days of innocence as one bright, pleasing dream hich soothes us for an instant, then uickly disappears, leaving the stern eality of our own situation more bitter nd piercing than before!

Here we are, and here we must stay, ntil some relief appears, either by death r some fortunate turn of fate. In this orld each person has their alloted share f joy and sorrow. Even in the gay alls of mirth and grandeur are distress nd sadness to be found. Beneath costly ostume and smiling faces, troubles and retchedness often repose. The rich are ibject to misfortunes, often more severe nd trying than those of the poor.

Money will never buy happiness or ispel sadness from the mind. What od orders, we must endure. Everying is for the best, if we can only ink so. Christians can have the comrting thought of a bright future in eaven when their career on earth is nded. He who watches the sparrows ll—who is father to the weeping orphan nd friend to all—will, in His holy goodess, protect those who are unfortunate; nd when the time arrives for us to leave us world of sin and sorrow, He will ke us to a harbor where we will all be fely anchored from storms and troubles, eneath his watchful eye and everlasting ve.

When our days on earth are ended,
And we reach the other shore,
We will join the heavenly chorus,
Because our troubles here are o'er.

☞ Historical investigation makes sad ork with the heroes of historical roance. All the world has accepted Mary ueen of Scotts as a very beautiful as ell as a much injured woman. Yet iose matter of fact students of old docuents have recently brought to light some irious details respecting her which will stonish the public. It is said that a letr has been discovered which makes it ertain that she instigated the murder of er husband. It also comes out that she as very dirty in her personal habits, id gave the poor nobleman who had iarge of her no end of trouble with her thy ways. But what perhaps will most irprise the reader is the fact that this eauty of the sixteenth century had near as large a collection of wigs as Queen lizabeth, who possessed eighty. They ere of different colors. Her hair turnl gray at the age of thirty-five; after hich she polled it quite short. When e executioner, at Fotheringay, took ild of the decapitated head by the arficial tresses, it fell to the ground. Her atures were large and sharp and her gure full and stately. She had great vacity, a sweet voice, and eyes of starke brightness. Yet what with her wigs, er large figure, and sharp features we ardly recognize the Mary of romance.—erhaps, after all, even Helen of Troy as a dowdy.

☞ One of the latest stories of Mr. incoln, is of his interview with a deleition of ministers. It is not reported at they had much to say when they ere admitted to his presence; but in king leave one of them remarked he hoped the Lord was on our side." "I on't agree with you." Of course they oked amazed. "I hope, indeed, that e are on the Lord's side."

BATTLE OF WATERLOO.

BY J. T. HEADLY.

After the hundred days preparation, Napoleon advanced to the Low Countries, to meet the allies, again banded together for his overthrow. He attacked Blucher at Ligny, and defeated him,—and so hard pressed was this old veteran that he was overthrown, and lay entangled under his horse in the darkness, while the French cavalry passed twice over his body without observing him: he then extricated himself and joining his troops retreated to Wavres. Ney had been less successful at Quatre Bras in his attack on Wellington, but he had retired in good order, and effected a junction with Napoleon, and the two together moved down on Waterloo where the Duke had taken up his position—entirely separated from the Prussian army.

To understand the field of battle, imagine two slightly elevated semicircular ridges or rather slopes, a half mile apart, curving gently forward, somewhat in the form of a parenthesis, and you will have the positions of the two armies. On the summit of one of these slopes was drawn up the French army, and on the other that of the English and allies. The night of the 17th June was dark and stormy—the rain fell in torrents, and the two armies lay down in the tall rye drenched with rain, to wait the morning that was to decide the fate of Europe and of Napoleon.

From the ball-room at Brussels many English officers had been summoned in haste to the field, and shivering and cold were compelled to pass the night in the mud and rain, in their elegant attire. The artillery had cut up the ground, so that the mud was ankle deep, while the tall rye lay crushed and matted beneath the feet of the soldiers. The morning of the 18th opened with a drizzly rain, and the two armies, benumbed with cold and soaking wet, rose from their damp beds to the contest. Eighty thousand French soldiers were seen moving in close, massive columns on the crest of the height, as they took up their several positions for the day. After all was completed Bonaparte rode along the lines in the highest spirits, confident of success, and exclaiming, "now to breakfast," galloped away, while the shout "vive l' Empereur!" that rolled after him shook the field on which he stood, and fell with ominous tones on the allied army. Two hundred and sixty-two cannon lined the ridge like a wall of death, ready to open their fire on the enemy. At eleven o'clock the signal of attack was given, and the columns moved in beautiful order down the slope. Wellington's lines occupied two miles in extent, with the right resting on the Chateau Hougomont, which from the defences it furnished was equal to a redoubt. The centre was protected by a farm-house, La Hay Sainte, while the left stretched out into the open field. First Jerome Bonaparte led a column of six thousand men down on Hougomont, who in the face of a most destructive fire pushed up to the very walls of the chateau, and thrust their bayonets through the door. But the Coldstream Guards held the court-yard with invincible obstinacy and he was compelled at length to retire, after leaving 1400 men in a little orchard beside the walls, where it does not seem so many men could be laid. In a short time the battle became general along the whole line, and heroic deeds were performed on every rod of the contested field. The heavy French cavalry came thundering down on the steady English squares, that had already been wasted by the heavy artillery, and strove and strove with almost superhuman energy to break them. Driven to desperation by their repeatedly foiled attempts, they at length stopped their horses and coolly walked them round and round the squares, and whenever a man fell dashed in, in vain valor.

Whole ranks went down like smitten grass before the headlong charges of cavalry and infantry. In the centre the conflict at length became awful, for there the crisis of the battle was fixed. Wellington stood under a tree while the boughs were crashing with the cannon shot overhead, and nearly his whole guard smitten down by his side, anxiously watching the progress of the fight. His brave squares, torn into fragments by bombs and rocket shot, still refused to yield one foot of ground. Napoleon rode through his ranks, cheering on the exhausted columns of infantry and cavalry, that rent the heavens with the shout of "vive l' Empereur!" and dashed with unparalleled recklessness on the bayonets of the English.

The hero of Wagram, and Borodino, and Austerlitz, and Marengo, and Jena, enraged at the stubborn obstinacy of the British, rode over the field, and was still sure of victory. Wellington, seeing that he could not much longer sustain the desperate charges of the French battalions, wiped the sweat from his anxious forehead and exclaimed, "Oh, that Blucher or night would come!" Thus from eleven till four did the battle rage with sanguinary ferocity, and still around the centre it grew more awful every moment.

The mangled cavalry staggered up to the exhausted British squares, which, though diminished and bleeding in every part, seemed rooted to the ground they stood upon. The heroic Picton had fallen at the head of his brigade, while his sword was flashing over his head. Ponsonby had gone down on the hard fought field, and terror and slaughter were on every side;—still the charge of the French cavalry was terrific. Disregarding the close and murderous fire of the British batteries, they rode steadily forward till they came to the bayonet's point, and then firmly urged their horses' heads against the barrier, but in vain—pierced through, and broken, they were rolled back over the field, but rallied again and again to the charge, and prodigies of valor were wrought, and heroes fell at every discharge. The rent and trodden field ran blood, yet through the deep mud the determined foeman pressed on, while out of the smoke of every volley arose from the French lines the shout of "vive l' Empereur!"

CHARGE OF THE OLD GUARD.

At length a dark object was seen to emerge from the distant wood, and soon an army of 30,000 men deployed into the field, and began to march straight for the scene of conflict. Blucher and his Prussians had come, but no Grouchy, who had been left to hold them in check, followed after.

In a moment Napoleon saw that he could not sustain the attack of so many fresh troops, if once allowed to form a junction with the allied forces, and so he determined to stake his fate on one bold cast, and endeavor to pierce the allied centre with a grand charge of the Old Guard—and thus throwing himself between the two armies, fight them separately. For this purpose the Imperial Guard was called up, which had remained inactive during the whole day, and divided into two immense columns, which were to meet at the British centre. That under Reille no sooner entered the fire than it disappeared like mist. The other was placed under Ney, the "bravest of the brave," and the order to advance given. Napoleon accompanied them part way down the slope, and halting for a moment in a hollow, addressed them in his fiery, impetuous manner. He told them the battle rested with them, and that he relied on their valor. "Vive l' Empereur!" answered him with a shout that was heard all over the field of battle.

He then left them to Ney, who ordered the charge. Bonaparte has been blamed for not heading this charge himself;—but he knew he could not carry that guard so far nor hold them so long before the artillery, as Ney. The moral power the latter carried with him, from the reputation he had gained of being "the bravest of the brave," was worth a whole division.

Whenever a column saw him at their head, they knew that it was to be victory or annihilation. With the exception of Macdonald, I do not know a general in the two armies who could hold his soldiers so long in the very face of destruction as he. The whole Continental struggle exhibited no sublimer spectacle than this last effort of Napoleon to save his sinking empire. Europe had been put upon the plains of Waterloo to be battled for. The greatest military energy and skill the world possessed had been tasked to the utmost during the day. Thrones were tottering on the ensanguined field, and the shadows of fugitive kings flitted through the smoke of battle. Bonaparte's Star trembled in the Zenith—now blazing out in its ancient splendor, now suddenly paling before his anxious eye. At length, when the Prussians appeared on the field, he resolved to stake Europe on one bold throw. He committed himself and France to Ney, and saw his Empire rest on a single charge. The intense anxiety with which he watched the advance of that column, and the suspense he suffered when the smoke of battle wrapped it from sight, and the utter despair of his great heart when the curtain lifted over a fugitive army, and the despairing shriek, rang on every side, "la garde recule," "la garde recule," make us for the moment forget all the carnage in sympathy with his distress.

Ney felt the pressure of the immense responsibility on his brave heart, and resolved not to prove unworthy of the great trust committed to his care. Nothing could be more imposing than the movement of that grand column to the assault. That guard had never yet recoiled before a human foe, and the allied forces beheld with awe its firm and terrible advance to the final charge. For a moment the batteries stopped playing, and the firing ceased along the British lines, as without the beating of a drum, or the blast of a bugle, to cheer their steady courage, they moved in dead silence over the plain. The next moment the artillery opened, and the head of that gallant column seemed to sink into the earth. Rank after rank went down, yet they neither stopped nor faltered. Dissolving squadrons, and whole battalions disappearing one after another in the destructive fire, affected not their steady courage. The ranks closed up as before, and each treading over his fallen comrade, pressed firmly on. The horse which Ney rode fell under him, and he had scarcely mounted another before it also sunk to the earth. Again and again did that unflinching man feel his steed sink down, till five had been shot under him. Then with his uniform riddled with bullets, and his face singed and blackened with powder, he marched on foot with drawn sabre at the head of his men. In vain did the artillery hurl its storm of fire and lead into that living mass. Up to the very muzzles they pressed, and driving the artillerymen from their own pieces, pushed on through the English lines. But at that moment a file of soldiers who had lain flat on the ground, behind a low ridge of earth, suddenly rose and poured a volley in their very faces. Another and another followed till one broad sheet of flame rolled on their bosoms, and in such a fierce and unexpected flow, that human courage could not withstand it. They reeled, shook, staggered back, then turned and fled. Ney was borne back in the refluent tide, and hurried over the field. But for the crowd of fugitives that forced him on, he would have stood alone, and fallen in his footsteps. As it was, disdaining to fly, though the whole army was flying, he formed his men into two immense squares and endeavored to stem the terrific current, and would have done so had it not been for the thirty thousand fresh Prussians that pressed on his exhausted ranks. For a long time these squares stood and let the artillery plow through them. But the fate of Napoleon was writ, and though Ney doubtless did what no other man in the army could have done, the decree could not be reversed. The star that had blazed so brightly over the world, went down in blood, and "the bravest of the brave" had fought his last battle. It was worthy of his great name, and the charge of the Old Guard at Waterloo, with him at their head, will be pointed to by remotest generations with a shudder.

☞ It is getting to be a question which is the most dangerous, our iron-clad ships or our steel-clad women! A distressed lover in Blackwood, thus expatiates on the dangers of crinoline:

How can I stoop! How can I kneel?
How can I worship at thy feet?
When thou art fenced about with steel,
An Amazon in mail complete!
I fear not Cupid's fiercest dart—
Am willing for thy sake to die:
But if a splinter chanced to start,
Why, dearest, I might lose an eye!
Ah, cruel! wherefore bear that mine
Of danger in thy crinoline?

☞ "Little fellow!" said Goliath to David, "how much do you weigh?"—The stripling's answer was, "ordinarily I weigh one hundred and twenty; but whenever I get mad I weigh a ton, every ounce of it." When mad he was nimble, and hence his sling-stone out-weighed the spear huge as a weaver's beam.

☞ A man in Wisconsin, who recently inserted a long advertisement in the papers offering his farm for sale, closed it in the following sublimely ridiculous style: "The surrounding country is the most beautiful the God of Nature ever made. The scenery is celestial—divine—also, two wagons to sell, and a yoke of steers."

CONSTERNATION IN A RESPECTABLE FAMILY.

We regret to state that through the blundering of a country cousin, one of the first families of Boston were recently thrown into a state of consternation and indignation which it is impossible to describe. For a while serious consequences were apprehended, but after proper restoratives were applied and explanations made, the family were enabled to take their meals with the accustomed regularity and relish. The misunderstanding was caused in a singular manner, and can, in a measure, be attributed to the prevailing war and the number of military heroes who infest the city.

It seems that the cousin, who caused the trouble, is a native of Vermont, and is now on a visit to an uncle in that city. One evening, during the recent spell of cold weather, the only daughter of the house, a lady of seventeen, whose delicacy is a part of her nature and whose mind is entirely above earthly things, with the exception of the new opera, new dresses and a carriage, remarked in the presence of her cousin without a word of warning, that she was fearful of freezing if she went to bed.

Her mother was about to utter some expressions of consolation, when the cousin (rude man that he is) remarked, in a loud tone, so loud that every one heard him—

"Why don't you take a major to bed, with you?"

There was a faint shriek, and Henrietta was observed to fall senseless on the plush sofa. Her position, however, was noted for its grace and the careful manner in which her crinoline was adjusted.

"Wretch!" cried the father, "you have murdered my daughter with your vulgarity."

"Monster!" exclaimed the mother, "how could you? And such delicate nerves as she has, too."

"I swow," yelled the Vermonter, with a doleful look, "I didn't mean—"

"Silence, sir!" cried a brother, who had attempted to obtain a commission as brigadier general, and failed only because he once belonged to a home guard, and knew, therefore, too much on military affairs.

"Darn it, won't you—"

"No, sir, we will not," cried the enraged parent. "A man that recommends my daughter to sleep with a major is not fit for decent society."

"But I didn't mean it,"—screamed the Yankee; but no attention was paid to his words.

"She revives—she revives—the shock has not killed her," the doting mother said, bending over her child and kissing her.

"Only think," sobed the fair one, "that cousin should recommend a common major, when there are so many major-generals without wives."

"It was a cruel blow, but you must bear up, darling," whispered the mother.

"Darnation, won't somebody listen to me?" cried the perplexed Vermonter.—"I didn't mean that Hen should sleep with a real live major—one of them malicious officers. In course I didn't.—And I don't want her to unless she is married, and then she may, for all I care. I wanted her to do as our gals do cold nights. They heat bricks and put 'em at their feet, and up in our parts the gals calls 'em majors. That's what I mean, and what's the use of a fuss about it, that's what I want to know?"

"It seems that we were laboring under a mistake," said the head of the family; "but, really, hereafter, when there are young ladies in the room, I don't think I'd mention such vulgar things. The ladies of the city are too delicate for such names."

The Vermonter promised to be more careful in future, and the family are doing well.

☞ A poetical feminine, who found the cords of Hymen not so silky as she expected, gives vent to her feelings in the following regretful stanzas. The penultimate line is peculiarly comprehensive and expansive:

When I was young I used to earn
My living without trouble,
Had clothes and pocket money, too,
And hours of pleasure double.
I never dreamed of such a fate,
When I A LASS was courted—
Wife, mother, nurse, seamstress, cook, house-keeper, chambermaid, laundress, dairy-woman, and scrub generally, doing the work of six,
For the sake of being supported.

☞ Why is a carving knife like a pig's tail? Because both flourish over a ham.

OF PRECIOUS STONES.

From time immemorial jewels have been in request for personal adornment. For some, diamonds have superior attractions; to others the gems of lesser note, such as sapphire, ruby, emerald, beryl, topaz, etc., have charms that cannot be excelled. In this, as in most other matters of similar importance, individual taste is probably the guide in selection; and while the love of display may incite some to become the possessors of costly stones, there are more who are attracted solely by the intrinsic beauty and fire of the particular jewels they affect.

It is well known that diamonds of extraordinary size and weight are highly valued, chiefly in proportion to their colorlessness and freedom from specks or flaws; some of these stones—the first of all jewels—are in the possession of royal families, and are handed down in regular succession to the occupants of the thrones. Diamonds are the hardest of all known substances; they are the adamant spoken of in Scripture, and possess a brilliancy and lustre unapproachable by other jewels. So much has already been made public concerning diamonds that we do not propose to pursue the subject further, but will say a few words upon some other less valuable but yet beautiful gems.

The bright red stone so much worn of late years, "carbuncle," is in fact a garnet, or a variety of that stone. To the ancients this stone was well known, and from them it received the name of "carbunculus;" it has been found in rivers abroad and is cut in various styles. The color is blood, cherry, or brownish-red, but has often a blueish or violet tinge; the red garnet can be attacked by a file. It becomes electric with friction and grows darker when heated, but resumes its color when cool. Under the blow-pipe it fuses into a dark pebble. Its chemical constituents are silica, alumina and the protoxides of iron and manganese. Different names are given to the various shades of color seen in this stone, such as the Syrian garnet, when the gem is of a blood-red hue; Ceylenese garnet, when of a wine-red or orange-yellow; and Vermeille, when of a deep shade of orange-yellow. The precious garnet is of a brownish-red color, and transparent; it is found in Brazil, India, Greenland, Sweden, Norway and Spain; and nearer home, in North Carolina, Massachusetts, Georgia and New Hampshire; also in the Tahgonic range, Berkshire county, Mass.; it has likewise been found in Marlborough and Chesterfield, Mass. The garnet is cut on a leaden disk, like the face-plate of a lathe, either by the aid of emery or its own powder, and is polished with rotten stone and the oil of vitriol, on a block-tin plate. The technical name of the oval form in which the garnet is cut, is called "cabochon." The stone is also cut like a brilliant—that is, with angles or facets on its face and bottom. Very often garnets are excavated or hollowed out on the bottom: in this way they are rendered much more brilliant; they are also backed with gold or violet foil in order to heighten their beauty. Small garnets are worked up on a large scale in factories; they are sometimes drilled with a diamond at the rate of one hundred and fifty per day. One man can cut about thirty garnets "brilliant" in a day: the polishing is done by women and children. The garnet is usually set in rings, necklaces, pins, etc., and even snuff-boxes are made from large and fine specimens, obtained in Greenland, Syria, etc. The value of the stone is determined by the size and color, as also the degree of perfection belonging to it. On account of its deep color it must be cut thin, and any stone of this variety which retains its high color without being cut too thin is valued highly and ranks with the sapphire. They are generally sold at wholesale by the pound, at from $8 to $10, containing from sixty to four hundred stones; a set of one thousand of the best selected garnets being worth about $60.

THE LAST RESORT.—General Howell Cobb is making speeches through Georgia, endeavoring to revive the waning spirits of the people, to whom he says: "Should all other means fail to win our independence—should the men refuse to fight longer our battles—I will, as a last resort, assemble the women of our land and march them forth for duty in the field."

☞ Why is the letter U the gayest of the alphabet? Because it's always in fun.

HOW COFFEE CAME TO BE USED.—At the time Columbus discovered America, it had never been known or used. It only grew in Arabia and Upper Ethiopa. The discovery of its use as a beverage is ascribed to the superior of a monastery at Arabia, who, desirous of preventing the monks from sleeping at their nocturnal services, made them drink the infusion of coffee, upon the report of some shepherds, who observed that their flocks were more lively after browsing on the fruit of that plant. Its reputation rapidly spread through the adjacent countries, and in about two hundred years it reached Paris. A single plant, brought there in 1614, became the parent stock of all the coffee plantations in the West Indies. The extent of consumption can now hardly be realized. The United States alone annually consume, at the cost of its landing, from fifteen to sixteen millions of dollars. You may know the Arabia, or Mocha, the best coffee, by its small bean of dark color. The Java and East India, the next in quality, a larger and paler yellow. The West India Rio has a blueish, greenish gray tint.

☞ An English clergyman charged before a London magistrate with drunkness and assault, said in excuse: 'The fact is, that after I had an early dinner, I had a pint of dry port, and this made me so very dry that I called for a glass of sparkling wine. It was so nice that I had a second. I then went down to the station, as I thought, quite right, but when I got on to the platform the cork, as I might so say, seemed to get out, and the wine went about me.' The reverend gentleman, says the New York Post, may not have satisfied justice, but he conferred a boon upon the reporters, who will hereafter speak of a drunken man not as one 'with a brick in his hat,' or 'tight,' or 'boosy,' or 'exposed too long to the sun,' but as a man with the 'cork out.'

☞ The first bell in Haverhill, Mass., was purchased in 1781; before that time there was a singular substitute, as appears by a vote passed in 1730, "That Abraham Tyler blow his horn half an hour before meeting time on Lord's day and on lecture days, and receive one pound of pork annually for his services from each family."

☞ Voltaire's want of faith in christianity has at least this palliative, that judging of the system by its professors it was not unnatural that he should underrate it. But what can be said of his want of faith in woman. "Ideas," said he, are like beards,—men only get them when they grow up, and women never have any! The brute!

☞ Five of the sweetest words in the English language begin with an H, which is only a breath; Heart, Hope, Home, Happiness, and Heaven. Heart is a hope-place, and home is a heart-place, and that man sadly mistaketh, who would exchange the happiness of home for anything less than Heaven.

☞ A man says the first thing that turned his attention to matrimony, was the neat and skillful manner in which a pretty girl handled a broom. He may see the time when the manner in which the broom is handled will not afford him such satisfaction.

☞ Raw Cotton and Castor Oil have restored frost-bitten limbs when amputation was thought to be necessary to preserve life. The cure is said to be infallible.

☞ The saying of a White Mountain stage driver to a New Yorker sitting with him, "I s'pose if I went to York I should gawk round just as you folks do here," was not bad.

☞ The great gong upon Colt's factory, which sounded continually till the building was burnt down, was heard distinctly at Williamtic, a distance of 27 miles.

☞ When you advertise your business, make no half-way work of it. Business is like architecture—good columns are a good support.

☞ The way the rebels yell, on going into battle is accounted for on the score of scarcity of food. They are all 'holler.'

☞ There are two things that modest men should never undertake—to borrow money and study law.

The Wizard.

WEDNESDAY, MARCH 16, 1864.

PASTORAL VISITATIONS.

A few words on the above subject may not be inopportune at a time when a young clergyman is about to assume the charge of one of our religious societies. It is well known that in almost all parishes there are some persons who are unreasonably exacting in their requirements of frequent visits from their pastors.—They are often the very persons who demand the most perfection in the pulpit exercises. They do not consider how much greater are the requirements now for a pulpit performance than in earlier times. The progress of general education and the diffusion of knowledge among the people require a higher standard in the pulpit. This necessitates greater preparation, more study, more intense thought and more careful attention to the style of writing in the discourses. This cannot be expected unless time, and that without unnecessary interruptions, is given to the preacher. If his time is often broken in upon during the week he must necessarily carry slipshod performances into the pulpit on the sabbath. His visits among his people, aside from those when he is called to the sick bed or to give consolation to the bereaved, should always be at such times and of such character and duration as are most agreeable to him. The conversation should be cheerful and of that familiar kind which will put all the parties at ease, thus affording opportunity for intimate acquaintance with the character, habits and tastes of those visited, which is so desirable knowledge to the pastor. The time has gone by for those stiff, formal and chilling visitations from the minister, which were formerly so much in vogue. People at this day do not desire to listen to parlor sermons or sitting-room exhortations. They prefer that the conversation at such interviews shall be religious or secular, as the circumstances at the time may cause it to be developed. Common events and ordinary subjects may be treated religiously without a particle of the odor of the conference meeting, and they will be quite as improving to the mind and heart as discussions of abstruse points of theology.

Visitations of the kind above indicated, if not made too frequent, by taking the minister too often from his studies, will be as improving to him as to his people. It will afford a pleasant relief from the brain-work of his study-room. He certainly needs it if he is expected to keep up at all with the ordinary requirements of the parish. If he has a family, or if he has not robust health, he still more needs the indulgence of his parishioners, and they should allow him to exercise his own good judgment in seeking interviews at their homes. At all events they should not exhibit a foolish jealousy if he should happen to call oftener upon a neighbor than upon themselves.

NEW SALEM WATER-WORKS!

We have several times heard of some of our Salem friends making some complaint relative to the position taken by South Danvers in regard to the use of our ponds for the purpose of supplying that city with aqueduct water. We fear that our position is misunderstood. The resolution passed at our town meeting upon the subject, fails to express the interest the citizens feel in the contemplated enterprise of our good neighbors, although it represents truly enough the position we take in regard to our own rights.

Our territory includes Brown's Pond, about one-third of Spring Pond and nearly one-half of Humphrey's Pond. We think that the two first named ponds are no more than adequate for our present, to say nothing of our prospective wants. While Salem people are wisely looking to their future necessities, and proposing to make liberal and comprehensive provision for them by means of a first class aqueduct, they ought not to complain because South Danvers people also take into view their probable future needs and keep a careful lookout that the only reasonably convenient sources of supply for us are not forestalled by others.

The resolution passed by the town does not, as has been represented, oppose the taking of water from South Danvers. It only opposes taking it from Spring Pond and Brown's Pond, and is entirely silent in regard to Humphrey's Pond, leaving it plainly inferrible that we make no objection to taking it from that inexhaustible source. Though as to this pond we might object, if we really pursued a narrow-minded policy, as has been ungenerously charged, that our woolen mill at Brookdale needs all the surplus water at Humphrey's Pond. But what are the needs of a woolen mill, compared with the demands of an aqueduct! We think our town would cheerfully surrender to Salem a full and unlimited right to take all the water they need, now or hereafter, from that magnificent pond. We would not capriciously put a single straw in the way of so grand an enterprise as the city contemplates. If the present city government have the force and spirit to inaugurate and complete this noble improvement, they will win an enviable niche in the history of that wealthy and respected municipality. In this great work they can count upon the best wishes of South Danvers, with a cheerful grant of every facility in her power to give, for executing it, except the surrender of these two ponds which we need for our own use.

EDWIN FORREST.—This eminent tragedian has just closed a successful engagement at the Boston Theatre. We had the privilege of hearing him, as Hamlet, last Thursday evening. The first time the writer of this paragraph ever heard Mr. Forrest play, was at the National Theatre in 1844. Although since then twenty years of professional labor have passed over his head, he seems now, when among the surroundings of the stage, about as young as then. His physique is exceedingly well adapted to resist the encroachments of age. No one, not knowing his age, and judging only from his personal appearance on the stage, would set him over 40, though he is really 58 years old—having been born in 1806.

He has now been before the public as an actor—man and boy—46 years! and has shed a bright lustre on the American Drama. Since the death of Booth he has had no rival. He was born in Philadelphia. First played at the South Street Theatre when twelve years old. He has visited Europe twice, and has amassed a large fortune from his professional labors. Indeed he seems to have been successful in all respects, except in the attempt to impeach his wife. In this he failed, and was compelled to pay her a yearly alimony of $3,000 for her separate maintenance.

NEW LIQUOR LAW.—The Legislative Committee on this subject had a hearing last Thursday. Aldermen Warren, Norcross, Messinger and the Chief of Police of Boston appeared as witnesses in behalf of the petition of the city of Boston for a license law in place of the present prohibitory statute.

Their idea is that 1000 licenses should be granted at $300 each, and that this revenue of $300,000 should be applied to the amelioration of the evils of intemperance. At a previous hearing, Mr. Huntington of Salem favored the Committee with the advantage of his large experience in the administration of the criminal law. He was decidedly opposed to the proposed change—feeling confident that a license law would not be enforced any better than the present law, if as well. His opinions seemed to have great weight with the Committee, who will undoubtedly report against the proposed change.

Senator Andrews of Danvers is on the Committee.

THE ANTIQUE FESTIVAL.—This gathering, which took place on Tuesday evening of last week, was a success in every particular. All the arrangements of the programme were fully carried out. The evening was pleasant and the company large. The dresses were showy and unique; the characters assumed by the wearers were well sustained and all went off as merry as a marriage bell. The music and dancing had many admirers, and the latter many participators. Notwithstanding the attractions of the upper hall, the lower one was thronged to hear the excellent vocal music.

We have seldom been to a festival of any kind where so much of enjoyment, with so little to disturb it, has appeared. Some of the dresses were superb, many were quaint and differed materially from the present fashion.

The best of it is, that the festival contributed about $125 to the funds of the Aid Society.

BEATING THE DEVIL ROUND A STUMP. A few years ago the Superior Court made a rule that Counsellors in their Court should stand up while examining witnesses. This rule has been generally quite offensive to the "green bag" gentry, who regard it as an encroachment upon their comfort and a stroke at their dignity. In order to get round this regulation, without directly repealing it, the Senate lately passed a bill in these words:

> "Counsel shall have the right to take minutes of the testimony in all trials before any Courts, and no rule or regulation shall restrict the convenient exercise of such right."

When this bill came down to the House for concurrence somebody exposed the "cat under the meal," whereupon it was hotly assailed. Two or three of the professional gentlemen fraternized with the lay brethren, and after a very able and somewhat humorous discussion, succeeded in murdering the bill outright by a decided majority. Scudder of Dorchester, Moses Kimball of Boston, and Holden of Salem took a prominent part in the debate.

TOWN MEETING.—Our readers are reminded that the adjourned town meeting will be held next Monday afternoon, and that business of very great importance will come before it.

HIGH SCHOOL EXHIBITION AT PEABODY HALL.

We have had the opportunity to witness rehearsals of some of the performances which are to take place on Tuesday evening next, at the Institute, and we can assure our readers that it will prove one of the most delightful entertainments which has ever been witnessed in that hall. We mean to speak strongly, but have no fears that we shall overstate the merits and attractiveness of the programme of this Exhibition. It is full of variety, and is excellently well calculated to meet the public taste. The entertainment will include the performance of some dialogues and dramatic pieces, well fitted to draw out the oratorical talent of the scholars, and some of them will cause great side-shaking laughter with the visitors. There will also be exercises in physical culture after the mode of Dr. Lewis, and the picturesque bloomer costumes will add much to the effect of these performances.

Besides all this, there will be music and an original charade, acted in four scenes,—the three syllables, and then the whole word. This will be a good exercise for those of the audience who are skilled in guessing. There will also be some good tableaux, which is a very favorite kind of representation among us.

The teacher and pupils of the school get up this popular entertainment for the commendable object of furnishing and adorning their school room, preferring this mode to that of calling upon the town to do it. It will, in no sense, be a school examination, but it will incidentally exhibit something of their acquirements in the art of elocution, which is one of the branches taught in the school.

For such an exhibition it will be necessary to occupy the whole of the platform of the Institute, which will be curtained the whole length. This will somewhat diminish the room for the audience, and the number of tickets must be limited to the actual number of seats on the floor. We therefore give our friends timely caution not to delay too long the purchase of their ticket.

We conclude as we began, by assuring our friends that whatever pleasurable anticipations they may indulge with in regard to this entertainment, will be fully realized on Tuesday evening next.

AGRICULTURE.—Without laying any claim to the gift of prophesy, we venture the opinion, and now put it on record to be referred to in the future if right, but not to be mentioned if wrong, that all kinds of agricultural products will command a higher price next Winter than they ever have before since the Revolutionary war. If farmers are wise, they will make extra effort to raise large crops—but many of them will not be wise, and the supply will not equal the demand. So, farmers, put in the seed. Begin early, work hard, and may God bless your labors with a golden harvest.

ESSEX RAILROAD.—Although not particularly skilled in the mysteries of railroading, we surmise that the Eastern Railroad Company are making the Essex Railroad a profitable auxiliary to their own. We notice that their freight trains are very long and very heavily loaded. We learn that they are able to compete successfully with the Boston & Maine Road in transporting freight from Boston to Lawrence by way of Salem—carrying in this way some twenty tons per day. Last year they transported by this route 5,000 tons of coal from Boston to Lawrence, for the Pacific Mills.

POLITICS.—Mr. Chase has written a letter declining the use of his name as a candidate for the Presidency.

Gen. Fremont seems to be earnestly determined to contest the nomination with Lincoln. This is all well enough, if both parties are willing to abide the decision of the National Union Convention.

Gen. McClellan has the inside track for the Democratic nomination; but the result of the New Hampshire election may compel them to change front again.

HORSE RAILROAD.—The hearing before the Legislative Committee upon the subject of a horse railroad from South Danvers to Lynn, was concluded last Friday. The Committee have not yet reported. One thing we think is quite certain in regard to this matter, and that is that the Legislature will authorize somebody to build this road, and we wish it were equally certain that the road will be built this year.

GARDENS.—Those laboring persons who have a leisure hour or two every day, or a leisure day or two every month, and have a taste for tilling the earth, are referred to the notice of Mr. Bancroft in our advertising columns, from which they will learn that a plenty of good garden lots can be hired cheap for the coming season.

DANVERS.—The Annual Re-Union of the Holton High School Association will take place this Wednesday evening, March 16, 1864, at Town Hall, Danvers. Music by Upton & Parsons' Band. Admission: Gents 50 cents, ladies 25 cents.

THE OLD TEMPERANCE PLEDGE.

MR. EDITOR,—It is an old saying, that "it takes all kind of people to make a world," and I think that the saying will apply to Temperance Societies also, if I may be allowed to judge by the "Old Roll of Honor" referred to in your paper some weeks since. I think that, in a careful survey of that "roll," we shall find among those five hundred names—

Authors, Agents, Autocrats and Atheists;

Bakers, Barbers, Butchers and Brewers;

Christians, Carpenters, Creditors and Croakers;

Deacons, Doctors, Debtors and Drunkards;

Editors, Engravers, Engineers and Epicures;

Farmers, Foreigners, Fatalists and Fiddlers;

Generals, Grocers, Geologists and Grumblers;

Historians, Horticulturists, Hangmen and Heathens;

Inventors, Imitators, Infidels and Idlers;

Journeymen, Jurors, Jesuits and Jugglers;

Kings, Keepers, Knaves and Kidnappers;

Laymen, Lawyers, Loafers and Liars;

Ministers, Merchants, Musicians and Misers;

Natives, Narrators, Neogamists and Nabobs;

Observers, Oddfellows, Officers and Oblocutors;

Prophets, Poets, Pilgrims and Perjurors;

Quakers, Quoters, Quizzers and Quacks;

Reasoners, Ramblers, Railers and Rascals;

Soldiers, Seamen, Spiritualists and Swearers;

Teetotalers, Tax-gatherers, Taxidermists and Tipplers;

Unionists, Upholsterers, Undertakers and Unbelievers;

Vendors, Veterans, Vagabonds and Villains;

Worshippers, Workers, Wonderers and Weather-cocks;

Xanthous, Yeomen, Yonkers and Zealots; and many more, too numerous to mention. EARNEST.

SAINT PATRICK.—This patron Irish saint, whose natal day will be celebrated with so much pomp and display Thursday, according to an old legendary history, had certainly an eventful boyhood. The actual place of his birth is not known, Scotland, England, France, and Wales each furnish their respective pretensions; but whatever doubts may obscure his birthplace, all agree in stating, as his name implies, that he was of a patrician family. He was born about the year 372, and when only sixteen years of age was carried off by pirates, who sold him into slavery in Ireland, where his master employed him as swineherd on the well known mountain of Sleamish, in the county of Antrim. Here he spent seven years, becoming familiar with the language, manners, and customs of the people. Escaping to the Continent, he was ordained deacon, priest, and bishop, and then returned to Ireland to preach to its then heathen inhabitants. The veneration in which his name is now held shows with what effect he accomplished his mission. As to the legends of miracles performed in relation to the vermin, some may be skeptical; but that he performed the miracle of driving out the heathen Druidical priests, and establishing a new religion is a matter of history which makes his name one worthy of honor, whatever of error still remained in his creed.—Woburn Townsman.

A PLEASANT SURPRISE.—We omitted last week, unintentionally, a notice of a most pleasant surprise to our fellow townsman, Mr. PAUL HILDRETH, which happened the week before. It was an intrusion upon his solitude by a large party of his old Beverly townsmen, who brought their welcome with them in the shape of an elegant Ice Pitcher, which was forced upon his acceptance, after which a splendid repast was given him by the party, in Simonds' best style of catering.

This incident is only one indication how much Mr. Hildreth was esteemed in Beverly, and if that town has any more such families disposed to emigrate, South Danvers will be very glad to receive them.

PLEURO-PNEUMONIA.—This disease is not yet entirely extirpated from our State, notwithstanding the vigorous means adopted against it. It still exists in three or four different towns. Some thirty or forty cattle are said to be affected by it in Lexington. The Legislature are about to appropriate $20,000 for the purpose of enforcing the present law upon the subject.

☞ Rev. I. S. Kallock, formerly of Boston, who has had a successful pastorate in New York for several years, has resigned and again gone to Boston.

School Examinations.

The examinations of the Schools are proceeding this week and awaken much interest with the parents as well as the pupils. There has been a large attendance of visitors thus far who have seemed much interested in the exercises. The following schools remain to be examined:

This day, the 16th, 9 to 11 A. M., Miss Potter—Mr. Merrill.
This day, the 16th, 11 to 12 and P. M., Miss Davis—Mr. Merrill.
Thursday, 17th, Mr. Upton—Messrs. Stimpson, Merrill, Barrows.
Friday, 18th, High School—whole Committee.
Saturday, 19th, 9 to 11, A. M., Miss Barnes—Mr. Merrill.
Saturday, 19th, 9 to 11, A. M., Miss Phillips—Mr. McKensie.
Saturday, 19th, 11 to 12 A. M., and P. M., Mr Martin—Messrs. Stimpson, Merrill.
Monday, 21st, P. M., Miss Welch—Mes. Poole, Barrows.
Thursday, 31st inst., P. M., Miss Felton—Mr. Stimpson.
Miss Skinner—not assigned.

GENERAL BUTLER IN ENGLAND.—The London Spectator concludes a review of Parton's Life of Butler as follows:

"This biography leaves on our minds no doubt that the Union possesses in Gen. Butler a man of rare and original capacity, extraordinarily fitted for constructive administration, and without any tendency to cruelty, though with that indifference to the feelings of others so often marked in very strong men. Of all the men who fill our European History the one he is most like—strangely like—is Frederick the Great."

☞ It is said that in Yokohama, Japan, English, French and German soldiers are to be met with at almost every street corner. A large fleet of vessels of almost every flag lies in the harbor. The war with powers joined to the Japanese by treaty, would result in giving foreigners increased access, and thus promote the interests of commerce.

☞ As a proof of the alarm of the people of Richmond, we see that rather than have the Union prisoners liberated by our raiders, the rebels have agreed to exchange with "Butler the Beast."—They can't tell which of Ben's eyes has got the range of them, but feel pretty certain that one of them has, and so, like Crocket's coon, they have come down.—Woburn Townsman.

ADVANTAGES OF A JACKET OF FAT.—It is said that none but the lean cows sheep, hogs, and chickens froze to death in the recent cold snap out West. Some of our farmers may take a profitable hint from this. Give your cattle a good jacket of fat, and they will come out strong and bright for the spring's work.

☞ The Portsmouth Chronicle gives the following result of advertising: "A gentleman in this city loaned a valise to a friend, but forgot afterward to whom; he advertised it and it was returned with satisfactory reasons for being kept so long; he also received another valise lent three years before."

☞ The War Department has directed that the forts at Salem shall be called Forts Glover and Conant. The first mentioned fort is named in honor of Gen. John Glover, of Marblehead, and the last in honor of Roger Conant, the founder of the first plantation in Massachusetts Bay.

☞ The Essex County Teachers Association is to be held at Rockport on Friday and Saturday after the annual Fast. Henry K. Oliver of Salem, Rev. Mr. Bardon of Rockport, Rev. Mr. Colthrop of Marblehead, and Rev. Mr. Owen of Lynn are to lecture.

☞ It has been thought that people are degenerating because they do not live so long as they did in the days of Methuselah; but the fact is, that provisions are so high that no one can afford to live long at current prices.

☞ By a recent decision of the War Department at Washington, all persons in the Navy are to be credited to the towns and cities in which they are enrolled.

☞ The people of Denmark, who are now fighting the Prussians, occupy the cradle of the Anglo-Saxon race, and Denmark has been called "not our mother but our grandmother country."

☞ Rockport has appropriated five thousand dollars to purchase a steam fire engine.

☞ The work of rebuilding the burned district in Gloucester is progressing.

☞ A telegraph has been established between Salem and Beverly.

THE CHESS CLUB.

MR. EDITOR,— One of your correspondents asks what has become of the Chess Club or its effects. I, for one, would like very well to know, and I am glad he has asked the question. All I know about it is that it has been found very hard to get a meeting of the club, from a trembling fear, on the part of members, that an assessment would be ordered. Perhaps if there could be the announcement of a dividend, a quorum could be obtained. As to the property, some of the members are known to be in possession of parts of it, in trust, for the benefit of the concern. I would respectfully propose that these members be put in check, and that the lawyers of the club issue search warrants for the recovery of the property. The only difficulty would then be to get it out of the hands of the lawyers.

What do you think of that, my cat?
What do you think of that, my dog?

MR. WIZARD,—It ought to be a matter of rejoicing that "Public Justice" is at last roused from the profound sleep in which it has been so long indulging. It is to be hoped that it is not a mere spasmodic action, but that it is fairly awake, and will remain so.

For the information of "P. J.," after his Rip Van Winkle nap, let me say, that the Agricultural Library Association have held their annual meetings for the choice of officers at the proper times, after due notice given, in accordance with the By-Laws of the association, and if he has not known of the meetings, it is nobody's fault but his own. If he had not been in so deep a slumber, he would undoubtedly have seen the notice for the meetings.

If the association has failed in any degree of its usefulness, it is owing to just such members as "P. J." who do not feel interest enough in the matter to know when the annual meetings occur, or knowing, neglects to attend them.—The property of the association might have been "confiscated," and "P. J." have been none the wiser, but I am happy to inform him that it has been well taken care of, and is in good condition so that if he must take another nap, he need not be troubled with dreams of confiscation. GREAT REVIVAL IN SPRINGFIELD.—We learn by a letter from Springfield that a deep and extended religious interest prevails there. About two weeks since Rev. Mr. Earle began a series of meetings in the Baptist church, preaching twice each day for fifteen days. The people seemed prepared for such an effort and the work commenced with great power, and already it is believed that over two hundred have been converted. The meetings are very still and quiet, yet sometimes three hundred will request prayer at a time. Sunday was the most interesting day of the meetings. The number that could not get into the church was so great that Mr. Earle preached in the evening in the City Hall to at least two thousand persons, and a large number were unable to gain admittance. It was believed that three hundred requested prayer in the hall at the close of the meeting, nearly one-third of them being men. Mr. Earle will continue his labor through the present week, and great results are expected, as the work is progressing in nearly all the Evangelical churches.

☞ The New Hampshire Democrats account for their miscount on the election in that State in not knowing who belonged to the Union Leagues. In all parts of the State men whom they deemed most reliable for them, turned up on the other side when it came to voting. They would find it so all over the country, if a national election should be had to-day. They are out of their reckoning, and will make but little headway before they come to a halt, strike a light, and consult their maps for a new departure.—Newburyport Herald.

☞ The national debt of Great Britain is $400,000,000 which in gold would weigh 6,578 tons, and in silver 98,670 tons. According to estimates, if you would load this silver into wagons, drawn by single horses, putting a thousand pounds into each wagon, 197,340 wagons will be required. Stretch these wagons into a line, 88 feet apart, you will have a train 3,300 miles long.

Special Notices.

Hunnewell's Great Remedies.

WHAT EVERY FAMILY SHOULD HAVE IN THE HOUSE AND WHY;

☞ They should have HUNNEWELL'S UNIVERSAL COUGH REMEDY, because it effectually cures Colds, Whooping and Common Coughs, Sore Throat, Hoarseness, and is the most simple and perfect Soothing Syrup in the world. For old and young, by day and night, it may be used with the greatest freedom, and three-fourths of the deaths by Consumption stopped.

They should have HUNNEWELL'S TOLU ANODYNE, because it is a perfect remedy for Neuralgia, Nervous or Sick Headache, Tooth, and Earache, Pain in Stomach, or Bowels, Genuine Cholera Morbus, Rheumatism, Distress after Eating, Nervousness, Hysteria, and the chief of all causes of disease, and Insanity, Loss of Sleep. Its character, though active, is simple; its action in perfect conformity to nature; its end cure, or relief.

For the pains in Monthly Menstruation a perfect relief, while nature's after work is not disturbed, and one of the most important points in Medicine.

They should have HUNNEWELL'S ECLECTIC PILLS, because with seldom but a single Pill for a dose all derangements of the Stomach and Bowels are cured. They cure Indigestion, Dyspepsia, Headache, when caused by foul stomach, Loss of Appetite, Biliousness, so often and so erroneously treated with Mercurials, Jaundice. For Worms a sure cure.

They act simple, assist nature, do not make a Pill Box of the stomach, as is the most fatal error of taking so many Pills at a dose and then, what is important to every Family and every Purse, one bottle goes as far as two or three of what is ordinarily sold.

The confidence of all is asked to test

BELL'S SPECIFIC PILLS—WARRANTED IN ALL CASES.—Can be relied on! Never fail to cure! Do not nauseate! Are speedy in action! No change of diet required! Do not interfere with business pursuits! Can be used without detection! Upward of 200 cures the past month—some of them very severe cases. Over one hundred physicians have used them in their practice, and all speak well of their efficacy, and approve of their composition, which is entirely vegetable and harmless on the system. Hundreds of certificates can be shown.

BELL'S SPECIFIC PILLS are the original and only genuine Specific Pill. They are adapted for male and female, old or young, and the only reliable remedy for effecting a permanent and speedy cure in all cases of Spermatorrhea, or Seminal Weakness, with all its train of evils, such as Urethral and Vaginal Discharges, Gleet, the Whites, Nightly or Involuntary Emissions, Incontinence, Genital Debility and Irritability, Impotence, Weakness or Loss of Power, Nervous Debility, &c., &c., all of which arise principally from Sexual Excesses or Self-Abuse, or some constitutional derangement, and incapacitates the sufferer from fulfilling the duties of married life. In all sexual diseases, as Gonorrhea, Gleet, and Strictures, and in Diseases of the Bladder and Kidneys, they act as a charm! Relief is experienced by taking a single box. Sold by all the principal druggists. Price $1.

They will be sent by mail, securely sealed, and confidentially, on receipt of the money, by

J BRYAN, M. D,
No. 76 Cedar street, New York,

Consulting Physician for the treatment of Seminal, Urinary, Sexual, and Nervous Diseases, who will send, free to all, the following valuable work, in sealed envelope:

THE FIFTIETH THOUSAND.—DR. BELL'S TREATISE on Self-Abuse, Premature Decay, Impotence and Loss of Power, Sexual Diseases, Seminal Weakness, Nightly Emissions, Genital Debility, &c., &c., a pamphlet of 64 pages, containing important advice to the afflicted, and which should be read by every sufferer, as the means of cure in the severest stages is plainly set forth. Two stamps required to pay postage. December 9, 1863—1 yr.

IMPORTANT TO LADIES.—DR. HARVEY'S FEMALE PILLS have never yet failed in removing difficulties arising from obstruction, or stoppage of nature, or in restoring the system to perfect health when suffering from Spinal Affections, Prolapsus, Uteri, the Whites, or other weakness of the Uterine Organs. The Pills are perfectly harmless on the constitution, and may be taken by the most delicate female without causing distress—the same time they act like a charm by strengthening, invigorating and restoring the system to a healthy condition, and by bringing on the monthly period with regularity, no matter from what causes the obstruction may arise. They should, however, NOT be taken during the first three or four months of pregnancy, though safe at any other time, as miscarriage would be the result.

Each box contains 60 Pills. Price $1.

DR. HARVEY'S TREATISE on Diseases of Females, Pregnancy, Miscarriage, Barrenness, Sterility, Reproduction, and Abuses of Nature, and emphatically the Ladies' Private Medical Adviser, a pamphlet of 64 pages, sent free to any address. Six cents required to pay postage.

The Pills and book will be sent by mail when desired, securely sealed, and prepaid, by

J. BRYAN, M. D, General Agent,
No. 76 Cedar street, New York.

☞ Sold by all the principal druggists.

HUMAN MISERY.

Just Published, in a Sealed Envelope. Price 6 cents.

A Lecture on the Nature, Treatment & Radical

Cure of Seminal Weakness, or Spermatorrhœa, induced by Self-Abuse; Involuntary Emissions, Impotency, Nervous Debility, and Impediments to Marriage generally; Consumption, Epilepsy, and Fits; Mental and Physical Incapacity, &c.—By ROB. J. CULVERWELL, M. D., Author of "The Green Book," &c.

The world-renowned author, in this admirable Lecture, clearly proves from his own experience that the awful consequences of Self-Abuse may be effectually removed without medicine, and without dangerous surgical operations, bougies, instruments, rings or cordials, pointing out a mode of cure at once certain and effectual, by which every sufferer, no matter what his condition may be, may cure himself cheaply, privately, and radically. This lecture will prove a boon to thousands and thousands.

Sent under seal, in a plain envelope, to any address, on receipt of six cents, or two postage stamps, by addressing the publishers,

HOSTETTER'S
CELEBRATED
STOMACH BITTERS.

A pure and powerful Tonic, corrective and alterative of wonderful efficacy in disease of the

Stomach, Liver and Bowels.

Cures Dyspepsia, Liver Complaint, Headache, Debility, Nervousness, Depression of Spirits, Constipation, Colic, Intermittent Fevers, Cramps and Spasms, and all Complaints of either Sex, arising from Bodily Weakness whether inherent in the system or produced by special causes.

Nothing that is not wholesome, genial and restorative in its nature enters into the composition of HOSTETTER'S STOMACH BITTERS. This popular preparation contains no mineral of any kind, no deadly botanical element; no fiery excitant: but it is a combination of the extracts of rare balsamic herbs and plants with the purest and mildest of all diffusive stimulants.

It is well to be forearmed against disease, and, so far as the human system can be protected by human means against maladies engendered by an unwholesome atmosphere, impure water and other external causes, HOSTETTER'S BITTERS may be relied on as a safeguard.

In districts infested with Fever and Ague, it has been found infallible as a preventive and irresistible as a remedy and thousands who resort to it under apprehension of an attack, escape the scourage; and thousands who neglect to avail themselves of its protective qualities in advance, are cured by a very brief course of this marvelous medicine. Fever and Ague patients, after being plied with quinine for months in vain, until fairly saturated with that dangerous alkaloid, are not unfrequently restored to health within a few days by the use of HOSTETTER'S BITTERS.

The weak stomach is rapidly invigorated and the appetite restored by this agreeable Tonic, and hence it works wonders in cases of DISPEPSIA and in less confirmed forms of INDIGESTION. Acting as a gentle and painless apperient, as well as upon the liver, it also invariably relieves the CONSTIPATION superinduced by irregular action of the digestive and secretive organs.

Persons of feeble habit, liable to Nervous Attacks, Lowness of Spirits and Fits of Languor, find prompt and permanent relief from the Bitters. The testimony on this point is most conclusive, and from both sexes.

The agony of BILIOUS COLIC is immediately assuaged by a single dose of the stimulant, and by occasionally resorting to it, the return of the complaint may be prevented.

As a General Tonic, HOSTETTER'S BITTERS produce effects which must be experienced or witnessed before they can be fully appreciated. In cases of Constitutional Weakness, Premature Decay and Debility and Decrepitude arising from OLD AGE, it exercises the electric influence. In the convalescent stages of all diseases it operates as a delightful invigorant. When the powers of nature are relaxed, it operates to re-enforce and re-establish them.

Last, but not least, it is The Only Safe Stimulant, being manufactured from sound and innocuous materials, and entirely free from the acid elements present more or less in all the ordinary tonics and stomachics of the day.

No family medicine has been so universally, and, it may be truly added, deservedly popular with the intelligent portion of the community, as HOSTETTER'S BITTERS.

HELMBOLD'S
GENUINE PREPARATIONS.

COMPOUND FLUID EXTRACT BUCHU, a Positive and Specific Remedy for diseases of the Bladder, Kidneys, Gravel, and Dropsical Swellings.

This Medicine increases the power of Digestion, and excite the Absorbents into healthy action, by which the Wtaery or Calcareous depositions, and all Unnatural Enlargements are reduced, as well as Pain and Inflammation.

—:0:—

HELMBOLD'S EXTRACT BUCHU.

For Weaknesses arising from Excesses, Habits of Dissipation, Early Indiscretion of Abuse, attended with the following symptoms:—

Indisposition to Exertion,	Loss of Power,
Loss of Memory,	Difficulty of Breathing,
Weak Nerves,	Trembling,
Horror of Disease,	Wakefulness,
Dimness of Vision,	Pain in the Back,
Universal Lassitude of the Muscular System,
Hot Hands,	Flushing of the Body,
Dryness of the Skin,	Eruptions on the Face,
Pallid Countenance.

These symptoms, if allowed to go on, which this medicine invariably removes, soon follows

Impotency, Fatuity, Epileptic Fits,

In one of which the patient may expire.

Who can say that they are not frequently followed by those "Direful Diseases,"

"INSANITY AND CONSUMPTION."

Many are aware of the cause of their suffering, BUT NONE WILL CONFESS THE RECORDS OF THE INSANE ASYLUMS.

And Melancholy Deaths by Consumption bear ample witness to the Truth of the assertion.

The Constitution once effected with Organic Weakness requires the aid of Medicine to Strengthen and Invigorate the system,

Which HELMBOLD'S EXTRACT BUCHU invariably does. A Trial will convince the mast skeptical.

—:0:—

FEMALES—FEMALES—FEMALES.

In many Affections peculiar to Females the EXTRACT BUCHU is unequalled by any other remedy, as in Chlorosis or Retention, Irregularity, Painfulness, or Suppression of Customary Evacuations, Ulcerated Scirrhous state of the Uterus, Leuchorrhœa or Whites, Sterility, and for all complaints incident to the sex, whether arising from indiscretion or Habits of Dissipation, or in the

DECLINE OR CHANGE OF LIFE.

—:0:—

Take no more Balsam, Mercury, or unpleasant Medicines for unpleasant and dangerous diseases.

HELMBOLD'S EXTRACT BUCHU AND IMPROVED ROSE WASH CURES

SECRET DISEASES

In all their Stages,	At little Expense.
Little or no change in Diet.	No inconvenience.
	And no Exposure.

It causes a frequent desire and gives strength to Urinate, thereby Removing Obsructions, Preventing and Curing Strictures of the Urethra, allaying Pain and Inflammation, so frequent in this class of diseases, and expelling all Poisonous, Diseased and wornout Matter.

Thousands upon Thousands who have been the Victims of Quacks, and who have paid heavy fees to be cured in a short time, have found they were deceived, and that the "POISON" has, by the use of "Powerful Astringents," been dried up in the system, to break out in an aggravated form, and perhaps after Marriage.

Use HELMBOLD'S EXTRACT BUCHU for all affections and diseases of the URINARY ORGANS, whether existing in MALE or FEMALE, from whatever cause originating and no matter of HOW LONG STANDING.

Diseases of these Organs requires the aid of a DIURETIC. HELMBOLD'S EXTRACT BUCHU IS THE GREAT DIURETIC, and is certain, to have the desired effect in all Diseases for which it is Recommended.

Evidence of the most reliable and responsible character will accompany the medicine.

STURGIS'S
ELECTRIC COMPOUND!
AN EFFECTUAL CURE FOR
NEURALGIA AND RHEUMATISM.

Also, invaluable for Spinal Irritation, Hip Complaints, Ague in the Face, Tooth Ache, Pain in the Side, Back, Limbs, Ear Ache, Lumbago, &c.

The proprietor, in offering this medicine to the public, desires to state that this preparation does not belong to the class called patent medicines. Its value has been tested for many years, and it has been found fully adequate to the removal of many obstinate cases of the above complaints, which other celebrated remedies had failed to reach, and which had baffled the skill of eminent physicians. The proprietor does not claim that it will cure but one class of disease. All persons who are afflicted with any of these complaints are earnestly requested to try this Compound and judge for themselves.

AMONG THE ADVANTAGES OF THIS MEDICINE ARE THE FOLLOWING:

Its effect is very rapid—in most cases instantaneous.

It is external in its application, and the patient runs no risk in using it. It does not strike to the stomach.

It reaches the nerves and muscles, as it is believed no other medicine does.

It has cured some of the most violent and obstinate cases of Neuralgia ever known.

It can be used on a child or on an aged person alike.

While it is very powerful, it is perfectly harmless.

The proprietor has been allowed to publish the names of many persons who have used the Compound with the most beneficial results. He inserts here a few of them. They are among the most respectable citizens of Boston, and their residences and places are given:

And many others.

The proprietor is permitted to publish the following letter from O. C. Pitkin, Esq., Principal of the High School in the city of Chelsea, and well known as one of the most successful teachers in New England:

CHELSEA, April 30, 1863.

FRIEND WILLIAMS:—Yours of the 26th is received. My wife was troubled with severe Neuralgia in the face. She tried your Compound with decidedly good effect. I think it is an excellent article, and have recommended it in one instance, where it also produced good effect. You certainly have the liberty to refer it to me.

With much respect, yours truly,
O. C. PITKIN.

THE BLACK PREACHER.

A BRETON LEGEND.

At Carnac in Brittany, close on the bay,
They show you a church, or rather the gray
Ribs of a dead one, left there to bleach
With the wreck lying near on the crest of the beach;
Roofless and splintered with thunder-stone,
'Mid lichen-blurred gravestones all alone,
'T is the kind of ruin strange sights to see
That may have their teaching for you and me.

Something like this, then, my guide had to tell,
Perched on a saint cracked across when he fell.
But since I might chance give his meaning a wrench,
He talking his patois and I English-French,
I 'll put what he told me, preserving the tone,
In a rhymed prose that makes it half his, half my own.

An abbey-church stood here, once on a time,
Built as a death-bed atonement for crime:
'T was for somebody's sins, I know not whose;
But sinners are plenty, and you can choose.
Though a cloister now of the dusk-winged bat,
'T was rich enough once, and the brothers grew fat,
Looser in girdle and purpler in jowl,
Singing good rest to the founder's lost soul.
But one day came Northmen, and lithe tongues of fire
Lapped up the chapter-house, licked off the spire,
And left all a rubbish-heap, black and dreary,
Where only the wind sings miserere.
Of what the monks came by no legend runs,
At least they were lucky in not being nuns.

No priest has kneeled since at the altar's foot,
Whose crannies are searched by the night-shade's root,
Nor sound of service is ever heard,
Except from throat of the unclean bird,
Hooting to unassoiled shapes as they pass
In midnights unholy his witches' mass,
Or shouting "Ho! ho!" from the belfry high
As the Devil's sabbath-train whirls by;
But once a year, on the eve of All-Souls,
Through these arches dishallowed the organ rolls,
Fingers long fleshless the bell-ropes work,
The chimes peal muffled with sea-mists mirk,
The skeleton windows are traced anew
On the baleful flicker of corpse-lights blue,
And the ghosts must come, so the legend saith,
To a preaching of Reverend Doctor Death.

Abbots, monks, barons, and ladies fair
Hear the dull summons and gather there:
No rustle of silk now, no clink of mail,
Nor ever a one greets his church-mate pale;
No knight whispers love in the chatelaine's ear,
His next-door neighbor this five hundred year;
No monk has a sleek benedicite
For the great lord shadowy now as he;
Nor needeth any to hold his breath,
Lest he lose the least word of Doctor Death.

He chooses his text in the Book Divine,
Tenth verse of the Preacher in chapter nine:—
"'Whatsoever thy hand shall find thee to do,
That do with thy whole might, or thou shalt rue;
For no man is wealthy or wise or brave
In that quencher of might-bes and would-bes, the grave.'
Bid by the Bridegroom, 'To-morrow,' ye said,
And To-morrow was digging a trench for your bed;
Ye said, 'God can wait; let us finish our wine;'
Ye had wearied Him, fools, and that last knock was mine!"

But I can't pretend to give you the sermon,
Or say if the tongue were French, Latin, or German;
Whatever he preached in, I give you my word
The meaning was easy to all that heard;
Famous preachers there have been and be,
But never was one so convincing as he;
So blunt was never a begging friar,
No Jesuit's tongue so barbed with fire,
Cameronian never, nor Methodist,
Wrung gall out of Scripture with such a twist.

And would you know who his hearers must be?
I tell you just what my guide told me:
Excellent teaching men have, day and night,
From two earnest friars, a black and a white,
The Dominican Death and the Carmelite Life
And between these two there is never strife,
For each has his separate office and station,
And each his own work in the congregation;
Whoso to the white brother deafens his ears,
And cannot be wrought on by blessings or tears,
Awake in his coffin must wait and wait,
In that blackness of darkness that means too late,
And come once a year, when the ghost-bell tolls,
As till Doomsday it shall on the eve of All-Souls,
To hear Doctor Death, whose words smart with the brine
Of the Preacher, the tenth verse of chapter nine.

A TOUGH STORY.—A downeaster speaks of a heavy fog in his locality. He says he hired a man to shingle a barn. At noon the man complained that it was a terribly long barn, for he had been at work all the morning and hadn't got one course laid. So after dinner he went to see what the man had been about, and found that he had shingled more than a hundred feet right out on the fog.

Selected.

NOBLE BLUSCO.

The ship swung heavily to and fro, the long yards creaking and shivering upon the masts. The wind whistled with a shrill, weird sound among the shrouds, and the shrouds bent inwards, as though unseen bands of heavy footed men were ascending them. It was a dark night, yet not so dark but that we could see the lofty icebergs by which we were surrounded, looking up like spectres through the gloom. We were tossing about on the waters of the Arctic Ocean, and subjected to a heavy sea and gale of wind, our position was a dangerous one. We had already begun to prepare rafts, and to hoist our chests on deck, expecting every moment that the ship would be stove by the ice. Heavy masses were continually crushing against the bows, and thundering under the counter, causing the vessel to shake and quiver from stem to stern, as though every timber was about to give way. At times the concussion would be so violent that all hands would be thrown off their feet, and tumble on top of each other, in a manner that was far from agreeable.

Suddenly a white face, with wild glaring eyes and quivering lips, appeared among us. It was that of the captain's wife. She had her hand upon her husband's arm, as he stood near the bow.

"Lilian! Lilian!" she gasped, "where is our Lilian?"

"Lilian? Good heavens! wife, what do you mean? I left her with you in the cabin?"

"She is not there now—I have looked in all the rooms. Oh, God! my child! my child!" and the mother wrung her hands in anguish, while her white face grew still whiter.

"Wife! wife!" exclaimed the captain, half sternly, "Lilian was with you when I left the cabin; surely you did not let her leave your side at such a time as this!"

"Yes! yes!" cried the wife, in accents of the most piercing grief. "It is all my fault—she is lost! My little Lilian is lost! and I am the cause."

"For God's sake explain yourself," gasped the captain.

"I left her down in the cabin," faltered the agonized mother, "and came on deck, as I wanted to speak to you. I thought you were in the waist, so I groped my way there and tried to find you.—Not seeing you, I started on my return, fearing to have Lilian so long alone. But when I reached the cabin again, she was not there—gone! gone! God only knows where!"

"Lilian! Lilian! Has any one seen Lilian?"

Fore and aft, from every lip, in startling accents, the cry went up amid the storm.

But the loud wind only answered with a deeper howl. The long yards still creaked upon their rusty rivets. The heavy icebergs crashed upon the bows, and timbers groaned and shook as they had done before. The silvery accents of Lilian's voice came not to our ears, and we felt as if it was hushed forever. But the wailing tones of the poor mother, and the despairing shouts of the father—both of whom could not bear to give up their child—continued long after our own voices had ceased. Then we, rough-hearted, childless men though we were—forgetting our own danger, gathered about the afflicted pair, and tried to console them. I don't think we succeeded very well, for our voices trembled a great deal, and the tears would come to our eyes, though we kept wiping them away with the cuffs of our heavy jackets. No one of us but had loved little Lilian almost as well as the parents themselves. She was but seven years of age, yet the earnest glance of her large blue eyes would go straight to our hearts and make us feel kind and good toward each other.—To utter an oath when she was near would have seemed like sacrilege. Like a lily, she had bloomed in our midst, shedding a heavenly influence about her.

Strong—oh strong is the power of innocent childhood over a sinful heart.

It was while we thus stood, clustered near the binnacle, offering what little consolation we could to the captain and his wife, that one of the ship's crew—an old tar by the name of Bill Butler—came towards us, holding a few little torn shreds of cloth in his hand.

"I found these 'ere hanging on a hook on the outside of the bulwark," said Bill in a mournful voice.

"It is a part of Lilian's dress!" shrieked the captain's wife.

The captain buried his face in his hands with a groan, and we looked at one and another in sad silence. There could no longer be any doubt about the matter.—Lilian had fallen overboard.

The few remaining hours of the night wore away. The gale subsided. Miraculously, as it seemed to us, the ship had escaped being stove; and as the sea had gone down with the gale, there was now no more danger. Overwhelmed with grief, yet feeling it his duty to try and console his wife, the captain descended into the cabin, leaving the management of the ship's affairs in the hands of the mate. Presently the steward came on deck. He wished to know if any of the hands had seen Blusco that morning.—This was the name of a large Newfoundland dog, which had been a great favorite with Lilian, and she had taken especial delight in feeding him. The dog had grown extremely fond of his young mistress, and would show his attachment in many ways peculiar to his kind. Now that the darling was lost, the captain had ordered Blusco to be brought to them—thinking that the sight of him might afford a melancholy consolation to his wife. Having searched the cabin through without being able to find the animal, the steward came on deck, as we have said, to inquire if he had been noticed by any of the hands. We all answered in the negative. None of us had seen the dog since the previous night. Thereupon the ship was ransacked fore and aft for the missing animal; and although we searched in every nook and corner, he was not to be found.

While we were all wondering what had become of him, the man at the mast head sung out that there were whales astern. The mate instantly ordered the boats to be lowered, and before we had scarcely time to divest ourselves of the idea that we were looking for the dog, we were paddling swiftly in the wake of a great bow-head. The whale made straight for a field of ice in the distance, and went down when we had got in the midst of it. We followed him almost to the spot where he had disappeared, and then lay motionless and silent, waiting for the next rising. Large masses of ice, flashing gloriously in the early rays of the sun and moulded into a thousand different shapes, surrounded our little craft on every hand, floating by with majestic slowness, and now and then crashing against each other with a force that caused some of them to be rent asunder.—Strange, beautiful, monuments are these, fashioned by the hand of nature—monuments of the frozen mariners that sleep below.

"There it goes again," said old Bill Butler, in a whisper.

"What?" asked the mate.

"That barking noise," replied Bill; "I've been hearin' it ever since we left the ship, sir."

The mate leaned upon his steering oar and listened.

"It is a seal," he said.

"Beg your pardon, sir," replied Bill; "but I never heard a seal bark like that."

"Good heaven!" exclaimed a Portugese, so loud that the mate was obliged to rap him on the head with his knuckles. "Good heaven!" he added, in a lower tone, "me tink that one dog."

"Good heaven, Mikeel, me tink 'e same," remarked another Portugese—a little fat fellow by the name of Pat Plunket,

"It does sound mightily like a dog," said the mate, as the barking became more distinct. "Perhaps it is Blusco, on the ice cake."

Turning the boat round with his steering oar, until her bows pointed in the direction of the noise the mate now ordered us to paddle ahead. We obeyed and the boat shot forward with an easy speed. The barking sounded nearer every moment, until we were quite convinced by its peculiarity that it emanated from no other throat than that of Blusco.

"But where was he!"

This was the question that now rose to our lips. We could hear him plainly, but could see nothing of him. By the sound of his bark, we should have judged that he stood on the summit of an iceberg we were then approaching, and was but a few fathoms distant. Yet, notwithstanding this, no Blusco was there visible. What could it mean! Had some mermaid charmed the dog into invisibility!

We continued to approach. The barking became much louder, and was now full of frantic joy. The iceberg—a rather large one—trembled as though under the influence of an epileptic fit. Still, there was no Blusco in sight.

Our boat struck against the iceberg.—A pair of bright eyes gleamed at us through a chink in the crystal wall—they were the eyes of Blusco! The mystery was explained. This monument of ice was hollow, forming a rude little chamber, in which the dog was snugly ensconced.

"My God! oh, heaven be praised! just look there!" exclaimed the mate, turning to Bill, and motioning him to look through the crevice, from which he had just drawn his own eyes.

Bill did as requested, and beheld a sight which filled him with as much joy as it did with amazement. Reclining in one corner of this ice-bound apartment—her long golden hair falling about her pale face, and the silken lashes veiling her beautiful eyes, he saw the unmistakable figure of little Lilian.

With a few blows of our hatchet we soon succeeded in effecting an opening in the icewall. The little girl and Blusco were taken out and placed in the boat. We laid back upon our oars with all the strength we possessed, while the mate drawing a brandy flask from his pocket, poured a few drops of the liquor down Lilian's throat. By the faint pulsations of her heart he knew that the currents of life were not yet frozen—that she had only sunk into that cold, stupid stiff kind of dose, from which there is no awakening.

The ship was reached at last. The mate ascended to the deck, and took the insensible burden that Bill passed up to him.

"Captain!" he exclaimed, as he descended the companion way, "I have brought you no whale, but something that I think will be still more acceptable."

The captain and his wife both caught sight of their child at once, and at the same moment.

"My child! my Lilian!" screamed the mother, rushing forward to clasp her in her arms. Then noticing her pale face and drooping head, she sank into a seat, overcome by her feelings, and stretched forth her arms, faintly murmuring:

"Dead! dead! she is dead! Give me my poor little dead girl!"

"No—no! she is not dead!" replied the mate. "If the proper measures can be taken, she can be restored in a few moments." So saying, he laid her upon the bed, and assisted the anxious father in his efforts to restore the circulation of her blood.

In a few moments they had the satisfaction of seeing Lilian open her blue eyes, and of hearing her speak the word "mother." The next instant she was pressed to the latter's bosom and covered with tears and kisses. This probably helped nearly as much as the other operations had done to restore the circulation of blood, for there was now a deep carnation tint upon her cheek and lips.

The excitement having in some degree subsided, explanation followed.

Lilian stated that after her mother had left her to go on deck, she thought she would go up to get a little peep over the rail at the icebergs. This idea had no sooner entered her head than she carried it into execution. In leaning too far over the rail, however—the ship happened to give a lurch at the same time—she lost her balance and was precipitated into the waters. On rising to the surface she felt herself seized by the neck of the dress and the next moment was dragged safely on to a large cake of ice. Then she perceived that her deliverer was noble Blusco. She felt terribly frightened, and clung close to the dog. She remembered that they were half shut in by three walls of ice, which partly prevented the waves from dashing in upon them. Suddenly the cake upon which they were standing came in contact with another one which towered up like a lofty column. When the concussion took place this lofty mass tottered over, and fell upon the three walls of ice (by which the little girl and her dog were encompassed) in such a curious manner as to completely close them up, as though they were in prison. In this position she remained a long time praying and hugging the dog by turns, until at last feeling cold and benumbed, she began to grow drowsy, and fell into a doze.

Had her rescue from this situation been delayed a few minutes longer, we would never in all probability had succeeded in bringing her to life. As it was a long time elapsed ere the natural freedom of circulation could be restored to one of her arms.

Many were the praises lavished on Blusco for his noble conduct, and although he shakes his head and turns up his broad nose when any person speaks to him about it, as much as to say "pshaw, it's nothing"—still we believe that in his heart he is proud of his exploit.

OBEYING ORDERS.

The 'oldest inhabitant' perfectly remembers the Widow Trotter, who used, many years ago, to occupy a small wooden house, away down in Hanover street, in somewhat close proximity to Salutation Alley. Well, this widow was blessed with a son, who, like Goldsmith and many other men distinguished in after life, was the dunce of his class. Numerous were the floggings which his stupidity brought upon him, and the road to knowledge was to him truly a 'vale of tears.'

One day he came home, as usual, with red eyes and hands.

'O, you blockhead!' screamed his mother—she was a bit of virago, Mrs. Trotter was—'you've been gettin' another lickin', I know.'

'O, yes,' replied younger Mr. Trotter; 'that's one of the regular exercises, lickin' me. 'Arter I've licked Trotter,' says the master, 'I'll hear the 'rithmetic class.' But, mother, to change the subject, as the criminal said when he found the judge getting personal, is there any arrant I can do for you?'

'Yes,' grumbled the widow; 'only you are so eternal slow about anything you undertake. Go get a pitcher of water; and be four years about it, will ye?"

Bob Trotter took the pitcher and wended his way in the direction of the street pump; but he hadn't got far when he encountered his friend Joe Buffer, the mate of a vessel, issuing from his house, and dragging a heavy sea chest along after him.

'Come, Bob,' said Joe, 'bear a hand, and help me down to Long Wharf with this.'

'Well, so I would,' said Bob, 'only mother sent me after a pitcher of water.'

'What do you care for your mother? She don't care for you. Come along.'

'Well,' said Bob, 'first let me hide this pitcher where I can find it agin.'

With these words, he stowed away his earthen ware under a flight of stone steps, and accompanied his friend aboard the ship. The pilot was urging the captain to cast off and take advantage of the wind and tide, but the captain was waiting the arrival of a boy he had shipped the day before, and wishing no good to his eyes for the delay he had occasioned. At last he turned to Bob and said—

'What do you say, youngster, to shipping with me? I'll treat you well, and give you ten dollars a month.'

'I should like to go,' said Bob, hesitatingly, 'but my mother—'

'Hang your mother!' said the captain. 'She'll be glad to get rid of you. Come, will you go?'

'I hain't got no clothes.'

'Here's a chest full. The other chap was just your size, and they'll fit you to a T.'

'I'll go.'

'Cast off that line there!' shouted the captain; and the ship fell off with the tide, and was soon standing down the bay with a fair wind and every stitch of canvas set. She was bound for the Northwest, via Canton, and back again, which was then called the double voyage, and usually occupied four years.

In the meanwhile, the non-appearance of Bob seriously alarmed his mother. A night passed, and the town crier was called into requisition; a week, when she gave him up, had a note read for him in church, and went into mourning.

Just four years after the occurrence, the ship got back to port, and Bob and his friend were paid off. The wages of the widow's son amounted to just four hundred and eighty dollars; and he found, on squaring his accounts with the captain, that his advances had amounted to the odd tens, and four hundred dollars clear were the fruits of his long cruise.

As he walked in the direction of his mother's house, in company with Joe, he scanned, with a curious eye, the houses, the shops, and the people, that he passed. Nothing appeared changed. The same sign indicated an unchanging hospitality on the part of the same landlord; the same lumpers were standing at the same corners—it seemed as if he had been gone only a day. With the old sights and sounds, Bob's old feelings revived; and he almost dreaded to see, debouching from some alley, a detachment of boys, sent by his ancient enemy, the schoolmaster, to know why he had played truant, and to carry him to receive the customary walloping.

When he was near home, he said—

'Joe, I wonder if anybody's found that old pitcher?'

He stooped down, thrust his arm under the stone steps, and withdrew the identical piece of earthen-ware he had deposited there four years ago. Having rinsed and filled it at the pump, he walked into his mother's house, and found her seated in her accustomed arm-chair. She looked at him for a moment, recognized him, screamed, and exclaimed—

'Why, Bob! where have you been? What have you been doing?"

'Gettin' that pitcher of water,' answered Bob, setting it on the table. 'I always obey orders. You told me to be four years about it, and I was.'

PHOSPHORUS.—It is now just two hundred years since phosphorus was first obtained by Brand, of Hamburg. So wonderful was the discovery then considered, that Krapt, an eminent philosopher of the day, gave Brand three hundred dollars for the secret of its preparation. Krapt then traveled and visited nearly all the courts of Europe, exhibiting phosphorus to kings and nobles. In appearance the article resembles beeswax, but it is more transparent, approaching to the color of amber. Its name, which is derived from the Greek, signifies "light bearer," and is indicative of its most distinguished quality, being self-luminous. When exposed to the air it shines like a star, giving out a beautiful lambent greenish light. Phosphorus dissolves in warm sweet oil; and if this phosphorized oil be rubbed over the face in the dark the features assume a ghastly appearance. The origin of phosphorus is the most singular fact concerning it. Every other known substance is traced to either earth or air, but phosphorus seems to be of animal origin. Of all animals, man contains the most; and of the various parts of the body, the brain yields, by analysis, more phosphorus than any other.

WHO WAS PETER?—There are few positions of more delicacy than in interrogating Sunday schools, especially young scholars. This is shown by the experience of a clergyman who was opposed to having any mirth in Sunday schools. He thought it injurious to all and unnecessary to the entertainment of the children. He offered to address the school and show how they could be well entertained seriously. The following dialogue ensued: "Children, I am going to tell you about Peter. Who knows who Peter was?" No answer. "Cannot any one—those large girls—tell me who Peter was?" "I can," said a little fellow over in the corner. "Ah, that's a good boy. Now you come up on the platform by my side, and stand up in this chair and tell those girls who Peter was." Jimmy did as he was bid, and in the shrill voice of childhood repeated, "Peter, Peter, was a pumpkin eater, had a wife and couldn't keep her.". At this point he was requested to stop, but not before the full point was taken by the school, and Mother Goose's poem appreciated.

The Wizard.

WEDNESDAY, MARCH 30, 1864.

MOOT COURT.—We have received an interesting account of a mock trial held the other evening in Gothic Hall, Danvers—but too late for publication in this issue. We hear from other quarters that the entertainment was highly relished by a large audience.

HIGH SCHOOL EXHIBITION.

Peabody Hall was filled to overflowing on Tuesday evening of last week, to witness the exercises of the pupils of the High School. All the parts of the programme were carried out with great success and to the immense delight of the audience No greater evidence could be afforded of this, than the fact that the people listened with almost unabated interest from half past seven to nearly half past eleven o'clock. Indeed the only fault we have heard expressed was the great length of the exercises, and that the ticket-holders received too much for their money. There was amply sufficient in the programme for two representations.

We have neither time nor room to give a detailed account of the several exercises, but we may say that they were all quite creditable to those who took part in them. The tableaux were very fine, that of the "Flower of the Family" being a pleasant surprise, when the beautiful young girl appeared as the contents of the family flour barrel. A repetition of this was demanded by the audience. "Night and Morning" were superbly represented and much admired, as was also the picture of the "Fortune Teller." The New York Pat-riot was also well received. The several dialogues were well spoken, and the characters represented properly personated. The Town Meeting scene was exquisitely natural and comical and conveyed a good lesson. The "William Tell" piece was capitally performed and showed the oratorical powers of the pupils to great advantage, and their proper conception of the intent of the author. In the dialogues of "Curiosity" and the "Tea Party" a fine opportunity was given for versatility of talent on the part of the young ladies, and it was exhibited to good advantage in these pieces, from the lady of the house to the Irish girls. All performed well, and we mean not to be invidious when we name Mrs. Dulse (the deaf woman,) Mrs. Drawl and Miss Fidget, as among the more prominent.

The series of Gymnastics found great favor with the audience, and when the curtain rose on the first representation, it seemed a magnificent tableau, so variegated was the costume of the figures.

The remaining exercises were declamation, singing and reading, which were all of an interesting character. Of the reading we can speak in almost unqualified praise, although its merits may have been somewhat shaded by the more showy parts of the programme. We have heard Miss Evans, the much lauded temperance oratress from Wales, who is the senior in age of these pupils, but we can truly say that, in our humble opinion, she has much to improve before she can fairly become their equal.

The exercises of the evening closed by the whole audience joining in a beautiful Parting Hymn to the tune of Old Lang Syne.

Thus ended one of the most interesting and delightful entertainments which have been witnessed here, its primary object being a most commendable one. We cannot but regard it also as of especial benefit as a means of education. There is something more in this word than mere bookish attainments, and we look upon the few days of preparation as the most improving ones of all the term. It has been the means of "bringing out" the talent of the scholars, teaching confidence and self-reliance — qualities so essential in after life, and for the want of which much of school education is often rendered unavailable.

Of the musical performances we do not feel qualified to speak, but our musical critics are strong in their praise of the pianist, Mr. S. A. Dow of Haverhill. They say it is seldom that we have music of so high order from our grand piano.

We desire to express our gratification that the pupils spoke so audibly as to be heard all over the hall. We are glad to find that the fears we expressed last week on this score were groundless.

REPETITION.

The Exhibition exercises of the High School were repeated on Monday evening to a large, but not over crowded audience. The performances went off with even more spirit and vivacity than before, the programme having been reconstructed in a manner to bring out more of the talent and capabilities of the pupils. Thus the original Dialogue, which was composed, committed to memory, rehearsed and performed, all in the space of five days, was intended to add new life to the whole representation, and was fully successful. All parts, the old as well as new, were received with great applause. The audience were pretty effectually "sold" on some of the tableaux, as in the Shakspear and the White Wizard. The latter was an afterthought, and not in the bills, but the representation brought shouts of applause, especially when the manly figure made a low and graceful bow to the audience. So delighted were they, that they required it to be repeated.

We are happy to know that pecuniarily, as well as otherwise, the whole thing has been a success, leaving a clear gain of about $225. This fund is to be applied to the furnishing and decoration of the school room, rendering it a more pleasant and agreeable place of study, and a means for the education of the eye.

We understand that an urgent desire has been expressed for another repitition in behalf of the children of our schools, but those having parts have been reluctantly compelled to decline as they need rest, and some of them will be absent from town.

PUBLIC MORALS.

It will be recollected that at our last town meeting a resolution was passed, on motion of Mr. Isaac Hardy, instructing our Selectmen to use their utmost efforts to suppress the unlawful sale of intoxicating liquors and the practice of gambling. We should be recreant to the plainest duty of a public journalist if we should fail to call the attention of our people to the alarming increase of drunkenness and gambling among us.

When we say among us, we do not particularly refer to South Danvers, but to the community at large, without much reference to municipal boundaries. The attention of the police authorities of Lynn, Beverly and other places has been called to the subject, and movements are everywhere being made to counteract this moral retrogression. We are not advised of what particular measures our own authorities purpose to adopt, but whatever they are, we hope and trust that a sound and wholesome public sentiment will support and enforce them.

Though we do not wish to be set down as a common grumbler, yet we cannot forbear to say that, in our judgment, a proper regard for public morals requires at the present time an increased vigilance in the execution of the police laws of South Danvers and the surrounding cities and towns. Our ministers, Sabbath School teachers, common school teachers, as well as parents, guardians, and all other persons having the care of our youth, should recollect the lesson taught by all history, that in times of war or great civil commotion, an increased responsibility rests upon all good men to see that public respect for law, learning and morality shall suffer no impairment. The direct and unavoidable evils of war are great enough, and numerous enough, without adding to them a general debauchery of the moral sense of community.

THE STATESMAN.—If the writer in the Statesman, who alludes to the WIZARD in such a flippant and patronizing style, had made less effort to be witty and more to be accurate, he might have written something worthy of a respectful and serious reply. As it is, he simply betrays a propensity for disputing upon subjects he has not the capacity to comprehend, and makes the general editorial ability of that paper the more apparent by the contrast which the occasional interpolation of a weak paragraph affords.

He charges us with expressing the opinion that the Democrats would not coalesce with the German Radicals, whereas, in fact, we expressed no such opinion, but, on the other hand, we gave reasons for supposing they would probably make this absurd coalition!

We would not trouble ourselves to make this correction, had not the writer in question charged us with agreeing with him (an imputation we don't care to rest under) upon a political question, although one of but little moment. We also desire to remind the garrulous scribbler how carelessly he has read and how loosely he has written.

AQUEDUCT COMPANY.—The fact has been developed by the investigation before the Legislative Committee, that the Directors of the Salem and South Danvers Aqueduct Corporation have been very faithful to the interests of the stockholders, having generally distributed annually from 8 to 12 per cent. dividends, besides one year issuing new stock at the rate of $100 for every $15 new capital paid in. This is a circumlocutionary way of declaring a dividend of 85 per cent., so as that nobody realizes it but those who put the extra certificate in their pockets. Devil thinks that if the Directors had watered the city as liberally as they have watered the stock, there would be no need of any new corporation.

CANDIDATES FOR THE HIGH SCHOOL. Candidates for admission to the Peabody High School are to be examined by the Committee, at the school room, on Tuesday next, beginning at 8 o'clock. It is usual for the candidates to bring with them each a slate and pencil to perform their problems previous to entering their work upon paper.

A DOG IN CHURCH.

Last Sunday morning the gravity of the worshippers at one of our churches was somewhat disturbed by the entrance of a dog, who walked sedately up the aisle, ascended the pulpit stairs, and taking his seat on the cushion by the side of the minister, put himself in the attitude of listening to the music of the choir. The minister, who occupied the pulpit by exchange, feeling that for the time he had control of the desk, expelled his visitor from his seat. He went reluctantly down among the congregation, and as no one was polite enough to offer him a seat, he passed to the other side of the pulpit and ascended to his former position. In the meantime the minister was engaged in the "long prayer." His canine colleague at first listened attentively to the services, turning one ear to the minister and then shook his head disapprovingly. He now saw the minister's sermon on the cushion and proceeded to examine it. In the act of doing so it fell to the floor and he followed it, turning over the leaves of the manuscript with great vigor, making the paper rustle with a noise audible to those near the pulpit. His criticism was evidently harsh as well as dog-matical, and he dog-eared the manuscript in revenge for his expulsion. After examining the sermon, the dog manifested his displeasure audibly, by a low growl.

We do not know how the controversy would have ended had not the sexton interfered. This official, without waiting the decision of an ecclesiastical council, took him by force and carried him out of the church, amid the smiles of the congregation.

TEACHERS' MEETING. — The annual meeting of the Essex County Teachers' Association will be held on Friday and Saturday of next week, at Rockport. Lectures will be delivered by Henry K. Oliver, Esq., of Salem, Rev. S. Barden of Rockport, Rev. S. R. Calthrop of Marblehead, and Rev. A. Owen of Lynn. We presume that the lectures will be interspersed with discussions and essays. We see by the Register that the Salem School Committee have decided to allow a vacation during these two days to those schools whose teachers, or a majority of them, propose to attend the convention. We think this a wise discrimination. The general dismissal of schools on such days, whether the teachers intend to visit the convention or not, has always seemed to us an abuse. We think that teachers owe it to themselves, as well as to the public, to attend these conventions. They are in the highest degree useful and should be liberally supported, and fully attended. We happened into the last convention at Lynn—six months ago—and were painfully surprised at seeing the small number in attendance. We could not help comparing it with the conventions that were held fifteen years ago, when the attendance was always so crowded.

We do not understand the cause of this deterioration. Is the esprit de corps of the profession on the decline?

THE DRAFT.—By the statement put forth by the War Department, it seems that the Quota of Massachusetts under the last call for 200,000, is 10,639—deficiency, 9,953; adding these two amounts together gives 20,592, the real amount of our indebtedness to the general government. The account is made up to the 1st of March, and does not include any veteran enlistments in the field. So, as we understand it, this amount is to be decreased—1st, by all home enlistments that shall have been made between March 1st and the day of the draft; 2d, by all veteran volunteers enlisted on the field; and 3d, by all enlistments in the navy. These considerations lead to the reasonable hope, if recruiting is pushed with ordinary vigor, that we may yet escape the draft in our own town, though, it will require extraordinary effort to save the whole State.

An inspection of the published table shows a very great diversity of accounts with the several States. Illinois seems to be the banner State, having furnished an excess of 2,436. Vermont comes next, having but 170 men to raise. These are undoubtedly already enlisted, and the State is "out of the draft." New York must raise 59,230, Pennsylvania 74,127. The little District of Columbia is rather bad off, being behindhand nearly five thousand. We suspect some of those young clerks will have to drop their quills and shoulder their muskets.

WATTS' CONCERT.—Judging from the programme, we can promise our readers a rich treat this evening, at WATTS' Concert. The chorus will consist of 150 voices, who will sing some thirty select pieces, together with a new and original comic farce, entitled the "Yankees Marching into Dixie." The tickets are selling rapidly, and everything bespeaks a "big" entertainment.

DIVIDENDS.—Warren Bank has declared a dividend of four per. cent, payable April 1st.

Danvers Bank has declared a dividend of four per cent., payable April 1st.

Village Bank, four per cent.

ANOTHER RAID FROM BEVERLY.—Week before last we made mention of an incursion from Beverly to the house of one of our citizens, Capt. PAUL HILDRETH. Since that affair, as we learn from the Beverly Citizen, a party of ladies and several gentlemen from that town made another raid, and again surprised the family by a visit to Mrs. HILDRETH, setting before her a bountiful table, and leaving their welcome in presents amounting to about fifty dollars.

We believe this compliment was intended as an acknowledgment to Mrs. Hildreth of her long and faithful services in that town as the presiding head, for many years, of one of their female societies engaged in efforts of benevolence.

Just as we went to press we received from a friend in Beverly an interesting account of this pleasant meeting, which we must defer publishing until next week.

CONGRESSIONAL BILLINGSGATE. — In the discussion the other day of the order for liquors, said to have been issued by General Frank Blair, that distinguished member of Congress so lost control of himself as to call a co-member of the House, Mr. McClurgy, "an infamous liar, forger and scoundrel." It is thought by those best acquainted with the parties that a duel will grow out of it unless the amende honorable is made by the irascible Blair. If they should conclude to fight, we hope they will both be killed in the encounter. We can very well spare from Congress and from the face of the earth all those public men so lost to the spirit of the age as to engage in this barbarous practice.

METHODIST CONFERENCE.—This ecclesiastical body meets to-morrow at the Walnut Street Church in Chelsea, where the places will be assigned to preachers for the next two years. Rev. MOSLEY DWIGHT, who has had charge of the M. E. Church here, will be assigned to a new parish. While here he has not only been a faithful and laborious pastor and preacher, but has made great and successful efforts to raise money towards extinguishing the debt of his society. We trust he may fill a new place where he will be as highly appreciated as he has been with us.

HALF MAST.—The flag was at half mast on Monday and Tuesday, on account of the deaths of JEREMIAH DONOVAN, a newly enlisted member of the Mass. 19th, who died at Brandy Station, in Virginia, and GEORGE CLIFFORD, signal quartermaster, of the U. S. steamship Augusta Dinsmore, aged twenty years—drowned. The latter was an adopted son of John and Marie Whitney of this town.

Mr. LEWIS P. CLARK, one of our newly enlisted volunteers, died Tuesday of last week, aged 22 years 5 months—recently brought home sick from Galloupe's Island, in Boston harbor.

GENERAL BUTLER.—The New York correspondent of the Commonwealth gives a series of very cogent, and plausible reasons in favor of the nomination of General Butler, for the Presidency, by the Union Party. We think it possible for the Baltimore Convention to do a good deal worse thing than to make this nomination. But we think further that the time is not quite come to determine who the best man is. We want to see where the Spring military campaign is going to leave our leaders before we make up our jewels for the Fall political campaign.

SETTLED AT LAST.—There has been for some time a controversy existing between the Boston & Maine and Essex Railroad Corporations, the former claiming that the cars of the latter must be drawn from Sutton's Mills to Lawrence by their trains, thus causing great detention to the passengers. The matter was before the Legislature, where it was found that the Essex Corporation had some rights bound to be respected. The result was that a mutual contract was made between the parties quite advantageous to the Essex, and we hope also to the larger corporation.

NEW HAMPSHIRE ELECTION.—The complete vote shows that the Union candidate for Governor was elected by a majority of 5,740 over the Democratic candidate, and 5,663 over all. The Senate has 9 Union members to 3 Democratic. The House 205 Union to 108 Democratic. This decisive repulse by the people of the effete party ycleped Democratic, will probably compel them to make a heavy reconnoisance of their own positions to see what the trouble is in their camp.

STRIKERS.—The strikers had another grand rally at Mechanic Hall, Salem, last Friday evening. We understand that the audience was not quite so large as at the previous meeting, although the house was reasonably full. Addresses were made by several gentlemen from Woburn, Boston and other places. There was a delegation present from out of town, with a band. Mr. Sumner, the President of the association, presided and introduced the speakers.

LETTER FROM WASHINGTON.

WASHINGTON, D. C., }
March 26, 1864. }

EDITOR OF SOUTH DANVERS WIZARD:

I would be glad to regale your readers with "highly interesting and important news" from the national capital, and would do so but for two circumstances equally unfavorable to that end; firstly, there is now news, and secondly, my imagination has been so spoiled in the training that it will not invent any for the occasion.

A slight ripple in the smooth current of our affairs was created by the arrival of General Grant in our midst a short time since. There was a great rush to see him at the levee of the President, where he was obliged to stand on a chair to gratify the public curiosity to see the rising man, and great expectations were built upon his appearance at the theatre, according to the manager's announcement, but he declared himself tired of the "show business," and by his sudden departure for the West, disappointed many ticket-holders, while he proved to the country that he is intent upon the great work before him. His movements, while in this vicinity, were so rapid that rumors and newspapers could not keep track of his whereabouts or intentions, and I trust the enemy may be as badly puzzled when he opens the campaign, which must do more than any other to decide the fate of the rebellion. Since it is certain that he is going to direct the movements of the Army of the Potomac in person, there is a general feeling of confidence that that gallant army will at length achieve results worthy of itself and of the reputation of its new commander.

One of those anomalies. which are the natural but unexpected outgrowth of such times as these, has just marked the proceedings of the American Senate. On the 7th of March, 1850, Daniel Webster, a descendant of the Puritans and representing the most anti-slavery State in the Union, made his great speech in favor of concession to the exactions of slavery, and, in the re-action from the fears of those stormy days, when immutable right was lost sight of for temporary expediency, that speech killed him. On the 8th of March, 1864, Hon. B. Gratz Brown, a descendant of slaveholders, whose grandfather was the first Senator from Kentucky, and himself representing a slave State, made the most radical speech on the question of slavery that was ever listened to in the Senate Chamber, and, if I read aright the signs of the times, his name will be cherished and honored by the American people in the full noon of the day of Freedom, whose dawn is now. He argues in favor of an act of universal emancipation—giving the President's Proclamation the force of law and extending and perpetuating its provisions—declaring that the Constitution confers upon the government all powers necessary to its preservation, and among them the power to abolish slavery, as incident to war. In support of this position he quotes Vattel, Patrick Henry and John Quincy Adams, and then says:

> "The rigid argument in behalf of this power best states itself in the imperilled condition of the country. Every battle field is an annotation full of meaning, every soldier's grave a link in the chain of evidence. * * * * The outcome of a moral wrong, fostered and encouraged in the social state, is seen in the calamities of to-day. That such calamities may not attach to any other day; that the Republic may be rid of a disease which has brought it nigh to death; that the struggle may be forever ended with those who have taken up arms to make permanent the institution of slavery; and that the American people may repose in undisturbed security, free, prosperous and cohesive, are the cumulative necessities that impel us now to pass a direct act of universal freedom.
> "But why should we hesitate? It is an advance, not a re-action. It is the first step towards those great destinies which await us, if only we be true. Do we prefer to go back into the past with its dismays and corruptions and terrible retributions, or forth into the future of hope and faith and achievement?"

And again:—

> "The rebellion is but an incident in the protracted struggle, covers only the idea of appeal to force, and measures not that moral flood-tide that surges on this great movement. As well characterize the events of France in '89 by the resistance of La Vendee, or the birth and growth of the English Commonwealth by the reduction of Ireland, as guage the meaning of this conflict by such a formula of language. And so of unionisms; those pliant, fearful, mock-modest attempts to cover up these giant, gaunt, naked facts, that are stalking about in the daylight, with the gumelastic garments of old-time political drapery. The simple unities of the former state, what do they signify now? They are as passionless as algebraic equations, as vain as mythologies. Who cares for the Union of the past—a Union fraught with seeds of destruction—bitter with humiliation and disappointments?
> * * * * * * *
> "The supremest truth of our time is this: that it is a revolution in whose whirls we are eddying and with whose current we have to contend; a revolution the grandest ever yet essayed by man, and destined to give its watchword to other lands and peoples, a revolution in all its great outlines of enkindled faith, of continued development, of overturned thraldoms, of liberated hope. The strata of this nation's sedment and coldness and oppression has been broken through. Human nature once more, by the grace of God, has become volcanic and eruptive, and the precious truths of freedom and fraternity are welling up from their deep foundations away below the defacements of men."

But this speech is so compact and so full of thought in every sentence that quotations cannot do it justice. It has been pronounced by a Massachusetts Senator (Mr. Wilson) as the ablest speech that has been made in the Senate for seven years. The orator catches his inspiration not from the past, but from the spirit of the future, and as his mind fastens upon the great truths of the crisis, he sees them with no uncertain light. He stands, like all true reformers, on the hill-top, ond catches the gleams of morning before they break upon the vision of those who inhabit the valleys. From such minds as that of James Brooks may be wrung a timid acknowledgment that slavery is dead, but to such as B. Graty Brown will belong the credit of killing it. Yours, &c.,

REVOLUTIONERS.—The pension roll of the government now bears but twelve names of revolutionary soldiers, two of whom live in this State. The oldest is Amaziah Goodwin of Somersworth, N. H., aged 105. The others range from 94 to 102.

HORSE RAILROAD.—The Legislative Committee have reported to the Senate in favor of constructing a horse railroad from South Danvers to Lynn—also for one from Salem to Danvers, and another from Salem to Swampscott.

SUPERIOR COURT.—This Court closed its business last Saturday, and adjourned the March Term without day.

PROGRESS OF TAXATION.

We have taken some pains to compile the following statistics of the progress of taxation in the old town of Danvers, and of the two towns since the separation. It must be remembered that in the earlier years the Highway tax is not included, as it was at that time payable in labor:

☞ Transfer Tickets are now given to passengers for South Danvers, who take the Horse Cars below Union Street, by means of which they can exchange cars at the junction of Webb and Bridge streets, and go to South Danvers without paying an additional fare. This places the "Down Town" people on an equal footing with the residents of other sections of the city, and the new arrangement will be appreciated.—Salem Reg.

Hunnewell's Great Remedies.

WHAT EVERY FAMILY SHOULD HAVE IN THE HOUSE AND WHY;

—— They should have HUNNEWELL'S UNIVERSAL COUGH REMEDY, because it effectually cures Colds, Whooping and Common Coughs, Sore Throat, Hoarseness, and is the most simple and perfect Soothing Syrup in the world. For old and young, by day and night, it may be used with the greatest freedom, and three-fourths of the deaths by Consumption stopped.

They should have HUNNEWELL'S TOLU ANODYNE, because it is a perfect remedy for Neuralgia, Nervous or Sick Headache, Tooth, and Earache, Pain in Stomach, or Bowels, Genuine Cholera Morbus, Rheumatism, Distress after Eating, Nervousness, Hysteria, and the chief of all causes of disease, and Insanity, Loss of Sleep. Its character, though active, is simple; its action in perfect conformity to nature; its end cure, or relief.

For the pains in Monthly Menstruation a perfect relief, while nature's after work is not disturbed, and one of the most important points in Medicine.

They should have HUNNEWELL'S ECLECTIC PILLS, because with seldom but a single Pill for a dose all derangements of the Stomach and Bowels are cured. They cure Indigestion, Dyspepsia, Headache, when caused by foul stomach, Loss of Appetite, Billousness so often and so erroneously treated with Mercurials, Jaundice. For Worms a sure cure.

They act simple, assist nature do not make a Pill Box of the stomach, as is the most fatal error of taking so many Pills at a dose and then what is important to every Family and every Purse, one bottle goes as far as two or three of what is ordinarily sold.

The confidence of all is asked to test

BELL'S SPECIFIC PILLS.—WARRANTED IN ALL CASES!—Can be relied on! Never fail to cure! Do not nauseate! Are speedy in action! No change of diet required! Do not interfere with business pursuits! Can be used without detection! Upward of 200 cures the past month—some of them very severe cases. Over one hundred physicians have used them in their practice, and all speak well of their efficacy, and approve of their composition, which is entirely vegetable and harmless on the system. Hundreds of certificates can be shown.

BELL'S SPECIFIC PILLS are the original and only genuine Specific Pill. They are adapted for male and female, old or young, and the only reliable remedy for effecting a permanent and speedy cure in all cases of Spermatorrhea, or Seminal Weakness, with all its train of evils, such as Urethral and Vaginal Discharges, Gleet, the Whites, Nightly or Involuntary Emissions, Incontinence, Genital Debility and Irritability, Impotence, Weakness or Loss of Power, Nervous Debility, &c., &c., all of which arise principally from Sexual Excesses or Self-Abuse, or some constitutional derangement, and incapacitates the sufferer from fulfilling the duties of married life. In all sexual diseases, as Gonorrhea, Gleet, and Strictures, and in Diseases of the Bladder and Kidneys, they act as a charm! Relief is experienced by taking a single box.

Sold by all the principal druggists. Price $1.

They will be sent by mail, securely sealed, and confidentially, on receipt of the money, by

J. BRYAN, M. D.,
No. 76 Cedar street, New York,

Consulting Physician for the treatment of Seminal, Urinary, Sexual, and Nervous Diseases, who will send, free to all, the following valuable work, in sealed envelope:

THE FIFTIETH THOUSAND.—DR. BELL'S TREATISE on Self-Abuse, Premature Decay, Impotence and Loss of Power, Sexual Diseases, Seminal Weakness, Nightly Emissions, Genital Debility, &c., &c., a pamphlet of 64 pages, containing important advice to the afflicted, and which should be read by every sufferer, as the means of cure in the severest stages is plainly set forth. Two stamps required to pay postage.

December 9, 1863—1 yr.

IMPORTANT TO LADIES.—DR. HARVEY'S FEMALE PILLS have never yet failed in removing difficulties arising from obstruction, or stoppage of nature, or in restoring the system to perfect health when suffering from Spinal Affection, Prolapsus, Uteri, the Whites, or other weakness of the Uterine Organs. The Pills are perfectly harmless on the constitution, and may be taken by the most delicate female without causing distress—the same time they act like a charm by strengthening, invigorating and restoring the system to a healthy condition, and by bringing on the monthly period with regularity, no matter from what causes the obstruction may arise. They should, however, NOT be taken during the first three or four months of pregnancy, though safe at any other time, as miscarriage would be the result.

Each box contains 60 Pills. Price $1.

DR. HARVEY'S TREATISE on Diseases of Females, Pregnancy, Miscarriage, Barrenness, Sterility, Reproduction, and Abuses of Nature, and emphatically the Ladies' Private Medical Adviser, a pamphlet of 64 pages, sent free to any address. Six cents required to pay postage.

The Pills and book will be sent by mail when desired, securely sealed, and prepaid, by

HOSTETTER'S
CELEBRATED
STOMACH BITTERS.

A pure and powerful Tonic, corrective and alterative of wonderful efficacy in disease of the

Stomach, Liver and Bowels.

Cures Dyspepsia, Liver Complaint, Headache, Debility, Nervousness, Depression of Spirits, Constipation, Colic, Intermittent Fevers, Cramps and Spasms, and all Complaints of either Sex, arising from Bodily Weakness whether inherent in the system or produced by special causes.

Nothing that is not wholesome, genial and restorative in its nature enters into the composition of HOSTETTER'S STOMACH BITTERS. This popular preparation contains no mineral of any kind, no deadly botanical element; no fiery excitant: but it is a combination of the extracts of rare balsamic herbs and plants with the purest and mildest of all diffusive stimulants.

It is well to be forearmed against disease, and, so far as the human system can be protected by human means against maladies engendered by an unwholesome atmosphere, impure water and other external causes, HOSTETTER'S BITTERS may be relied on as a safeguard.

In districts infested with Fever and Ague, it has been found infallible as a preventive and irresistible as a remedy and thousands who resort to it under apprehension of an attack, escape the scourage; and thousands who neglect to avail themselves of its protective qualities in advance, are cured by a very brief course of this marvelous medicine. Fever and Ague patients, after being plied with quinine for months in vain, until fairly saturated with that dangerous alkaloid, are not unfrequently restored to health within a few days by the use of HOSTETTER'S BITTERS.

The weak stomach is rapidly invigorated and the appetite restored by this agreeable Tonic, and hence it works wonders in cases of DYSPEPSIA and in less confirmed forms of INDIGESTION. Acting as a gentle and painless apperient, as well as upon the liver, it also invariably relieves the CONSTIPATION superinduced by irregular action of the digestive and secretive organs.

Persons of feeble habit, liable to Nervous Attacks, Lowness of Spirits and Fits of Languor, find prompt and permanent relief from the Bitters. The testimony on this point is most conclusive, and from both sexes.

The agony of BILIOUS COLIC is immediately assuaged by a single dose of the stimulant, and by occasionally resorting to it, the return of the complaint may be prevented.

As a General Tonic, HOSTETTER'S BITTERS produce effects which must be experienced or witnessed before they can be fully appreciated. In cases of Constitutional Weakness, Premature Decay and Debility and Decrepitude arising from OLD AGE, it exercises the electric influence. In the convalescent stages of all diseases it operates as a delightful invigorant. When the powers of nature are relaxed, it operates to re-enforce and re-establish them.

Last, but not least, it is The Only Safe Stimulant, being manufactured from sound and innocuous materials, and entirely free from the acid elements present more or less in all the ordinary tonics and stomachics of the day.

No family medicine has been so universally, and, it may be truly added, deservedly popular with the intelligent portion of the community, as HOSTETTER'S BITTERS.

Prepared by HOSTETTER & SMITH, Pittsburgh, Pa.

Indisposition to Exertion,	Loss of Power,
Loss of Memory,	Difficulty of Breathing,
Weak Nerves,	Trembling,
Horror of Disease,	Wakefulness,
Dimness of Vision,	Pain in the Back,
Universal Lassitude of the Muscular System,
Hot Hands,	Flushing of the Body,
Dryness of the Skin,	Eruptions on the Face,
Pallid Countenance.

These symptoms, if allowed to go on, which this medicine invariably removes, soon follows

Impotency, Fatuity, Epileptic Fits,

In one of which the patient may expire.

Who can say that they are not frequently followed by those "Direful Diseases,"

"INSANITY AND CONSUMPTION."

Many are aware of the cause of their suffering, BUT NONE WILL CONFESS THE RECORDS OF THE INSANE ASYLUMS,

And Melancholy Deaths by Consumption bear ample witness to the Truth of the assertion.

The Constitution once effected with Organic Weakness requires the aid of Medicine to Strengthen and Invigorate the system,

Which HELMBOLD'S EXTRACT BUCHU invariably does. A Trial will convince the most skeptical.

—:o:—

FEMALES—FEMALES—FEMALES.

In many Affections peculiar to Females the EXTRACT BUCHU is unequalled by any other remedy, as in Chlorosis or Retention, Irregularity, Painfulness, or Suppression of Customary Evacuations, Ulcerated Scirrhous state of the Uterus, Leuchorrhœa or Whites, Sterility, and for all complaints incident to the sex, whether arising from indiscretion or Habits of Dissipation, or in the

DECLINE OR CHANGE OF LIFE.

—:o:—

Take no more Balsam, Mercury, or unpleasant Medicines for unpleasant and dangerous diseases.

HELMBOLD'S EXTRACT BUCHU AND IMPROVED ROSE WASH CURES

SECRET DISEASES

In all their Stages, At little Expense
Little or no change in Diet. No inconvenience.
And no Exposure.

It causes a frequent desire and gives strength to Urinate, thereby Removing Obstructions, Preventing and Curing Strictures of the Urethra, allaying Pain and Inflammation, so frequent in this class of diseases, and expelling all Poisonous, Diseased and wornout Matter.

Thousands upon Thousands who have been the Victims of Quacks, and who have paid heavy fees to be cured in a short time, have found they were deceived, and that the "POISON" has, by the use of "Powerful Astringents," been dried up in the system, to break out in an aggravated form, and perhaps after Marriage.

—:o:—

Use HELMBOLD'S EXTRACT BUCHU for all affections and diseases of the URINARY ORGANS, whether existing in MALE or FEMALE, from whatever cause originating and no matter of HOW LONG STANDING.

Diseases of these Organs requires the aid of a DIURETIC. HELMBOLD'S EXTRACT BUCHU IS THE GREAT DIURETIC, and is certain to have the desired effect in all Diseases for which it is Recommended.

Evidence of the most reliable and responsible character will accompany the medicine.

Price $1.00 per bottle, or six for $5.00.

STURGIS'S
ELECTRIC COMPOUND!

AN EFFECTUAL CURE FOR

NEURALGIA AND RHEUMATISM.

Also, invaluable for Spinal Irritation, Hip Complaints, Ague in the Face, Tooth Ache, Pain in the Side, Back, Limbs, Ear Ache, Lumbago, &c.

The proprietor, in offering this medicine to the public, desires to state that this preparation does not belong to the class called patent medicines. Its value has been tested for many years, and it has been found fully adequate to the removal of many obstinate cases of the above complaint; which other celebrated remedies had failed to reach, and which had baffled the skill of eminent physicians. The proprietor does not claim that it will cure but one class of disease. All persons who are afflicted with any of these complaints are earnestly requested to try this Compound and judge for themselves.

AMONG THE ADVANTAGES OF THIS MEDICINE ARE THE FOLLOWING:

Its effect is very rapid—in most cases instantaneous.

It is external in its application, and the patient runs no risk in using it. It does not strike to the stomach.

It reaches the nerves and muscles, as it is believed no other medicine does.

It has cured some of the most violent and obstinate cases of Neuralgia ever known.

It can be used on a child or on an aged person alike.

While it is very powerful, it is perfectly harmless.

The proprietor has been allowed to publish the names of many persons who have used the Compound with the most beneficial results. He inserts here a few of them. They are among the most respectable citizens of Boston, and their residences and places are given:

Rev. N. Munroe,
Late Editor of "Boston Recorder."

Rev. H. M. Dexter,
Of Boston.

Joseph H. Allen,

Mrs. C. H. Dickinson,
5 Briggs Place, Boston.

Miss J. A. Rowe,
3 Concord Street, Charlestown.

C. C. Barry,
Cashier, City Bank, Boston.

And many others.

The proprietor is permitted to publish the following letter from O. C. Pitkin, Esq., Principal of the High School in the city of Chelsea, and well known as one of the most successful teachers in New England:

CHELSEA, April 30, 1863.

FRIEND WILLIAMS:—Yours of the 26th is received. My wife was troubled with severe Neuralgia in the face. She tried your Compound with decidedly good effect. I think it is an excellent article, and have recommended it in one instance, where it also produced good effect. You certainly have the liberty to refer it to me.

With much respect, yours truly,
O. C. PITKIN.

Original.

OF AND CONCERNING GENTLEMEN.

BY H. O., ESQ.

We not unfrequently hear some person, of a particularly fine address spoken of as a gentleman of the old school, thereby intimating, that the gentlemen of a former period were, in some respects, at least, superior to those of the present. This may or may not be the case. Fashions change, but men, gentle, or otherwise, remain about the same in all generations. The superiority of our fathers,—and in some respects they were superior,—consisted in style and manner, rather than in those sterling qualities which mark the true gentlemen of all times and places. A few generations back, people in society paid more attention to forms than we do now,—were more courtly and ceremonious—were more particular in the observance of certain conventional rules. All the records go to prove this. The literature of the last century, and the century preceding it, concerned itself very much more than at present about personal foibles and peculiarities of behavior. The secret of a dignified, courtly and self-possessed manner was much more valuable then than now, and deportment was raised almost to the dignity of one of the fine arts.

Yet for all this, it is very much to be questioned whether any former generation possessed any greater number of gentlemen, in the truest sense of the word, than the generation now living.—Not that we, at the present day, are by any manner of means overburdened with the commodity. Real gentlemen are not very plenty in our day—at least not in this part of the earth—probably not in any part. There are people enough, to be sure, calling themselves gentlemen, both here and elsewhere—men with clean clothes, and soft hands—who, when it suits their caprice or convenience, observe some of the smaller proprieties of life—who, in public, comport themselves as though they had some self-respect and some respect for others—men, whom the ladies call "perfectly splendid," and others, whom the same discerning critic speak of as "perfect brutes." But in all this dreary waste of life,—inane humanity and commonplace gentility, how seldom do we find a true gentleman—a man with blood in his veins, brains in his head, and abundance of the milk of human kindness in his heart. Indeed the perfect gentleman is an ideal man.—A being who exists only in the imagination. Hence it is that we locate them in the past. They lived in the golden age. We shall see them, perhaps, in the millennium—if we ever see that.

Perfection in manners, morals or life is perhaps what was never wholly attained. The most we can do is to strive after it; and the question is, whether or not the "gentleman of the old school" made a more successful fight than the gentleman of the new.

If in some respects our fathers and grandfathers were superior, in others we can justly claim the advantage for ourselves. We have a more correct appreciation of what constitutes a gentleman. We do not pay so much regard to outward signs and appearances. We are more natural—do not insist upon so much conformity, and, at least, excuse people for being themselves. There is not so much affectation—powdered wigs, at all events, are out of fashion. There is less foppery among men. Beyond question that trimly dressed and perfumed knight, "his chin new reaped," who, with his many holiday and lady terms," and talk like "a waiting gentlewoman," so pestered and made bluff Harry Hotspur mad, would have stood a much better chance in society a generation or so back than he would now. Not but that there are now, as there always have been, and doubtless always will be, plenty of thin skinned, thin blooded and over sensitive people who, from a sort of conscious weakness, would prefer the company of the "brisk popin-jay," who "smiled and talked and talked and smiled," to that of the outspoken and honest Hotspur, who must "ease his heart," although it might be "at the peril of his head." We pay more attention to the jewel and less to the setting. Perhaps we are more self-reliant and do not hedge ourselves about with so many proprieties—are not so careful what it is that comes "between the wind and our nobility." We give more play to individual character—there is a more natural and easy action of society now than formerly. We prefer, and wisely so, the careless blunders, and even the occasional bad taste, of lively and strong natures, to the tame and measured dullness of stiff propriety. Not that modern society by any means tolerates license. What we enjoy is liberty under the law, recognizing the fact, that the laws regulating social intercourse, like those of the State, were enacted and are maintained for the common good—for the restraining of the vicious and the protection of the weak.

Yet even in this matter of greater freedom the advantage is not all on our side. There is much to be said in favor of powdered wigs. There was in the olden time more repose in society—less of hurry and bustle. People took their time to say or do things. No man crowded his neighbor. Speech, like manner, was measured and sententious. Every one considered what he would say and had time enough given him to say it. Men dressed, padded, powdered and buckled as our fathers were, could not afford to be in a hurry. It cost something, and amounted to something, to go into society. It was owing to this, perhaps, more than we think, that they had so much good talk in those days. We take too little pains to do things well.

LETTER FROM BOSTON.

PROPELLER ADVERTISING AGENCY,
No. 15 Washington St.,
Boston, April 4th, 1864.

THE PRESS.

"The Banner of Light" is the organ of the Spiritualists of all New England. It is edited with ability, and has among its correspondents many that are considered as belonging to the high order of mediums. "Spirits of dead men, made perfect," are said to speak through mediums that translate or transfer the matter to the Banner for publication. The paper presents many things of a novel character to us who tabernacle in the clay, but we suppose it will all be explained to our mind's eye long when the spirits rap or tip us into mediumship.

The convention of Spiritualists, recently, was largely attended, and a deep interest was manifested for the cause. Mrs. So-and-So, and Mr. Thus-and-'Tis went, in hopes they might meet, and obtain much instruction and good communications. There were eloquent speakers, male and female, the latter rather leading. Hon. Frederick Robinson, of Marblehead, was President, but Rev. Mr. Clark filled his chair most of the time. Mrs. Clark is a splendid speaker, and so is Miss Lizzie Doton. Aside from these two, we heard not a few who might as well have kept still. Mrs. Spence, of New York, was considered the lion of the meeting, and she did speak many gook things, and many roaring words. The Spiritualists are to have a National Convention during the spring or summer, provided the spirits of the nation (black and white, blue and grey,) agree to meet.

But to the Banner of Light, it is an enlightening paper, and blows the trumpet of spiritualism with earnestness.

RAILROAD WAIFS.

"What becomes in this country of articles left by railroad travellers in the cars?" said a gentleman, the other day, in our hearing. The person to whom he applied for information did not know. Neither do we, though we have often asked the question; and more than once of men who ought to have been posted up in such matters, but were unable to enlighten us. Of course some of this lost baggage is recovered by the owners; but what becomes of the unclaimed residue? In England each railroad company disposes of its waifs once a year, by auction. The sales are amusing affairs. The limbo of things lost on earth could scarcely present a more curious medley than the "depot for unclaimed baggage" of a great railroad line. The articles are put up in lots, and comprise every imaginable kind of portable personal property. Bibles, skeleton skirts, corsets, cigar cases, overcoats, spectacles, shirts, petticoats, watches, walking sticks, false teeth, ear-rings, veils, night-caps, pocket pistols, umbrellas and parasols in profusion, portraits, razors, thimbles, fronts, gloves, and scissors, are only a few of the "leading articles" that figure in the catalogues. Most of the goods are bought by the descendants of Abraham. The "old clo'" fraternity muster in great force on such occasions, and get great bargains. It does not say much for the literary taste of these gentlemen, however, that books always sell very low at the railroad vendues. Even good books,—such as Bibles and prayer books—are knocked down at most discreditable prices. We are told, for example, that fifty-four of them brought only twelve shillings, at a sale where old coats were sold readily at five shillings a piece. We fear our shopkeeping English cousins are not as pious as they might be. Bibles would certainly bring more than five cents a piece at an American auction. We presume our railroad companies dispose in some way of their "unclaimed baggage," after having kept it on hand for the time required by law; but by what process they "work it off" is as much an unsolved mystery to the general public, as the problems of the flies and the pins.

BOSTON'S PRIDE AS A CLOTHING EMPORIUM.

This may be found at Quincy Hall, where Griffin Brothers & Co. have their immense establishment for men's and boys' clothing, including all the varieties of furnishing goods. Our out-of-town friends can easily find the location, as it is immediately over the Quincy Market, and easily accessible by all the leading thoroughfares. The goods displayed by the Griffin Brothers are superb in style, faultless in make, and economical in price. Their immense business and large capital enables them to fill the orders of purchasers (at wholesale or retail) for the lowest prices that ready sales can command, and the most perfect satisfaction to all is always certain.

A WOODEN WEDDING.

Wooden weddings are substitutes for tin weddings in commemorating the tenth anniversary of the hymenial solemnity, and are becoming quite fashionable in this meridian. We attended one, recently, at the house of an estimable couple who have patriotically added no less than five healthy boys to the census of our country, and we found it amusing as well as interesting. As each invited guest entered and laid his or her contribution of wooden-ware upon the accumulated pile on the parlor carpet, a shout of laughter broke forth from all the preceding comers. Owing, of course, to the want of any concerted arrangement among the guests, two, three, and sometimes even four different parties happened to select the same article; but, despite this fact, the variety was truly wonderful. Utility seemed to be the presiding characteristic, however, in all the selections—if we except, perhaps, a "dancing Jack" introduced by a wag into the mountain-heap of rollers, boxes, baskets, dippers, chairs, choppers, brushes, pails, etc., aggregated on this occasion; and even the "dancing Jack" was made useful by being suspended between the folding-doors, and forced to caper nimbly during the waltzing and quadrilling of the company. We had half a notion to publish a list of the "wooden-ware" brought to this "wooden-wedding," in order to give a clear idea of the nature of such a festivity, but we lack the space, and so leave it to the imagination of our readers. The worthy couple had reason to be proud of this wooden proof of the high estimation in which they were held by their acquaintances.

SPRING TRADE.

We have suddenly emerged from "the winter of our discontent," into the bustle and excitement of merchants and business men. Advertisements begin to crowd the columns of the newspapers. We find that the country press is fast becoming the medium for the city traders to display their goods and wares. They find that advertising in the country papers pays them well.

THE CONTINENTAL MONTHLY for April is even richer in matter and variety than usual.—The first article is an exceedingly clever one on Lyell's Antiquity of Man. It is by a Presbyterian clergyman and manifests a truly catholic and liberal spirit in treating of Science as related to religion. In the last article Hon. B. G. Walker again goes into Jeff. Davis on Repudiation.

ATLANTIC MONTHLY FOR APRIL.—This magazine appears well laden with gems of prose and poetry. We had last week on our first page a specimen of the latter, and we send our readers to the book itself for the former, assuring them that they are all of the first water.

GODEY'S LADY'S BOOK for April contains its usual variety of good reading and embellishments. The steel plate engraving entitled "Keeping Company," is a most expressive picture, and the fashion plates are unrivalled.

☞ The peace democrats have declared war against war democrats, and if their declaration means anything, and they have numbers proportioned to their noise, their action may have an effect on the approaching election.

WILLIE.

BY MABEL.

I was not patriotic,
  I could not bid him go,
When to our Northern households
  First came the sounds of woe;
When the far-off din of battle
  Proclaimed the war begun,
And valiant men were wanted
  For work that must be done!

Awhile he stayed in silence,
  But with a restless heart,
His youthful hopes were glowing
  To take an active part;
He felt it was his duty
  To mingle in the fray,
And in an evil moment
  I let him go away!

I was not patriotic,
  I did not feel the pride
That other mothers tell of
  When Willie left my side!
My heart was full of sorrow,
  There was no room for joy,
With bitter grief and anguish
  I parted from my boy.

'Tis two years since he left me
  To battle for the right,
Alas! my boy is sleeping
  In a southern grave to-night!
He died on the field of battle,
  In conflict bold and brave,
And when the fight was over
  They dug a shallow grave;

They placed my boy within it,
  The turf upon his breast,
And the far-off stars are shining
  About his place of rest;
The moon looks down serenely,
  The waters onward sweep,
The southern breeze sighs gently,
  Where Willie lies asleep!

When the war at length is over,
  And the soldiers homeward come,
To the sound of martial music,
  The bugle, fife and drum!—
Like me, how many mothers
  Will weeping, view that band,
And look in vain for their loved ones,
  Asleep in the southern land!

"ROCKS AHEAD."

Under this premonitory head, the Independent of last week, gives the Louisiana election and Gen. Bank's reconstruction experiment a pretty rough overhauling. Instead of regarding this first trial of Mr. LINCOLN's policy as "grandly successful," and going into wild ectsasies and spread eagleism over it, the Independent regards it as of evil portent, and as demonstrating the disloyalty rather than the loyalty of those who voted for these successful candidates. It repeats the Tribune's charge that HAHN, the governor elect, is an old rebel who has perjured himself, and it considers the votes given him as a measure of the rebel strength among the voting population.—We quote from the Independent:

Michael Hahn, the governor elect of Louisiana, was a rebel till General Butler's presence in New Orleans convinced him that loyalty was part of wisdom, if not of duty. Only a few months before he had presented, on behalf of certain ladies, a stand of colors to a company of rebel soldiers, men, as he said, about to fight for their rights, homes and firesides.—The rebel governor, Moore, appointed him to the office of public notary, whose duties he discharged in accordance with an oath taken of fealty to the rebel government. He may have repented, and repented sincerely. But his subsequent oath to the government of the United States, wherein he swore that he had never voluntarily given aid, countenance, counsel, or encouragement to persons engaged in armed hostility thereto, and had never exercised the functions of any office whatever under any authority, or pretended authority, in hostility to the United States, was an oath which an honorable man could not have taken, and which, being taken, is reason enough why such a man should not be trusted, at least till he had given some better evidence of repentance than perjury. The free state men of Louisiana knew of no such evidence, and voted against him. That he received the support and countenance of Banks does not relieve Mr. Hahn from suspicion, but rather involves General Banks. Not that we doubt Gen. Bank's loyalty, but we question his judgement. The disloyal element of Louisiana was in favor of Hahn; the loyal against him. A suspicion founded on such a record as his, until cleared up beyond a peradventure, should have been entered as a judgement.

We believe, from our own sources of information, that the facts here stated are in the main true. Regarded as true, or even possible, they are a demonstration of the utter worthlessness of Mr. Lincoln's plan of reconstruction. When the rebels are at last beaten and their armies annihilated, what shall prevent the same force being universally enacted by them which has been rehearsed on a small scale in Louisiana?—Newport (Vt.) News.

THE UMBRELLA.

As a shade from the sun, the umbrella is of great antiquity. In the paintings and sculptures of Egypt, it often occurs, servants bearing it above the heads of their mistresses while traveling in the open air. The recent discoveries at Ninivah show that the umbrella (or parasol) "was generally carried over the king in time of peace, and even in war," and in shape, Lagard says, it resembles those now in use. From a limited use in Asia and Africa, it seems to have passed as a mark of distinction and a luxury, into Greece and Rome. At Rome, when the veil could not be spared over the roof of the theatre, it was the custom of females and effeminate men to defend themselves from the sun with the umbrella or ambraculum of that period. This covering appears to have been formed of skin, or leather, and could be raised or lowered at pleasure.

The umbrella was used as a luxurious sunshade early in the seventeenth century. Ben. Johnson mentions it in 1616. At Woburn Abby, Eng., there is a full-length portrait of the beautiful Duchess of Bedford, painted about 1730, representing the lady as attended by a black servant, who holds an open umbrella to shade her. But the eighteenth century was half elapsed before the umbrella had began to be used in England by both sexes as we now see it used. Mr. Joseph Hanway, newly returned from Persia, was the first to exercise the moral courage to use an umbrella in the streets of London. He was hooted at and called a "mincing Frenchman," but his health being poor he still continued to use it in spite of their jibes. As late as 1770 a man by the name of M'Donald, just returned from Spain, while carrying a silk umbrella he brought home with him, was saluted with the cry "Frenchman, why don't you get a coach?"

In the Female Tattler of Dec. 12th, 1709, there occurs the following announcement: "The young gentleman belonging to the Custom House, who, in fear of rain, borrowed the umbrella at Will's coffee-house, in Cornhill, of the mistress, is hereby advertised that to be dry from head to foot on a like occasion, he shall be welcome to the maid's pattens."

Much of the clamor which was raised against the general use of the umbrella, originated with the chairmen and hackney coachmen, who of course, regarded rainy weather as a thing especially designed for their advantage, and from which the public were entitled to no other protection than what their vehicles could afford.

The early specimens of the English umbrella, made of oiled silk, were, when wet, exceedingly difficult to open and close; the stick and furniture were heavy and inconvenient, and the article generally very expensive. The substitution of silk and gingham for oiled silk, remedied the above objection, and brought it at once into general use.

The umbrella was originally formed and carried in a fashion the reverse of what now obtains. It had a ring on top, by which it was carried on the finger when furled (and by which it was hung up in doors,) the wooden handle terminating in a rounded point to rest on the ground. These were much in vogue as late as 1801.

AN ENIGMA.

I am not uncommon, and surely I claim
In God's Holy Book a protuberent name;
I'm weak when divided—united I'm strong,
I'm big and I'm little, I'm short and I'm long.
Sometimes I'm dress'd in gold and in silk,
And sometimes I'm nought but the shadow of ilk;
Sometimes I'm dirty, and ragged, and bare,
And sometimes my texture is nothing but hair.
I'm closely connected with man's life and death,
When too close connected I oft stop his breath:
Though I save his life when danger is near,
When he is in most danger I am all his fear;
Both statesmen and heroes acknowledge my power,
The most hardened villian beneath me would cower,
And yet I am tender, delicate and fair,
And lady's oft use me with solicitous care;
Remember this riddle is only design'd
For searching of history and scripture to find,
And likewise to show the action I took,
Where twice I am mentioned in God's Holy Book;
In children of Judah before they were born,
And house of a woman whose hope was forlorn;
Now what was my use, and what is my claim,
And what was my color, and what is my name.

JOSH BILLINGS ON PIGS.—Az the white rose wakens into buty, so duz the white pig cum to gladden uz. His ears are like the lilac leaf, played upon by the young zephurz at eventide, his silkiness iz the woof of buty, and hiz figger iz the outlines of lovlyness. Hiz food is white nectar, drawn from the full fountain of affecshun. He waxes fatter and more slick evera day, and hangs from the bozzum of hiz muther like an image ov alabaster. He laffeth at forms, and curleth his tail still cluser, az his feast goeth on, when he riseth with gladness, and wandreth with his kindred beside the still waters. His brothers and sisters are az like him as flakes ov snow, and oll day long among the red klover and beneath the white thorn, he maketh his joy, and leadeth a life arcadian. His words are low music; and his language the untutored freshness of natur. His pastime iz the histry of innersense, and hiz lazzure iz elegance. He walketh whare grase leadeth, and gambles tew the dalliance of dewy fragrance. He gathereth straws in his mouth, and hasteth awa on errants of gladness. He listeneth tew the reproof of his parent; his ackshuns are the laws of politeness, and his logic iz the power of instinkt. His datime iz peacse, and eis even iz gentle forgitfulness. As he taketh on years he loveth cool plases, and delveth in liquids, and stirreth the arth to a fatness, and painteth hisself in dark cullers, a refuge from flies and the torments of life. He forgetteth his parant and becumeth hiz own master, and larneth the mystery of food, and groweth hugely. THE REBEL DEAD AT GETTYSBURG.—A letter in the Washington Chronicle says:

"From evidence developed to the workmen and others engaged in removing the dead bodies on the battlefield of Gettysburg, they are now full, convinced that not less than seven thousand rebels lost their lives in this conflict, the bodies of whom are still there. In one space of three acres was found three hundred and twenty-five Confederates slain; and elsewhere, in a single trench, two hundred and fifty more. A considerable portion of the battle ground is likely to be plowed up this spring and summer by farmers owning it, preparatory to planting corn and other grain. As a matter of course, the Confederate graves must be obliterated, and the trenches which now indicate their burial places. There is a strong desire with the people, in respect to humanity, to have these bodies, though of the enemy, respectfully and decently put away in some enclosure where they may not be disturbed—where they can sleep in quietude."

"PROPELLER" DAVIS.—Friend Davis we are happy to learn, is doing a driving business in receiving orders for advertising in many of the best newspapers in Massachusetts, and also as agent for the transaction of general business.—In this latter capacity he is daily receiving orders from the country, always giving entire satisfaction to those who entrust business with him. He is located at Hapgood's gun store, No. 15 Washington Street, at which place he can be addressed. Our friend "Propeller" has presented us with a very fine photograph of himself, by J. D. Andrews, No. 2 Winter St., and is a perfect likeness. Mr. Andrews is one of the very best artists in the city, as the throng that daily visits his room can testify. Those who desire a first-rate picture, can always be suited by calling at Mr. Andrew's room.—Plymouth Rock.

☞ Oysters are high. The men are not to be found to dredge for them.—Many of the oystermen have been frightened off by water guerrillas, and the work of planting for next season takes off a great many oystermen. Consequently the bivalves are about one hundred per cent higher than usual.

☞ "Sister," said one of the bretheren of a love-feast, "are you happy?"—"Yes, Deacon, I feel as though I was in Beelzebub's bosom." "Not in Beelzebub's bosom." "Well, some of the patriarch's, I don't care which."

☞ One of Gen. Sherman's Feds thus squelched an irate dame whose chickens he had confiscated; "Madam! this accursed rebellion must be crushed, if it takes every chicken in Mississippi."

☞ Intimacy has been the source of the deadliest enmity, no less than the firmest friendship; like some mighty rivers, which rise on the same mountain, but pursue a quite contrary course.

The Wizard!

WEDNESDAY, APRIL 6, 1864.

THE DRAFT.

The following is the official announcement of the quotas to be furnished by the different towns and cities in District Number Five, under the new call for "two hundred thousand more:"

Amesbury	28	Nahant	3
Beverly	43	Newbury	12
Danvers	40	Rockport	31
Essex	14	Rowley	9
Georgetown	16	Salisbury	27
Gloucester	89	South Danvers	42
Groveland	14	Swampscott	13
Hamilton	6	Topsfield	10
Ipswich	21	Wenham	7
Lynnfield	6	West Newbury	16
Manchester	9	Lynn	172
Marblehead	58	Newburyport	84
Middleton,	8	Salem	126

By this it will be seen that our quota under the last call is 42. Under the first call it was 59, second 51. This would make a total of 152 men demanded from South Danvers towards the three last calls of the President. Under the first and second calls we have enlisted 102 men; furnished under the draft 42 more, making 144—leaving us EIGHT short. There are also a few in the navy, not reckoned in the above, which will lessen the deficiency This statement, however, is not official, but we think it will not come far from being correct.

The Evening Gazette figures out the deficiency of Boston in the same way, and makes it 2882 men! Only one sub-district has a surplus, and that is Ward 6, which is largely represented by the colored population.

What's in a Name?—A great deal there is in a name. Therefore we agree with the Statesman (see "Editorial Brevi ties,") that the Democratic party ought not to be disturbed in the enjoyment of their old name. When that ancient and effete party has lost its political influence, its most illustrious leaders, its prestige and honor, it seems to show a lack of ordinary magnanimity on the part of its opponents to carp at its name. We think it is going beyond the rules of modern warfare to follow these political Bourbons into their exile and rob them of this only remaining shadow of their former power. So we say to the "Dimecrats," stick to your name, boys! Don't give it up! It's all you have got left, and as it is so hackneyed and dishonored that it is of no possible use to anybody else, they have no decent excuse for taking it away from you.

Accidental Death.—Mr. Daniel Ramsdell of this town, formerly of Lynn, came to a sudden and violent death last Saturday, in a manner that should serve as a warning to persons handling or keeping poisonous drugs. It seems that a bottle had been put away in the house, containing some drug mixed in alchohol, which had been used by his son as a lotion for the rheumatism. Mr. Ramsdell, being a hard drinker, and probably supposing the bottle contained nothing but simple spirit, drank it off. In about two hours afterwards he was a corpse. Medical aid was sent for, but not till the poison had got into his system beyond the reach of antidotes.

"Set 'em up."—The annual business meeting of the A. B. Club was held at the alley on Thursday evening, March 31. Meeting called to order by T. E. Proctor, Chairman of the Executive Committee, at 8 o'clock. The Treasurer's report declared the Club to be in a solvent state, and it was the decided expression of members present that the Club should receive their continued hearty support in money and muscle. Messrs. Proctor, Wheeler and Winchester for Executive Committee, with Mr. Jas. Brown for Clerk and Treasurer, were unanimously elected for the year ensuing. After voting thanks to past officers, spares and ten strikes were resumed with zealous gusto.

Juvenile Offenders.—The Lynn Reporter mentions a singular case of juvenile depravity occurring in that goodly city. Two boys—one ten years old, the other 11—stole some $30 from a shop and started on a tour for New York, but arriving in Boston too late for the New York train, remained wandering about the streets of Boston, sight-seeing, till 3 o'clock next morning, when they were picked up by the police. The particulars of the case, as given by the Reporter, afford a sad commentary upon the vicious influences attending boys who are allowed to wander about the streets in idleness.

General Butler was invited up to Richmond to confer with the Confederate Government on the subject of exchange of prisoners, but the General told them if they wanted to see him they could do so by coming down to Fortress Monroe. So Jeff. Davis sent down Commissioner Ould to the Fort, where the business of exchanging prisoners was arranged.

"Will you walk into my parlor, said the spider to the fly,
'Tis the prettiest little parlor that ever you did spy."

☞ The principal topic of conversation at the present time—price of butter.

College Hazing.—The Overseers of Harvard College, at their recent meeting in the Senate Chamber, had a very earnest debate upon the question as to the best means of suppressing "hazing," which, it seemed to be conceded, had grown into a system, and assumed importance that demanded more stringent remedies than have hitherto been applied for its prevention.

The chair was first occupied by his Excellency, then by the President of the Senate, lastly by Edward Everett. Three different sorts of opinions were expressed and defended by their respective advocates. President Hill was for moral means; Mr. Everett was for mild judicial measures; Mr. Churchill was for Grand Jury proceedings. Besides these gentlemen, Messrs. Miner, White, Clark, Davis and others, spoke on the subject. Our reporter attempted to minute down the proceedings and record the result, but was foiled from inability to comprehend the parliamentary complexities which the grave, learned and reverend gentlemen at last fell into; so when they began to take the yeas and nays upon some question, he left. Whether there will be any more petty persecution of the freshmen of Harvard College by the sophomores from and after the year of Grace, 1864, will depend upon whether the yeas or nays (we do not know which) "had it" upon that last vote. So mote it be.

Watts' Concert.—We regret that absence from town deprived us of the pleasure of attending the Juvenile Concert at the Peabody Institute, last Friday evening. We hear it stated on all sides that the entertainment was in the highest degree successful, the audience at times manifesting their satisfaction by the most flattering applause. We think that the parade of the Yankees marching into Dixie must have been decidedly rich. On the next similar occasion "may we be there to see."

Copperhead Riot.—There has been an ugly riot in Coles County, Illinois, whereby 5 loyal men were killed and 8 wounded, and 2 Copperheads killed. It was quickly quelled by the military and the most guilty parties were arrested. We hope they will receive condign punishment, and that without very much of the law's delay. We have enough to do in the South in the way of putting down treason, without being very ceremonious in punishing traitors at the North.

Captain Fuller.—We hear that Capt. Fuller of Danvers, who went out to Newbern in command of Company A, of the Massachusetts Heavy Artillery, is now at Newport Barracks in command of Company D, Capt. Conwell of the latter company being under arrest for some delinquency on the occasion of the late rebel raid upon Newport.

Presidential.—Candidates for the Presidency are multiplying. The New York Ledger proposes Edward Everett of Massachusetts. Mr. Everett would make a very good President, but he would not be a popular candidate. We regard his chances as much inferior to those of Gen. Fremont.

State Election.—The State election in Rhode Island takes place to-day. There is but little interest felt in the canvass, as it seems to be taken for granted, since New Hampshire voted the Democrats down so handsomely that there is no danger of any New England State going wrong.

Union Leagues.—We see by our exchanges that Loyal Union Leagues are springing up all over the North. This augurs well for the earnestness of our people and the stability of their purpose in the great work of saving the Union from perishing and mankind from a dark and dismal future.

Spiritualism.—We see that Andrew Jackson Davis is out with a prophesy that the war will close before fall harvesting—not precisely a prophesy, but a revelation from the spirit of Stonewall Jackson. We hope this will prove true. We note it down for future reference.

Dye House.—We hear that the new Dye Works of the Bleachery Company will commence this week. The capital expended in introducing this branch of business is roughly estimated at about $75,000. About 50 additional workmen will be employed.

David G. Lake, of this town, has been promoted from 1st Lieutenant, Co. A, to Captain of Co. F in the 1st Regt. N. C. Union Volunteers.

Assistant Surgeon Daniel F. Leavitt, of this town, has been commissioned Surgeon of Third Regiment of Cavalry.

☞ The Essex South Temperance Convention will meet in this town on the second Thursday of April. A sermon on Temperance is expected in the Old South on Sunday evening, April 10.

Fast Day.—We understand that there will be a collection for East Tennessee at the Old South Church, on Fast Day. Services at ten o'clock.

War News.—There is a lull in the din of battle—the calm which precedes the storm.—By and by it will thunder all around, and may the God of battles give victory to the loyal arms, and confound the enemies of the Union, and the republican form of government established by the fathers, and bring peace once more to our bleeding country.—Lynn Bay State.

What is the trouble with our old friend of the Bay State? We hope he has not been retained by the new Emperor of Mexico to help supplant Republicanism in America. We always considered him a Democrat of the liberal stripe, but he must have turned Monarchist of the "absolute" stripe, else why should he invoke the God of battles to "confound" the "republican form of government established by the fathers!" Look out brother Bay State, there is no habeas corpus now!

Is This True?—We see the following newspaper paragraph floating around the county! Who'll vouch for its truth?

A man named Phelps, who recently died at Salem, from a tumor nearly as large as a bushel basket, which grew upon his back, sold his body, by his own agreement, to a surgeon in Boston for $1000, the money to be appropriated to the use of his widowed mother, and his body to purposes of scientific investigation.

Danvers—Grand Dramatic Entertainment.—By particular request of many citizens, the play of the "Honeymoon" will be repeated, with the addition of a laughable farce, entitled the "Irish Tutor," at Gothic Hall, Danvers, on Fast Evening, April 7. Tickets twenty-five cents.

Lecture.—The eloquent John B. Gough will deliver a lecture on Temperance, at Gothic Hall, next Friday evening, April 8. Tickets twenty-five cents.

National Convention.—The Evening Post, Independent, Commonwealth, and some other prominent Republican journals, are urging a change of the appointment of the National Convention from June 7, to September 1st; but it is not likely that any change will be made.

Arithmetical Puzzle.—Will some of our High School scholars favor us with a reply to the following question? How shall the digits and the cipher be arranged so that their total addition shall be one hundred?

Normal School.—Sixteen out of forty-four of the junior class of the Normal School in Salem have won prizes for superior attainments in the different studies, among whom is Miss Lizzie T. Blaney of this town.

☞ Volunteer's Semi-Annual Party will be held at Sutton Hall, in this town, this (Wednesday) evening. Music by Parson's & Upton's full Quadrille Band. Tickets $1.00. Dancing to commence at 8 o'clock.

☞ A friend has handed us for our perusal a copy of "The Peninsula," printed at Jacksonville, Florida. It is just about one quarter as large as the Wizard, and is Union to the backbone.

☞ Wallis School District, at their adjourned meeting, voted to raise $1,800 by taxation. Also voted to erect new out-buildings.

Lord Brougham, although a British born citizen, has been naturalized in France where he spends most of his leisure time at his country residence.

A Great Curiosity.—Yesterday one of our fishing vessels towed in an enormous shark, which was landed at Parkhurst's wharf. It measures twenty feet and three inches in length, and its head is of a very peculiar formation, being entirely different from anything of the fish species which we ever witnessed. Near the centre of the body there is a broad white ring which completely encircles it, forming a singular appearance. Those who have seen the monster, pronounce it a wonderful specimen, and our oldest fishermen never recollect of seeing one of its kind in this vicinity, as it is of a class which is peculiar to the waters of the West Indies. It is a ferocious looking customer, and well worth a visit.—Gloucester Advertiser, April 1.

"Devil" says this is a sell.

☞ A shocking story is told of a young lady in a certain town on the line of the Naugatuck railroad, who was taken sick, went into a trance, and after remaining in it three days, was buried, though an intelligent physician protested against the burial, declaring it as his belief that she was not dead. On the day of the funeral the body was warm and perspiration was discovered upon it, and the windows of the room were raised to make it cool as in death.—Springfield Republican.

New York Speculators.—A letter from New York states that a speculative movement is on foot in that market to buy all the old teas there, and that already $2,000,000 worth has been "gobbled" up. A similar combination has been effected to buy up all the old coffee, and that, too, will probably be successful. In due time the same class of harpies will be buying up all the butter, and all the sugar, and all the beef.

Mr. Editor,—As you published, a short time since, an account of a surprise party made to Capt. Paul Hildreth, perhaps you may not be unwilling to publish an account of another made to his excellent wife, by the Ladies' Home Seaman's Friend Society of Beverly, and a few other friends—a party crowding two omnibuses. Shortly after they had assembled, the following stanzas in greeting were read by the author, Mrs. Mary T. Webber:—

"We meet in joy once more, dear friends,
As oft we've met before,
Sure of our welcome ere we cross
The threshold of your door,

Yet pause, as might the traveler pause
Who gains some water-shed
Which sends to different seas the streams
The same green hills have fed.

For Recollection vies with Hope
Each sends its rill of joy,
To wash from the debris of Time
The gold without alloy.

'T is Mem'ry's highland! backward look!
The billows tipped with foam,
The greenwood paths, the sunny slopes,
Your earliest seaside home.

The good, old, sober, prosp'rous town!
True in historic days!
Oh, need I tell you? it deserves
A worthier meed of praise.

Nor wanting in the sweets of home
Are these delightful plains,
Where Industry to Wealth is wed,
Where Peace with Plenty reigns.

Here, where a wise munificence
Has reared the stately halls—
Where Learning to her favored seats
The humblest votary calls,

Nor grudges to our country's needs
The echo of those walls;—
Why should it, where the light and shade
On storied marble falls!

'Mid such surroundings, reap, dear friends,
The fruits of life well spent;
May every morn and eve increase
Your measure of content!

Thus peaceful, floating down the stream,
Blessing and being blessed;
Look forward to the home where wait
Re-union, Joy, and Rest!"

After these lines were read, Mrs. M. D. Wallis (author of "Life in Fejee,") addressed Mrs. Hildreth in the following words:

"My Dear Friend,—In these days of Rebellion, you may have thought when this little army arrived at your residence, that we had come with hostile intent; but it is not so; in love we have come to greet you. I wish that I could give utterance on this occasion to grand and noble thoughts, and astonish you with my eloquence, but this I cannot do; yet I can say, my dear friend, that during your long residence with us in Beverly, that your ever ready sympathy with us in our joys and our sorrows, and your beneficence to the poor among us, has greatly endeared you to our hearts, and although you have removed from us, we cannot, and we will not give you up; we still claim you as our own. Your long tried friend here, whose heart is so large that it cannot be measured, proposed that we should visit you and offer a slight testimonial of our esteem; and small as the gift is, be assured that it is offered by warm hearts. May God forever bless you, and yours!"

A purse of money was then presented to Mrs. Hildreth, by Miss Hannah Whittredge, after which the following song, written by Mrs. P. A. Hanaford, was sung:

With friendly thoughts and pleasant words
We gather here to-night,
And hope our greetings kind and true,
Will make your pathway bright.
Chorus:—For Auld Lang Syne we gather here,
For Auld Lang Syne,
And friendship's token with us bring,
For Auld Lang Syne.

We think of days in by-gone years
When with us oft you met,
And in our hearts of you, dear friend,
Sweet mem'ries linger yet.
Chorus:—

We hope the years that yet remain
For you and yours below,
May each be brighter than the last
As onward still you go.
Chorus:—

And when we meet on earth no more
O may we all, dear friend,
Rejoicing, greet you on the shore
Where bliss shall never end.
Chorus:—

Refreshments, furnished by the invaders, were then handed around, and after passing some pleasant hours, the company departed, well satisfied with their visit. Yours, Beverly.

Seventeenth Regiment.—We have several times heard the rumor that this regiment, which was recruited at Lynnfield early in the war, now serving at Newbern, has re-enlisted and will soon come home on a furlough. As we have a company in this regiment, it would be interesting for our town's people to know whether the rumor is well founded or not. We formerly had several correspondents in this regiment, but they seem latterly to have subsided. What's the trouble? Is paper too dear or ink scarce? Let's hear from you, boys.

Progress.—We see that the Legislature of Maine passed, at their last session, a law allowing the defendant in a criminal case to be a witness in his own behalf! This is a bold innovation upon the common law of evidence, though it commends itself to the judgment of many of the best jurists in the country.

☞ A pious old lady, on hearing that the salvation of the country depended on the success of the Democratic party, exclaimed:

"Oh Lord, on what a slender thread
Hang everlasting things!"

MOOT-COURT IN DANVERS.

Mr. Editor,—For some weeks past there has been but little to excite or interest the good citizens of our town, except the Moot Court, which was held under the auspices of the Bowditch Club, on Thursday evening, the 24th ult., at Gothic Hall. This called out the people, old and young, of all classes and professions; and it is ascertained from the number of tickets sold, that there were more than seven hundred people who witnessed the trial of the celebrated case of Mortimer vs. Hamilton; and the novelty of the case, and the manner in which its trial was conducted, made the occasion one of unusual interest.

It was an action for a breach of promise to marry, wherein the plaintiff claimed damages of the defendant in the sum of ten thousand dollars. The defendant was represented as having made love to the plaintiff while boarding in her mother's family, and soon after proposed to marry her. The engagement was proved by direct and positive evidence, while the defendant undertook to prove that there was no engagement to marry the plaintiff on his part, and that the action was brought through malice, to injure him in his reputation and prosperity. The plaintiff in this case was Miss Lizzie Ingalls, a young lady of excellent attainments and fine accomplishments, and the manner in which she gave her testimony, and her appearance during the trial, evinced a thorough appreciation on her part of the requirements of her difficult position.

The plaintiff's witnesses were Alfred Porter, Melvin B. Putnam, J. E. DeWolf, Benjamin Dore and Miss Lizzie Emerson, all of whom performed their different parts most admirably. Mr. N. M. Hawkes, a law student in the office of Messrs. Perry & Endicott of Salem, opened the case for plaintiff. His remarks were eloquent, pathetic and highly interesting, and had we time and space, we would give them in full. H. L. Hadley examined the plaintiff's witnesses, often drawing out answers of a ludicrous character—and we think that the comic manner in which one of the plaintiff's witnesses testified was productive of more interest than anything else in the whole trial.

John W. Porter opened the case for the defence. He stated clearly and forcibly what he expected to prove in defence of the action brought against his client. Mr. S. D. Shattuck was the defendant. He as usual did his part very well, appearing much as a proud and ambitious young man naturally would, if sued for breach of his promise to marry. The witnesses for the defence were S. P. Trask, George W. Andrews, Jas. Howell, Dr. P. M. Chase and Miss Affie Glidden, all of whom honorably acquitted themselves. Mr. S. P. Cummings made the argument for the defence. His argument, though very good, was somewhat sarcastic, but on the whole, was much better than could have been expected even from a member of the bar. Mr. H. L. Hadley made the argument for the plaintiff. He stated to the jury the nature of the contract for a breach of which the plaintiff had brought her action, and also the law relating to such contracts. He reviewed the evidence as it had been given by the witnesses on either side and compared its weight and credibility, and closed with an eloquent appeal to the jury—that they should, in making up their verdict, look well to the future of the young lady who had been disappointed in her affections.

Hon. I. W. Andrews, who acted as judge, charged the jury in a clear, logical and earnest manner, instructing them in many questions of law bearing upon the case, and cautioning them not to be influenced by sympathy for the plaintiff or anything which would be subversive of the great ends of justice.

The clerk, Mr. A. M. Noyes, a graduate of the Holton High School, and only fifteen years of age, performed his part very well—much better than could have been expected from one wholly unacquainted with the rules of court.

Mr. Charles H. Adams acted as sheriff, and our conclusion was, that Mr. Adams would be just the man for high sheriff in case there should happen to be a vacancy in that office.

In short, we may say that the whole affair passed off admirably and gave perfect satisfaction to all present, and shows conclusively that whatever Danvers people undertake to do is always well and thoroughly done.

Some on Sugar.—A lady in this town sent her husband to the store, lately, to buy a dollar's worth of sugar, as the good wife was nearly out. The sugar not appearing, a few days afterwards she asked her husband what he had done with it. He replied after a few moments hesitation and head scratching, "that he must have put it in his OTHER VEST POCKET."—Gloucester Advertiser.

☞ Appearances are that the maple sugar crop will be larger this year than last. The frosty nights and warm days are favorable to it. The high price of sugar will induce every man who owns a maple tree to squeeze it as long as a drop of sap will run out.

Wrentham, March 30th, 1864.

Mr. Editor,—If you would not regard it as a desecration of the sacredness of the Sanctum Sanctorum, over which your Wizardship presides, I would like to offer a few words in review of your leader of the 9th.

Your first idea seems to be that the object of the war has been from the first, and should be, the extinction of slavery; that all the talk about the "Constitution as it is, and the Union as it was," was buncombe, and entirely useless. Now I have maintained from the outset that the inevitable result of the war would be the abolition of the "peculiar institution," and for that very reason, have contended, that the President in his first Proclamation, asserting his object to be, to recover possession of the property of the United States and re-establish the authority of its Government, took the true ground, which he never should have left, or varied from. "Congress didn't make the war," nor the President, no, nor the State of South Carolina either. My position is that a State cannot commit treason. You will find that Webster takes the same ground in his speech in Congress on the South Carolina Nullification Ordinance, (see Benton's thirty years in U. S. Senate, Vol. 1, p. 339) where he affirms that our Constitution formed a Union, and not a League. It acts directly upon the people, and not on the States as individuals. Because a convention of men came together and declared the State of South Carolina out of the Union, that did not make it so, but it made the men so declaring, themselves traitors and the President should deal with them individually as such. The moment the Legislature of South Carolina took a step in opposition to the Constitution of the U. S., then it was no longer legally the Legislature of the State. Simply as a military necessity the Emancipation Proclamation was right, but to make that an object, an end, in my opinion, is a grave mistake.

The parallel case you instance of our fathers of '76, in my view, is liable to the same charge. They fought at Concord and Lexington, and Bunker-hill, simply for a redress of grievances. Independance was a natural result, growing out of circumstances; and even at the end of a year and a half the proposition took the people by surprise. But the result proved that the right time for the movement had come.

The ground I take is this, that Slavery was not the cause but the pretext of the Rebellion, and if it is an obstacle in the way of putting down the Rebellion, remove it effectually and forever. That slavery was the pretext is shown by the nullification of 1833, which shows that the seed of rebellion was then sown. If slavery was the cause then is secession a plant of Northern as well as Southern growth, for did not a Convention in Worcester a few years since, demand a dissolution of the Union?—Have there not been many petitions sent into our own Legislature praying for northern secession? These things show that there is and has been a party at the North as bitterly opposed to the Union as any in the South. And for political purposes certain papers have sought to convince the people at the South that the Republican Party was all of that stripe. This is why the Southern people have that bitter hatred of everything from New England.

Now to have issued the Emancipation Proclamation at the commencement of the trouble would have convinced them, that their apprehension was correct,—that Abe Lincoln was the choice of a large party at the North, who only waited for a decent excuse to come and dispossess them of their property at the point of the bayonet.

Such a course, I firmly believe, would have turned from us, thousands of loyal hearts that have followed us in this contest from Kentucky, Missouri, Tennessee, North Carolina and Louisiana. Here then are our chief points of variance. You maintain that the abolition of Slavery should have been the object from the outset, and that the Union has been dissolved, while I contend that Slavery was not the cause of the war, and that the Union has not been and cannot be dissolved. On this point we shall get much light by considering the circumstances that produced the Constitution. In the Convention were two parties. One led by Alexander Hamilton, in favor of a powerful Central Government, the other under the lead of Randolph, Pinckney, and others, great sticklers for the doctrine of State Rights. It required a long and earnest effort to bring these two elements to harmonize, and in fact they never have been in perfect union with each other. There was a jar of discord at the Hartford Convention, which was put in tune by the compromise of 1820. Another discord was heard in 1833 and again attuned by compromise. But looking at history candidly it will not do to say that secession is wholly of Southern growth, or that the history of its rise and progress is all comprised in the word, Slavery. Selfish, soulless, politicians are the ones to blame.

No, I don't want to hear at present a word about amending the Constitution. If it took 9 States 3 months to agree upon one, how long will it take 30 States to agree upon another?—There is a simple question to solve on your State but I fear it would prove far more difficult than to adjust ourselves to the present one.

Personal.—The New York Herald's West Virginia despatches report that the wife of the rebel Senator Henry S. Foote arrived within our lines, and had an interview with General Sullivan. She desired to take the oath and go North, but permission was denied, and she was sent back again to Dixie. Hon. Pierre Soule has married the beautiful widow of Robert Stannard, and the two have passed our lines and gone North—probably on their way to some foreign country. The lady is the owner of some property in West Tennessee, and took the oath under the President's amnesty proclamation.—Hon. C. J. Faulkner, ex-Minister to France, came as far as Winchester, with a view to coming within our lines and taking the oath. At Winchester he was met by his brother-in-law, who dissuaded him from his purpose.

On the Death of Georgie Barnard

Beauteous boy! How could I think
Thou would'st be called so soon,
It makes my heart within me sink
To know that thou art gone!

Oh! I was much attached to him,
That loving lovely one,
For he did often come and play
With my own little son.

But the past year we saw him not
As often as we would,
For fate our boys did separate—
We left the neighborhood.

'Tis sad to know that pleasant face
That Georgie ever wore,
Those sparkling eyes and happy look
Will never greet us more.

Such beauteous eyes as Georgie had,
Such looks as decked his brow,
Belonged to none but Georgie's self—
Alas! where are they now?

How sad those parents now must feel,
Grandsire, and little Sis:
When they are all restored to health,
How they will Georgie miss!

Uphold them, Lord, with thy right hand,
And give them strength to bear
This sudden grief,—'twas very hard,
Their precious boy to spare.

They'll miss him from the little band
Where he was wont to play,
The school room and the Sabbath school
Where he went constantly.

But he's now a shining angel
With a bright and happy band,
"With a crown upon his forehead,
And a harp within his hand." W.

BELL'S SPECIFIC PILLS.—WARRANTED IN ALL CASES.—Can be relied on! Never fail to cure! Do not nauseate! Are speedy in action! No change of diet required! Do not interfere with business pursuits! Can be used without detection! Upward of 200 cures the past month—some of them very severe cases. Over one hundred physicians have used them in their practice, and all speak well of their efficacy, and approve of their composition, which is entirely vegetable and harmless on the system. Hundreds of certificates can be shown.

BELL'S SPECIFIC PILLS are the original and only genuine Specific Pill. They are adapted for male and female, old or young, and the only reliable remedy for effecting a permanent and speedy cure in all cases of Spermatorrhea, or Seminal Weakness, with all its train of evils, such as Urethral and Vaginal Discharges, Gleet, the Whites, Nightly or Involuntary Emissions, Incontinence, Genital Debility and Irritability, Impotence, Weakness or Loss of Power, Nervous Debility, &c., &c., all of which arise principally from Sexual Excesses or Self-Abuse, or some constitutional derangement, and incapacitates the sufferer from fulfilling the duties of married life. In all sexual diseases, as Gonorrhea, Gleet, and Strictures, and in Diseases of the Bladder and Kidneys, they act as a charm! Relief is experienced by taking a single box.

Sold by all the principal druggists. Price $1.

They will be sent by mail, securely sealed, and confidentially, on receipt of the money, by

J BRYAN, M. D,
No. 76 Cedar street, New York,

Consulting Physician for the treatment of Seminal, Urinary, Sexual, and Nervous Diseases, who will send, free to all, the following valuable work, in sealed envelope:

THE FIFTIETH THOUSAND.—DR. BELL'S TREATISE on Self-Abuse, Premature Decay, Impotence and Loss of Power, Sexual Diseases. Seminal Weakness, Nightly Emissions, Genital Debility, &c., &c., a pamphlet of 64 pages, containing important advice to the afflicted, and which should be read by every sufferer, as the means of cure in the severest stages is plainly set forth. Two stamps required to pay postage.

December 9, 1863—1 yr.

IMPORTANT TO LADIES.—DR. HARVEY'S FEMALE PILLS have never yet failed in removing difficulties arising from obstruction, or stoppage of nature, or in restoring the system to perfect health when suffering from Spinal Affections, Prolapsus, Uteri, the Whites, or other weakness of the Uterine Organs. The Pills are perfectly harmless on the constitution, and may be taken by the most delicate female without causing distress—the same time they act like a charm by strengthening, invigorating and restoring the system to a healthy condition, and by bringing on the monthly period with regularity, no matter from what causes the obstruction may arise. They should, however, NOT be taken during the first three or four months of pregnancy, though safe at any other time, as miscarriage would be the result.

Each box contains 60 Pills. Price $1.

DR. HARVEY'S TREATISE on Diseases of Females, Pregnancy, Miscarriage, Barrenness, Sterility, Reproduction, and Abuses of Nature, and emphatically the Ladies' Private Medical Adviser, a pamphlet of 64 pages, sent free to any address. Six cents required to pay postage.

The Pills and book will be sent by mail when desired, securely sealed, and prepaid, by

J. BRYAN, M. D, General Agent,
No. 76 Cedar street, New York.

☞ Sold by all the principal druggists.

TERRIBLE DISCLOSURES—SECRETS FOR THE MILLION!—A most valuable and wonderful publication. A work of 400 pages, and 30 colored engravings. DR. HUNTER'S VADE MECUM, an original and popular treatise on Man and Woman, their Physiology, Functions, and Sexual Disorders of every kind, with Never-Failing Remedies for their speedy cure. The practice of Dr. Hunter has long been, and still is, unbounded, but at the earnest solicitation of numerous persons, he has been induced to extend his medical usefulness through the medium of his "Vade Mecum." It is a volume that should be in the hands of every family in the land, as a preventive of secret vices, or as a guide for the alleviation of one of the most awful and destructive scourges ever visited mankind. One copy, securely enveloped, will be forwarded free of postage to any part of the United States for 50 cents in post office stamps or 3 copies for $1. Address, post paid, DR. HUNTER' No. 3 Dvision Street, New York. je 3—1y

HUMAN MISERY.

Just Published, in a Sealed Envelope. Price 6 cents.

A Lecture on the Nature, Treatment & Radical

Cure of Seminal Weakness, or Spermatorrhœa, induced by Self-Abuse; Involuntary Emissions, Impotency, Nervous Debility, and Impediments to Marriage generally; Consumption, Epilepsy and Fits; Mental and Physical Incapacity, &c.—By ROB. J. CULVERWELL, M. D., Author of "The Green Book," &c.

The world-renowned author, in this admirable Lecture, clearly proves from his own experience that the awful consequences of Self-Abuse may be effectually removed without medicine, and without dangerous surgical operations, bougies, instruments, rings or cordials, pointing out a mode of cure at once certain and effectual, by which every sufferer, no matter what his condition may be, may cure himself cheaply, privately, and radically. This lecture will prove a boon to thousands and thousands.

Sent under seal, in a plain envelope, to any address, on receipt of six cents, or two postage stamps, by addressing the publishers,

HOSTETTER'S
CELEBRATED
STOMACH BITTERS.

A pure and powerful Tonic, corrective and alterative of wonderful efficacy in disease of the

Stomach, Liver and Bowels.

Cures Dyspepsia, Liver Complaint, Headache, Debility, Nervousness, Depression of Spirits, Constipation, Colic, Intermittent Fevers, Cramps and Spasms, and all Complaints of either Sex, arising from Bodily Weakness whether inherent in the system or produced by special causes.

Nothing that is not wholesome, genial and restorative in its nature enters into the composition of HOSTETTER'S STOMACH BITTERS. This popular preparation contains no mineral of any kind, no deadly botanical element; no fiery excitant: but it is a combination of the extracts of rare balsamic herbs and plants with the purest and mildest of all diffusive stimulants.

It is well to be forearmed against disease, and, so far as the human system can be protected by human means against maladies engendered by an unwholesome atmosphere, impure water and other external causes, HOSTETTER'S BITTERS may be relied on as a safeguard.

In districts infested with Fever and Ague, it has been found infallible as a preventive and irresistible as a remedy and thousands who resort to it under apprehension of an attack, escape the scourage; and thousands who neglect to avail themselves of its protective qualities in advance, are cured by a very brief course of this marvelous medicine. Fever and Ague patients, after being plied with quinine for months in vain, until fairly saturated with that dangerous alkaloid, are not unfrequently restored to health within a few days by the use of HOSTETTER'S BITTERS.

The weak stomach is rapidly invigorated and the appetite restored by this agreeable Tonic, and hence it works wonders in cases of DISPEPSIA and in less confirmed forms of INDIGESTION. Acting as a gentle and painless apperient, as well as upon the liver, it also invariably relieves the CONSTIPATION superinduced by irregular action of the digestive and secretive organs.

Persons of feeble habit, liable to Nervous Attacks, Lowness of Spirits and Fits of Languor, find prompt and permanent relief from the Bitters. The testimony on this point is most conclusive, and from both sexes.

The agony of BILIOUS COLIC is immediately assuaged by a single dose of the stimulant, and by occasionally resorting to it, the return of the complaint may be prevented.

As a General Tonic, HOSTETTER'S BITTERS produce effects which must be experienced or witnessed before they can be fully appreciated. In cases of Constitutional Weakness, Premature Decay and Debility and Decrepitude arising from OLD AGE, it exercises the electric influence. In the convalescent stages of all diseases it operates as a delightful invigorant. When the powers of nature are relaxed, it operates to re-enforce and re-establish them.

Last, but not least, it is The Only Safe Stimulant, being manufactured from sound and innocuous materials, and entirely free from the acid elements present more or less in all the ordinary tonics and stomachics of the day.

No family medicine has been so universally, and, it may be truly added, deservedly popular with the intelligent portion of the community, as HOSTETTER'S BITTERS.

HELMBOLD'S
GENUINE PREPARATIONS.

COMPOUND FLUID EXTRACT BUCHU, a Positive and Specific Remedy for diseases of the Bladder, Kidneys, Gravel, and Dropsical Swellings.

This Medicine increases the power of Digestion, and excite the Absorbents into healthy action, by which the Wtaery or Cacareous depositions, and all Unnatural Enlargements are reduced, as well as Pain and Inflammation.

—:o:—

HELMBOLD'S EXTRACT BUCHU.

For Weaknesses arising from Excesses, Habits of Dissipation, Early Indiscretion of Abuse, attended with the following symptoms:—

Indisposition to Exertion,	Loss of Power,
Loss of Memory,	Difficulty of Breathing,
Weak Nerves,	Trembling,
Horror of Disease,	Wakefulness,
Dimness of Vision,	Pain in the Back,
Universal Lassitude of the Muscular System,
Hot Hands,	Flushing of the Body,
Dryness of the Skin,	Eruptions on the Face,
Pallid Countenance.

These symptoms, if allowed to go on, which this medicine invariably removes, soon follows

Impotency, Fatuity, Epileptic Fits,

In one of which the patient may expire.

Who can say that they are not frequently followed by those "Direful Diseases,"

"INSANITY AND CONSUMPTION."

Many are aware of the cause of their suffering,

BUT NONE WILL CONFESS THE RECORDS OF THE INSANE ASYLUMS.

And Melancholy Deaths by Consumption bear ample witness to the Truth of the assertion.

The Constitution once effected with Organic Weakness requires the aid of Medicine to Strengthen and Invigorate the system,

Which HELMBOLD'S EXTRACT BUCHU invariably does. A Trial will convince the mast skeptical.

—:o:—

FEMALES—FEMALES—FEMALES.

In many Affections peculiar to Females the EXTRACT BUCHU is unequalled by any other remedy, as in Chlorosis or Retention, Irregularity, Painfulness, or Suppression of Customary Evacuations, Ulcerated Scirrhous state of the Uterus, Leuchorrhœa or Whites, Sterility, and for all complaints incident to the sex, whether arising from indiscretion or Habits of Dissipation, or in the

DECLINE OR CHANGE OF LIFE.

—:o:—

Take no more Balsam, Mercury, or unpleasant Medicines for unpleasant and dangerous diseases.

HELMBOLD'S EXTRACT BUCHU AND IMPROVED ROSE WASH CURES

SECRET DISEASES

In all their Stages, At little Expense.
Little or no change in Diet. No inconvenience.
And no Exposure.

It causes a frequent desire and gives strength to Urinate, thereby Removing Obstructions, Preventing and Curing Strictures of the Urethra, allaying Pain and Inflammation, so frequent in this class of diseases, and expelling all Poisonous, Diseased and wornout Matter.

Thousands upon Thousands who have been the Victims of Quacks, and who have paid heavy fees to be cured in a short time, have found they were deceived, and that the "POISON" has, by the use of "Powerful Astringents," been dried up in the system, to break out in an aggravated form, and perhaps after Marriage.

—:o:—

Use HELMBOLD'S EXTRACT BUCHU for all affections and diseases of the URINARY ORGANS, whether existing in MALE or FEMALE, from whatever cause originating and no matter of HOW LONG STANDING.

Diseases of these Organs requires the aid of a DIURETIC, HELMBOLD'S EXTRACT BUCHU IS THE GREAT DIURETIC, and is certain to have the desired effect in all Diseases for which it is Recommended.

Evidence of the most reliable and responsible character will accompany the medicine.

STURGIS'S
ELECTRIC COMPOUND!
AN EFFECTUAL CURE FOR
NEURALGIA AND RHEUMATISM.

Also, invaluable for Spinal Irritation, Hip Complaints, Ague in the Face, Tooth Ache, Pain in the Side, Back, Limbs, Ear Ache, Lumbago, &c.

The proprietor, in offering this medicine to the public, desires to state that this preparation does not belong to the class called patent medicines. Its value has been tested for many years, and it has been found fully adequate to the removal of many obstinate cases of the above complaints, which other celebrated remedies had failed to reach, and which had baffled the skill of eminent physicians. The proprietor does not claim that it will cure but one class of disease. All persons who are afflicted with any of these complaints are earnestly requested to try this Compound and judge for themselves.

AMONG THE ADVANTAGES OF THIS MEDICINE ARE THE FOLLOWING:

Its effect is very rapid—in most cases instantaneous.

It is external in its application, and the patient runs no risk in using it. It does not strike to the stomach.

It reaches the nerves and muscles, as it is believed no other medicine does.

It has cured some of the most violent and obstinate cases of Neuralgia ever known.

It can be used on a child or on an aged person alike. While it is very powerful, it is perfectly harmless.

The proprietor has been allowed to publish the names of many persons who have used the Compound with the most beneficial results. He inserts here a few of them. They are among the most respectable citizens of Boston, and their residences and places are given:

Late Editor of "Boston Recorder."

And many others.

The proprietor is permitted to publish the following letter from O. C. Pitkin, Esq., Principal of the High School in the city of Chelsea, and well known as one of the most successful teachers in New England:

CHELSEA, April 30, 1863.

FRIEND WILLIAMS:—Yours of the 26th is received. My wife was troubled with severe neuralgia in the face. She tried your Compound with decidedly good effect. I think it is an excellent article, and have recommended it in one instance, where it also produced good effect. You certainly have the liberty to refer it to me.

With much respect, yours truly,
O. C. PITKIN.

OFF AND CONCERNING GENTLEMEN.

BY H. O., ESQ.

During the reign of the Georges there lived in London a class of people commonly spoken of as "men of fashion," who are by some regarded as the representative gentlemen of that period. They were generally young men of family, some of them very noble lords, and their principle business was to amuse themselves and astonish the town. They dressed extravagantly, talked affectedly, frequented theatres, swaggered in club-rooms, played heavily, lost carelessly, cheated their tailors, abused their servants, reeled home at very early hours, and, next to taking a purse, from some careless nobleman or rich tradesman "upon the road," thought it the very highest human achievement to conduct a successful intrigue with my lady's waiting maid, or perhaps with my lady herself. In short, they were a very vulgar set of scamps, with all the bad and none of the redeeming qualities of Tom Jones. In modern society they would be called "blacklegs," or, the very best of them "swells." Time was, however, when they were the "men of fashion." At that time, and measured by that standard, George the IV was the "first gentleman of Europe."

But let us be just;—these were not gentlemen of the old, any more than they were gentlemen of the new school; they were simply what they were called, "men of fashion." The true gentlemen of that time were found where true gentlemen are always found—where there is honest work to be done. Most of these having done their work faithfully, quietly and contentedly went to their reward, more than a hundred years ago, and we have never heard so much as their names. Others stood before princes. They labored in parliaments and cabinets; we meet them in high places and their names sound very large—Pitt, Sheridan, Fox, Burke. In letters, Addison, Grey, Gibbon, Goldsmith. Boswell introduces us to a score of them. What a noble company assembled in the rooms of Sir Joshua and Mrs. Thrale! Even that ill-clad, ill-formed and irascible old Doctor of Laws, Samuel Johnson, who could neither eat, drink or talk with moderation, as he stands bare-headed in the rain, doing penance for his early sin, or as he bears the frail, helpless woman to his own house, already filled with the halt and the blind, whose only claim upon him was their misfortunes, does he not stand before us, in spite of all his roughness, a very gentle-man?—which he was.

Dr. Johnson certainly was a gentleman, but he is not our ideal gentleman. For this is wanted something more than strength and goodness. In the highest style of gentleman, with intrinsic virtue, there is a certain culture and softness of manner that pleases and comforts. With original excellence, many adornments—many fruits which grow only upon a good soil, and there with much labor and painstaking. It costs something to be a gentleman—to attain to that dignity and repose of manner which enforces respect and commands admiration. It exists only where there is worth, and, what some may deny, a consciousness of worth. No mean man can be a gentleman. No man but that feels himself incapable of doing a base thing. The very air of a gentleman—that which distinguishes him from others, and makes him notable in his simplicity, is that which arises from a confidence in the validity of his own claims to that which he grants to others, namely—respect and attention. Servility is awkward—cunning is clownish. Goodness and benevolence are always graceful. Whoever has these, good sense and a kind heart, with courage and self-confidence, need at least have no fears of making a bad figure. He may not please—he certainly will not give offence.

Here let me say, by way of digression, that the art of pleasing is not an art of so very easy attainment as some would have us think. Indeed there is room for question whether or not the so-called art of pleasing is not rather a gift than an art. We have all of us known highly cultivated, well-informed, and noble-minded men, and men withal, with a large measure of wit, who could not please—who had not the art, if art it is, of entertaining. There are plenty of people who observe all the proprieties, who never shock us with incongruous behavior, with rude or ill-timed speeches, who are perfectly well-bred, who yet afford us no comfort—are any thing but pleasant and companionable men, and women who are, speaking truly, a little heavy. We also see men who are, as report goes, very bad men, and yet are the very best of fellows—fertile in resource and suggestive in conversation—men who have such a taking way that you are sometimes very easily taken in. Such men, however, are seldom bad men at heart. The dispositions of them are good enough, but their wills are weak, the passions strong, and, perhaps, the pockets empty. Keep us out of temptation, for so, mayhap, we shall be delivered from evil! The trouble with the first class, I have sometimes thought, is, that they have not quite enough of the earth about them—they do not get hold of us, or, in some instances, it may be that they are just a grain "too good for human nature's daily food."

At the other end of this digression we were considering the importance of courage and self-confidence as helps to gentlemanly deportment. These are needful, but there must be something more—there must be an appreciation of and respect for others, based upon a real reverence for that which is good and excellent in human nature, which renders even the humblest worth pleasing. If a man cannot be a hero, he can at least be a gentleman to his valet, and should be. There are plenty of people who make a great effort to please those whom they seldom see, who yet make no effort at all to please those whom they have always with them. They do well enough in certain society, but have no power of adaptation—they want breadth. We all of us do well enough, when left to ourselves—when we can exhibit our humors in our own way, among our own friends. What we want is to be able to do equally well in other directions—to be gentlemen among the ungentlemanly—to so conduct ourselves as not to repress spontaneous manifestations of feeling in any society. To do this we must have a good amount of what is called "mother wit," much tact and much taste, with a broad and genial nature.

LETTER FROM BOSTON.

PROPELLER ADVERTISING AGENCY,
No. 15 Washington St.,
Boston, April 12th, 1864.

SPRING TIME.

Behind us lies the winter; but in the quaternary panorama of the seasons, the scenery and atmosphere of each picture encroach upon the domain of its successor, and so, as yet, our Spring is somewhat wintry. We have had a few genial days however, and, tempted by their sunshine, the adventurous blue birds, earliest pilgrims from the south, have come to us in blue and gold—like an edition of the modern poets fresh from the Boston press—and twittered in the suburban orchards an overture to the grand opera that shall be heard anon in the woods and fields. The flowering trees and shrubs, too, taught by their vegetable instincts that there is a good time coming, show on the tips of their lithe twigs a tinge of the season, and we know that the life-blood which, some weeks hence, will flush them with bloom, is already coursing through their ligneous veins. The seals of the frost are broken, and the tender blades of the fall-sown grain, rudiments of the bearded harvest that shall fill the land with bread, are timidly pointing their taper spires toward Heaven.

Those of us who love Nature rejoice in these symptoms, faint as they are, of her lapse from slumber back to life. Would that the morning of the year brought with it only the fair sights and dulcet sounds which are its natural accompaniments! Would that the condition of our country were in harmony with the symbolic voice of the turtle which will soon be heard in the land! But spring opens amid the roar of artillery and the flash of steel. War, furious and relentless, will shower on the vernal herbage blood for dew, "making the green one red." Fire and sword will desolate the plains and valleys and hill-sides that the breath of Heaven is kindling into beauty, and over the germs of plenty will pass the storm of battle, leaving nothing save the grim harvest of the cannon, the rifle, the bayonet, and the sword, behind. It is terrible that such sacrifices should be necessary—that nothing less than such an ordeal of blood and flame can save the nation. But so it is, and we must accept the necessity, bearing patiently as we may the great evil which we trust will prevent a greater—always praying, always hoping that the end is near.

WALTHAM.

We had occasion to visit this pretty little village—not very small however—a few days since. It is one of those quiet suburban villages on the line of the Fitchburg road, but destined to become quite a place, on account of the extensive manufacturing establishments. The principal part of the town appears to be old, but new villages are springing up in every section. The American Watch Co. have their manufactory here, employing between 500 and 600 hands, nearly one half of whom are females. With this large force of employees, the company find it almost impossible to fill their orders, and a large addition is shortly to be made to the manufactory. There is also a cotton mill, which is now running on full time, or with its usual complement of girls. The ride from Boston to Waltham by the Watertown branch is very pleasant, passing through the villages of Somerville, by Porter's and Fresh pond. Who has not heard of these last two places, and what visions of sleigh rides, skating, etc., they bring to view! We pass also through to Watertown, and by Mt. Auburn. One desirable thing is needed at Waltham, and that is a Hotel, for it is almost impossible to find a "stopping place" over night.

SNAKE STORY.

Between the Point of Lookout Mountain and Bridgeport, down the Valley of the Tennessee, lies twenty-five miles of dead mules, in one continuous string; the head of the first carcass lying on the "quarter-deck" of the one beyond him, and so on, throughout the entire distance. Just imagine a convulsion of nature of sufficient magnitude to bury these remains as they now lie, and phancy the pheelinx of a future Agassiz, who, in his geological researches, strikes either of the termini, and attempts to exhume the entire "snake." Won't it knock the socks off the saurians of the deluvian period? Twenty-five miles of vertbæ with two pedal arrangements every three feet! What a bully side-show for a future circus! It will probably be called "the old he copperhead of the Rebellion period," admission ten cents — peace Democrats half price.

THE FINE ARTS.

As is well known to most of my friends and acquaintances, the lady we reside with, devotes most of her leisure hours from domestic duties to the art she so much loves—painting. She is engaged at the present time on some beautiful descriptive views of the White Mountains. Those who have seen them pronounce them life-like. She would be happy to use her brush and easel for the benefit of any one wishing anything copied, at a moderate price. Orders left at our agency will be promptly attended to.

TIT-BITS.

It must be very amusing, down South, to hear the "colored folk" talk, who are in possession of the plantations they formerly worked for their white masters.—They all seek for white laborers, it seems. One negro is not disposed to work for another, even at high wages. A correspondent at New Orleans writes, that he heard one colored woman exclaim, "She would hire white men and women to do her work at twenty dollars a month apiece before she would allow a nigger to set foot on her plantation." Here is a chance for the "poor white trash."

English people don't always tell the truth. A butcher accounted for the cheapness of his neighbor's pork, by gravely telling an old lady that the pork was American, and did not cost anything, as it was fattened upon dead soldiers, who were always picked up after a battle and given to the pigs.

The Boston Transcript thinks that the true reason why Gen. Neal Dow did not take the opportunity to escape with the other prisoners was because "he was so much of a temperance man that he disliked to go through a tunnel."

☞ A case of starvation in the streets of London, is called by a high toned English paper death "from a morbid antipathy to the work-house."

☞ The reason an old maid is generally so devoted to her cat is, that, not having a husband, she naturally takes to the next most treacherous animal.

☞ A romantic young man says that a woman's heart is like the moon, it changes continually, but always has a man in it.

Selected Poetry.

THE BATTLE-STAINED FLAG.

Look at that flag and think where it has been,
Look at that flag and think what it has seen,
With its folds all begrimm'd,
And its stars all bedimm'd;
It has been through the fight I ween;
Yes, 'twas there when the foremost rank wavered and broke,
When the battle-field's pall was the cannon's grim smoke,
It was there in the volley—the charge and the shock—
Hurrah for that flag!

We love that old flag, though now tattered and torn;
When it entered the fray that clear summer's morn;
It was radiantly bright
As Heaven's own light,
At the head of the column 'twas gallantly borne;
It was there when the hosts of the foeman appear'd,
And their emblem of treason defiantly rear'd.
It looked on and it waved while our noble men cheered—
The dear old flag!

When the sergeant who carried it fell at his post,
And the centre position reluctantly lost,
For a moment it fell
Midst the clash and the knell
That ever attend the onslaught of a host;
But a brave volunteer with a cheer and a shout,
Upraised the old banner and flung its folds out,
And it wept bloody tears o'er the carnage and rout—
That battle-stained flag!

The Minnie balls pierced it, and cannon-balls tore,
It was riven with sabres and spattered with gore,
But the noble old flag
Dared the minions of Bragg;
And the "Red, White and Blue" was the same as of yore,
As when first to the breeze its bright folds were flung,
When it heard the glad strains of "Columbia" first sung,
Then the birth-peals of freedom were joyfully rung—
And the world saw our flag!

Preserve the dear fragments, that nations may see
How we honor and cherish the Flag of the Free;
Long, long may it wave
O'er the home of the brave,
Who have sworn to defend it by land and by sea;
Salute it with volleys, applaud it with cheers,
'Tis the emblem of Freedom—to ages of years—
Preserve it with love and embalm it with tears—
The battle-stained flag.

A REMARKABLE PREDICTION OF DOUGLAS IN 1861.

Here I will pause a moment to state a most remarkable prediction made by Douglas in January, 1861. The statement is furnished to me by General C. B. Stewart, of New York, a gentleman of the highest respectability.

Douglas was asked by General Stewart, (who was making a New Year's call on Mr. Douglas,) "What will be the result of the efforts of Jefferson Davis and his associates to divide the Union?" Douglas replied, "The cotton States are making an effort to draw in the border States to their schemes of secession, and I am too fearful they will succeed. If they do succeed, there will be the most terrible civil war the world has ever seen, lasting for years. Virginia will become a charnel house; but the end will be the triumph of the Union cause. One of their first efforts will be to take possession of this capital to give them prestige abroad, but they will never succeed in taking it; the North will rise en masse to defend it; but it will become a city of hospitals; the churches will be used for the sick and wounded, and even the Minnesota block (now the Douglas Hospital) may be devoted to that purpose before the end of the war." General Stewart enquired "What justification is there for all this? Douglas replied, "There is no justification nor any pretence of any. If they will remain in the Union I will go as far as the Constitution will permit to maintain their just rights, and I do not doubt but a majority of Congress will do the same. But," said he, rising on his feet and extending his arm, "If the Southern States attempt to secede from this Union without further cause, I am in favor of their having just so many slaves, and just so much slave territory, as they can hold at the point of the bayonet, and no more."

We take the above from a speech of Hon. Isaac N. Arnold, of Illinois, delivered in the House of Representatives, on the 19th of last month. We doubt not that to-day, if Douglas were living, he would be as firm a supporter of the Administration, Emancipation Proclamation and all, as any man amongst us. We doubt it not, because we believe him to have been thoroughly devoted to the Union, willing and eager to do everything possible to preserve and perpetuate it, and he knew history enough and possessed common sense enough to perceive that as slavery was the cause of the rebellion, an assumed peace would only come after its destruction. The American people are fast learning to believe the same, and the picture brightens day by day.—Manchester Mirror.

THE OLD BELL TAVERN.

This ancient building, situated near the Danvers monument, an engraved view of which may be seen in Barber's Historical collections, is now partly demolished, and will soon be entirely removed, with a view of having its site occupied by new and more sightly erections.—Long before the separation from the mother country, the colonists in their various wanderings, sought this place for shelter and refreshment; and right glad was the jolly host to fulfil the promise of his signboard, "Entertainment for man and beast." Nor to the wayfarer alone was its promise extended. This was the common centre of resort for the villagers to learn the news of passing events and every traveller was expected to furnish his quota. It was the village Exchange, where prices and every day gossip were discussed, and the public affairs of the colonies and the mother country settled. Here, too, on Sundays, the more remote villagers dismounted from their beasts at the old horse-block, and walked to the meeting-house, again to return after the two hours' sermon and partake in a snug corner, of a dinner from their well filled saddlebags. This was also the place, where the people of that and later times met, to celebrate public events. The loyal neighbors here collected, to mourn the demise of the good Queen Anne and rejoice in the accession of the first George. His departure and the rise of his son George II, were here commemorated over the same bowl of punch. George III, was also welcomed with a zeal that was only equalled by that with which they drank confusion to his ministers. The odious Stamp Act and all Parliament taxes on the colonies were patriotically denounced. Tea was proscribed and its sale forbidden, under penalty of a ride on a rail and the brand of toryism. One conviction only took place, and the unlucky wight obtained a reprieve from his sentence, by furnishing the villagers with a bucket of punch. His neighbors kindly gave him a share of the beverage, obliging him to repeat over his cup three times, the following elegant couplet:—

I, Isaac Wilson, a tory I be;
I, Isaac Wilson, I sell tea.

But our ancestors, however willing from patriotic considerations to deny themselves this luxury, found great difficulty in preventing the gentle sex from partaking the forbidden fruit. They found means to procure and opportunities to prepare their favorite nectar, in spite of all the vigilance of the men. They would evade every searching operation, get up quiltings and other parties, where it was not expected men would be present, and sip their stolen waters in secret.

It was well known at the tap-room of the Bell Tavern that these proceedings were going on, and it was strongly suspected that a certain enormous coffee pot, a few sizes smaller than a common light-house, had some agency in the business, as it was always seen migrating from place to place where the good dames held their meetings. One evening a large party assembled at the house of one of their number; taking advantage of the well known habits of the master of the house, who was never known to quit his seat at the ample fire-place of the inn until all his companions had departed, they resolved to enjoy their usual feast in security. The great coffee pot, in which the tea had been previously put, was brought forward, the water added, and the whole left to simmer on the hearth. The savory mess was now poured out, with many a sly joke at the expense of the men in general, and a compliment to Isaac in particular. Many were the encomiums on the superiority of the tea, which every one declared was the best she had ever drank. It was finally thought that its strength and flavor were owing to its having been boiled and steeped longer than usual. Its extraordinary richness was almost intoxicating; tongues were loosened, and mirth and hilarity prevailed. Their wits ran out and so did the tea. More water was added to the leaves, and a weaker decoction was drawn, until again the vessel was empty. A third time the water was poured in and the tea ran out. The time had now nearly arrived when by possibility the good man of the house might be expected home, and it was time to put the coffee grounds into the coffee pot, but first a place of burial must be made in the tan back log for the remains of the tea. The lid was removed, and by a dexterous jerk the contents, consisting not only of tea leaves, but a huge overgrown toad, speckled and bloated, lay sprawling before them on the hearth! A simultaneous scream from twenty female voices, accompanied by the heaving of as many stomachs, announced the appalling discovery, and sufficiently explained the cause of the peculiar richness of their beverage. It is said that the discovery accomplished the effects that are said to have been produced by Chambers's medicine on another class of drinkers, and that for some time after, tea was less in demand than it was ever before known in the village.

The old Bell Tavern was also a favorite resort for negro parties of pleasure, when the bond and free, black and yellow sons of Africa came from all the neighboring towns, and even from Boston, marching into the village in procession, to the sound of military music, where they were received by an old sable resident, in the most approved style of negro tactics, who conducted them to their quarters at the sign of the Bell. It was at such times that every room resounded with joyous and boisterous merriment. The long loud laugh, such grinning rows of ivory, that proud array of sable beauty, such exuberance of lip, those protruding white eyes, and that uncombed mass of wool, all in contrast with the finery of their white dresses, presented a scene worthy the pencil of a Hogarth or a Cruikshank.

Various were the scenes which transpired in "auld lang syne" at the ancient tap-room of the wooden Bell, where congregated the village politicians and other loafers of the Middle Precinct. How they watched the glowing embers where the loggerheads were heating, as they consulted over the public welfare, and with what pertinacity did they adhere to their arguments and their mugs of flip.—What floods of ale and oceans of punch there flowed to enliven the wits of the jolly roysters on Election days. With what zest did they sail up and down the merry dance in the South room, to the music of Cæsar's fiddle, and with what gusto would he grin a ghastly smile as he deposited the shower of silver pieces in his capacious mouth.

It was at this Inn that Col. Timothy Pickering's troops halted on their march to Bunker Hill, and here the soldiers were supplied with refreshment by a good Quaker dame, who pleaded the duties of humanity as an excuse for her patriotism, saying she would not encourage the warriors to fight, yet she would invite them to eat.

Here, too, was the closing scene of the history of Eliza Wharton, a name interesting to the readers of romance as the heroine of the story bearing this assumed name. It was at the window of the South chamber that she used to sit and while away the heavy hours at her needle or guitar. Her appearance here was a fruitful theme of wonder and mystery to the village gossips, and a most intense curiosity was roused in regard to the "strange lady" at the Bell Tavern. This interest had so far extended at the time of her death, that the last line of the inscription on her gravestone may be said to be almost literally true:—"The tears of strangers watered her grave." Her remains were attended to their present resting place by almost the whole population of the village, as well as by many from the neighboring towns. Her grave is now frequently visited by those who take an interest in her story, and the grave stones are nearly demolished by their anxiety to carry away some memento of their visit. To such it may be satisfactory to learn that in removing one of the chimneys of the old house, in a small recess connected with the closet of her chamber, several articles have been recovered which possess some interest. A small bundle of letters, as well as copies of those she wrote, are among the most important, as throwing additional light on her history. An old guitar, by the music of which her own voice was frequently accompanied as she sat alone in her chamber. A small old fashioned silver. [illegible] with the initials "E W." A curious round pin ball, to which was attached a faded blue ribbon, such as used formerly to hang dangling from the wrists of dames of olden time, and several other articles of the toilet interesting to the curious. Perhaps some of the letters may possess sufficient interest for publication, and it is presumed, in the mean time, that there can be no objection to having the originals examined by any who choose to do so, as well as the other articles, by applying at the store of Mr. Amos Trask, near the Monument.

RECONSTRUCTION.

We inserted in last week's issue a well written communication, reviewing some observations we have heretofore published. Although we by no means agree with the reasoning nor with the conclusions of the writer, yet we recognize in him one whom we have long known as a sincere and loyal supporter of the government, and one whose opinions are entitled to the most respectful consideration. Our journal is the organ of no party, and under no censorship; we therefore tolerate, and indeed we invite, the same freedom and independence of expression on the part of our correspondents that we exercise ourselves. We would remind our old friend that we have no throne in our Sanctum—nothing but an old arm chair—and we issue no edicts, and lay no claim to infallibility. We ask no more exemption from criticism in what we write ourselves, than in what our correspondents write.

We did not claim that a State could commit the technical crime of treason.—Our view is that the people of an individual State are the principal object which the Constitution recognizes, and the State — meaning the government which the people organize—is the secondary object. The State government cannot exist without the people, and whenever the people cease to exist, or secede from the Union, their State government necessarily ceases to exist, in any form which the Federal Constitution can recognize. Not that an indictment could be maintained against a State as a criminal. We cannot conceive of the existence of a State government where there are no people.

Theoretically, it is true, a State once in the Union, is always in the Union. But we must distinguish between theoretical dogmas and practical truths. No government can in theory admit that there is any mode by which it can be destroyed. Yet the right of revolution as a practical fact exists under all governments. What if by some sudden convulsion of nature the waters of the Pacific should submerge the State of California, and destroy every one of its citizens, and after a year's time the water should recede and leave the land as before, though without a living being on it? Would it be contended that the State of California would still exist as an independent sovereignty and the general government would have nothing to do with the territory? Now we think that in such a contingency as this, the State of California as a political community, or as a government, would cease to exist, and that it would be competent for the general government to resume its jurisdiction over the territory. Just so where the waves of rebellion have overrun a State and swept into the Dead Sea of treason every one of its people; in such case they are as much cut loose from all connection with the Federal Government and the Constitution as if they had suffered a natural death; and the government may interpose under their right of eminent domain, and treat the territory thus abandoned as its own, and prescribe for it all needful rules and regulations.

It seems to us that when South Carolina votes to secede from the Union—takes up arms and fights against the general government three years—she may be very reasonably considered as out of the Union, de facto, and all her rights under the Federal Constitution may be regarded as forfeited, and her territory be justly liable to be taken charge of by the general government—her people held in subjection till they are ready to come back into the Union under a Constitution, republican in fact as well as in name.—This is the mode of reconstruction we have a right to adopt, and which we ought to adopt if we have the power to do so.

It is true that this manner of dealing with the rebellious States would not result in the general emancipation of the slaves throughout the country, as there are several slave States already in the Union whose social characteristics would not be directly operated upon. But in those States we could very well await the result of moral influences already at work which will be sure to overcome this institution very shortly, especially if it ceases to exist in the disloyal States.—Besides, there is a more summary way of despatching slavery in these loyal States; that is, by an amendment of the Constitution. We can see no moral or political objection to amending the Constitution—though we confess that there seems now to be some practical difficulty in bringing it about. What is there about that instrument so sacred? Nothing but its recognition of the "peculiar institution." The most of this talk about the sacredness of the Constitution is downright cant. We amend our own State Constitution whenever, in the progress of events and change of circumstances, it is necessary. Not that the two cases are exactly parallel, but there is considerable analogy between them. We distinctly remember of hearing the last political speech the venerable JOSIAH QUINCY, senior, ever made. It was several years before the war broke out. He denounced the encroachments of the slave power in good set terms. He said the North had submitted long enough to the haughty insolence of the slave power—it could not suffer much longer—it was the last straw that breaks the camel's back. Said he, in conclusion: "We can have no peace and no political virtue till the Constitution of the United States is amended and every clause recognizing, directly or indirectly, the idea of property in man is stricken out of it."

Many "Straight Whigs," who thought the Constitution an inspired document, were present, and listened with as much patience as they could; but they winced like "galled jades." Although Mr. QUINCY's words were then generally regarded as almost fanatical, the sequel has shown that they were simply prophetic.

FAST DAY DISCOURSE.

The discourse of Rev. Mr. BARBER, of South Danvers, was founded on the appropriate words in Hosea 5: 6. "And the revolters are profound to make slaughter, though I have been a rebuker of them all." From this portion of ancient history, which has repeated itself in our time, the preacher went on to consider some of the reasons why God permits success, while at the same time he rebukes the causes of it. He argued that partial success in evil ways is no indication of divine favor, and that in the principles of law by which he has chosen to govern the world, men had rights which were not interfered with even when evil courses were chosen. He also had disciplinary reasons which might apply to the case of those employed to suppress the revolt, on account of their own transgressions. The preacher counselled submission to the Divine will and confidence in the Divine administration of affairs with earnest prayer for God's kingdom to come. The discourse was logical and ingenious, and often eloquent in thought and delivery.

AGRICULTURAL COLLEGE. There seems now good reason to suppose that this much talked of institution will very shortly have its "habitation" as well as name. The present Legislature evince a warm interest in the measure, though there is some friction in arranging the question of location. It is understood that the following named towns are competing for the honor, or advantage, of having the college located within their borders, namely—Amherst, Springfield, Northampton and Lexington. Amherst has offered a bonus as high as $75,000, with certain local facilities. The majority of the House seem disposed to have the Legislature determine the location, while a large minority prefer that it be left to the Governor and Council to decide. We hope that no difference of opinion upon this or any other question of detail will operate to delay the measure.

Massachusetts ought to have been the first in this, as she has generally been in all good works. But two states are ahead of her; Pennsylvania has an Agricultural College, and so has Michigan. We think these two are the only ones in the country. Massachusetts promises to be the third State. The General Government has given us a liberal endowment in money, or what can be turned into money, and we ought to promptly develop it.

OLD BELL TAVERN.—We reproduce upon our first page an article which, at the time of its original appearance in the Salem Gazette, attracted very considerable attention, on account of the historico-romantic reminiscences and suggestions it contained, as well as the latent practical joke lurking in its last paragraph upon one of our quondam citizens distinguished for his antiquarian researches.—The author, is of course, so well known among us as a writer, that it would be needless to give his name. This article cannot be read by those of our fellow townsmen who lived and flourished among us in the Old Bell Tavern era without its awakening the most vivid and pleasant recollection of by-gone days.

SLEIGHING IN APRIL.—We would say for the information of our readers in other latitudes (we don't pretend their number is very great) that there was very tolerable sleighing in our streets yesterday morning, though it lasted only a few hours. But a few hours' sleighing, however, at this season, after our farmers have begun to plant pease and potatoes, is not unworthy of mention and of ungrateful remembrance.

TEACHERS' CONVENTION.—We learn from the Salem Gazette that the annual meeting of the Essex County Teachers' Association, held at Rockport last Friday and Saturday, was unusually interesting and profitable. Addresses were made by Rev. Mr. Owen of Lynn, Henry K. Oliver of Salem, and Rev. Mr. Calthrop of Marblehead. Animated discussions were had, participated in by Mr. Hills of Danvers, Messrs. Hammond, Putnam and Shores of Haverhill, Eaton and Walton of Lawrence, Batchelder, Flint and Senter of Lynn, Beaman and Calthrop of Marblehead, Sargent of Reading, Angier and Barden of Rockport, Barnes, Carlton, Peabody and Warren of Salem, and Philbrick of Boston. Alpheus Crosby of Salem was elected President, and Nathaniel Hills of Danvers, Secretary.

WILD GEESE.—These periodical emigrants seem to have been sadly misled by their generals this Spring. There must be some confusion in their counsels. They commenced their Spring campaign too early, and have had to make a hasty passage back to their Southern retreats, or perish in the cold weather that has prevailed for the past few weeks upon our Northern borders. We have seen several flocks mournfully wending their way back to warmer climes to await more settled weather. As they passed over our heads by moonlight, we observed that they gabbled most earnestly, and we thought they seemed to be finding fault with their leaders who had led them so foolishly into the enemy's country without providing for their subsistence—but perhaps we imagined this!

So. DANVERS, April 12, 1864.

MR. EDITOR,—Is there any reason known to you, or to anybody else, why the public should not be informed of the condition and success of our recruiting business from time to time? There seems to be a great contrariety of statements in circulation as to the number of new recruits we have and the number required. Next Friday is set down as the day the draft is to take place. Is there to be any draft in South Danvers, or are we "out of the draft?" Please institute an investigation and see if you cannot communicate some definite facts upon the subject to

MANY READERS.

SLAVERY.—The United States Senate has passed, by a vote of 38 to 6, a bill for amending the Constitution of the United States. It is feared by the friends of the measure that there may be about two votes less in the House than the two-thirds required by the fifth article of the Constitution. If this amendment passes, as we hope it will, it must be ratified by three-fourths of the several States, acting by their legislatures or by conventions of the people, as Congress may prescribe.

Then, practically, all this will have to be ratified by the Supreme Judicial Court, who are really, to all intents and purposes, the supreme power of the land.

DRAFT.—We would say, as a partial reply to the inquiry made by our correspondent above, we learn that there will be no draft in this Congressional District on Friday Next. We believe that the order of the Government is not that the draft shall take place on the 15th, but as soon after the 15th as is practicable. We learn that it is not practicable to make the draft till next week or week after, as all enlistments in the army and navy up to the 15th must be ascertained and credited on the enrollment. To do this will certainly require several days.

STATE REFORM SCHOOL.—We have received the Seventeenth Annual Report of the State Reform School, which, including the report of the Trustees of the Nautical Branch, makes a pamphlet of 64 pages of matter very interesting to those who have watched the progress of our reformatory institutions. It will be remembered that the experiment of a Nautical School was at first looked upon with much distrust, and it was started not without opposition, but its signal success has won for it the unanimous approval of the public, and its great usefulness is acknowledged by all.

TEMPERANCE CONVENTION.—We bespeak for the Essex South District Temperance Union a full and spirited meeting at their convention in our town to-morrow. If we remember rightly, our townsman, Mr. ISAAC HARDY, is President of the Society. Let there be a full attendance, so that the advocates of this great reform may be encouraged in the good work they have undertaken. An address is expected from Rev. Samuel Kelley, of Lynn.

AN OLD MASON.—Gen. Isaac Eastman, of Concord, N. H., who died week before last, at the advanced age of eighty-four years, was an honorary member of the "Blazing Star Lodge" of Free Masons of Concord, and also an officer of the Grand Lodge of New Hampshire. He was said to be the oldest Free Mason in the State where he resided, having been an associate of that fraternity for more than half a century.

FENOLLOSA'S CONCERT.—We learn from the Gazette that Mr. Fenollosa's Concert on Monday evening of last week, "more than fulfilled the expectations of those who anticipated in a rich musical treat, and was worthy of the cause to which its proceeds were consecrated.—We cannot invade the retirement of private life, to signalize the excellences of the various performers, and where all were so excellent, it would be invidious to name any. We can safely say, however, that the satisfaction of the audience was general and unalloyed."

The proceeds of the Concert will make not an unimportant addition to Mr. Everett's fund for the relief of the sufferers from the rebels in East Tennessee. The sale of tickets amounted to $250.75, from which deducting expenses, $64.50, $186.25 were left of net profit. To this $347.25 were added in subscriptions to the ladies and to Mr. Fenollosa personally.

The Concert was repeated last Monday evening, but on account of the unpleasant weather and uncomfortable walking, was thinly attended

☞ We have received from a member of the Peabody High School the following answer to the arithmetical puzzle recently given in our columns—viz: to arrange the 10 digits so as that they will add up to just one hundred.

$$\begin{array}{r} 7\ \frac{4}{8} \\ 0\ \frac{5\times3}{16} \\ 92 \\ \hline 100 \end{array}$$

This is certainly a solution of the puzzle, but is there no other way to solve the problem?

ROCKVILLE.—We learn that at the annual meeting of the School District in this part of the town, they voted to elect one Prudential Committee instead of three, as they did last year, and that Mr. William Reed was elected to that office, and Henry Moore, Clerk. They also voted to levy a tax of $300, with which to pay the District debt.

Since writing the above we hear that it is found that their District meeting was not properly warned, and therefore its doings are void, and another meeting is called for Monday evening next.

TANNING AND CURRYING.—This business still continues prosperous in our town, and there is much of it being done notwithstanding the strike among the workmen. The strikers are gradually falling back into their old places, or going into other business, so that street idlers are getting much more rare. One result has followed from the strike which is quite noticeable, and is this: there has been a very large accession of American workmen to the currying business to fill the places vacated by foreigners.

SEVENTEENTH REGIMENT.—In response to the inquiry made in our last as to whether this regiment had re-enlisted, we are informed by a member now home on a furlough, that 225 of them have done so, including twelve of the South Danvers Company. At the time they re-enlisted they were promised a 30 days' furlough, but the late rebel raid on the defences at Newbern made it imprudent for them to leave; and it is now doubtful whether they return till their time expires, which will be about the middle of July next.

SUDDEN DEATH.—Mr. Jefferson Putnam, a well known and respected mechanic of our town, died with typhoid fever at about 6 o'clock yesterday morning, after a brief sickness, during which he was not considered dangerously ill.—He was 59 years old last October. He has ever been a consistent and devoted friend of the various moral reforms, and in all respects a valuable citizen. For the last 30 years he has been following the business of last making.

Funeral to-morrow; but we have not heard the hour.

ALMS HOUSE KEEPER.—We hear that Mr. Benjamin Scott, who has been for several years the keeper of our Alms House, has resigned that situation and moved to Salem, where he intends to farm upon his own account. He has faithfully and conscientiously administered the affairs of our Alms House, and our best wishes for his future success attend him.

SINGULAR DEATH.—A young man of Earlon, N. S., was recently taking home a hog, led by a rope, the other end of which was in his hand. The animal ran away, dragged the man down a steep bank, and the rope by some means became twisted round the poor fellow's neck, strangling him. When found, he was dead, with the hog still fastened to his body.]

MURDER TRIAL.—The Supreme Court will commence its Spring Term in Salem next Tuesday. The 26th of May next has been appointed for the second trial of Horace L. Davis, charged with the murder of Mr. Breed of Lynn. It will be recollected that the jury disagreed at the first trial.

APRIL.—In the ancient Alban calender, in which the year was represented as consiting of ten months of irregular length, April stood first, with thirty-six days to its credit. In the calender of Romulus it had the second place, and was composed of thirty days. Numa's twelve-month calendar assigned it the fourth place, with twenty-nine days; and so it remained till the reformation of the year by Julius Cæsar, when it recovered its former thirty days, which it has since retained.

It is comonly supposed that the name was derived from the Latin, aperio, I open, as marking the time when the buds of the trees and flowers open. If this were the case, it would make April singular among the months, for the names of none of the rest, as designated in Latin, have any reference to natural conditions or circumstances. There is not the least probability in the idea. April was considered among the Romans as Venus' month, obviously because of the reproductive powers of nature now set agoing in several of her departments.—The first day was especially set apart as Festum Veneris et Fortuna Virilis. The probability, therefore, is that Aprilis was Aphrilis foundered on the Greek name of Venus (Aphrodite.)

Our Anglo-Saxon forefathers called the month Ostar-monath; and for this appellation the plausible origin assigned is, that it was the month during which east winds prevailed. The term Easter may have come from the same origin.

It is eminently a spring month, and some of the finest weather of the year occasionally takes place in April. Generally, however, it is a month composed of shower and sunshine, rapidly chasing each other; and often a chill is communicated by the east winds.

The first of April, of all the days of the year, enjoys a character of its own, as in so far as it, and it alone, is consecrated to practical joking. The extent to which these jokes are carried, and the variety of their form, need not be alluded to here, as we find nearly the same in vogue now as in the earliest history of the observance of this day.

English antiquaries appear unable to trace the origin of the custom, or say how long it has existed. The fact that the Hindoos have in their Huli, which terminates in the first of March, a precisely similar festival, and that in all the countries of Europe the 1st of April is a day in which to fool their neighbors, seem to indicate that it had a very early origin amongst mankind. — Woburn Townsman.

WATTS' CONCERT IN SALEM, last Thursday afternoon and evening, helped to wear away the usual tediousness of Fast Day. The chorus consisted of some 150 voices; and, as a new feature in this progressive age, we noticed some five or six little mulatto girls in company with the others. Their color didn't affect their singing in the least. If our eyes had been shut, we certainly should have supposed we were listening to white voices, although they didn't sing any better than the white children, but they sung very well.

FLORAL.—If any of our readers would like to see the most beautiful rose-bush that ever bloomed in town, they can do so gratis, at the store of our neighbor Mr. B. F. Stevens.

GOLD.—This article yesterday reached 174,—the highest point attained since the war began.

THAT SHARK.—We are informed that several parties from out of town have endeavored to negotiate for the skin of the shark mentioned in our last paper. Their object was to have it preserved and placed in some one of the museums. Barnum, however, was the first to make application, and undoubtedly he will be the lucky individual.—Cape Ann Advertiser.

WARREN BANK.—We hear that this Bank is about to take the necessary steps for organizing under the new United States banking law. We notice that this is being done very generally by the banks in this vicinity; how it is in other parts of the country, we have not the means of judging.

WILLIAM D. TICKNOR, Esq., of the well known publishing firm of Ticknor & Fields, of Boston, died suddenly on Sunday morning, at the Continental Hotel, Philadelphia. He was a high minded, honorable man, and a most estimable citizen. He was about 54 years of age.

A GREAT LOT.—Mrs. Lott, the wife of John Lott, residing in Muhlenburg county, Kentucky, a few days since gave birth to four bouncing boys. Less than eleven months ago she gave birth to twins.

Six babies a year! What a lot!

POLITICS.—The Democratic prints claim that there is a very large increase of their vote exhibited in the recent local elections of Pennsylvania. The gain is stated to be as high as 50,000.

☞ The democrats opposed the proposition in the New Jersey Assembly to allow the soldiers at home to vote, and it was lost.

SPRING.

Whether peace and all its blessings are spreading happiness and prosperity over the realm, or the cankering and corroding influences of intestine war are sending broadcast over the land their blighting and withering cruelties and woes—still there is One Great power that never changes its course—the Great Jehovah still keeps on unwavering and unchanging, — his great law knows no variableness or shadow of turning. The seasons revolve in their order, as they have done since God spake the nations into being;—we have Summer and Winter, seed time and harvest, as has been the order of things all along through all the vicissitudes, all the changes, all the joys and all the sorrows that have affected humanity since the day when the Almighty said let there be light and there was light.

The Spring is upon us now—the opening and expanding of that glorious breaking away from the cold thraldom of Winter, and the glorious promise of a productive Summer and an abundant Autumn, are to-day before us to awaken our energies and invigorate our action towards the general prosperity of our immediate vicinity in particular, and all the world in general. We know of no place on the whole of God's footstool to which we wish prosperity and happiness more sincerely than to South Danvers. Our fortunes are cast with this people—our hopes and our fears, our joys and our sorrows are associated with their fortunes. May God prosper this town and its generous citizens, is our ardent prayer. The opening of Spring suggests to all thinking minds the opening and expanding of every energy for the benefit of both individual and general interest.

Let every one in this community awaken with the Spring to new energy, to new life; let life and light prevail in every branch of business among us; let fortune—good fortune—continue to crown the efforts of all those who have cast their bread, as it were, upon the waters; let them reap a harvest of prosperity and a fullness of earthly joys. The God of all the earth will do right, and the storms and darkness, turmoil and war surround us—yet will his immaculate wisdom, his infinite justice and unchanging purpose make all things right. God rules in a mysterious way, but always right. All the clouds and all the darkness which now o'er hang us, will in his own good time pass away and the bright sun of prosperity break out through the general gloom. Let the returning Spring arouse us all to life and energy, and may all the blessings justly merited by a will and a wish to make good the condition of our race be showered upon the heads of the citizens of South Danvers. H. D. J.

BUTTER PLEDGE.—It is proposed by some philanthropic individuals to circulate a pledge among the heads of families in this community, whereby they agree to abstain from the use of butter altogether, until it comes down to a fair price. We hope the matter will be thoroughly done, as such a course would do more to bring the speculators to a realizing sense of their wickedness, than any other method. Pass around the butter pledges in every town and city, and it won't be long ere butter will be cheaper. This game of picking away the earnings of the working classes has been played full long enough, by a non-producing class of harpies. Now let the people put their veto upon it in such a manner as will learn these speculators a lesson which will not soon be forgotten.—Cape Ann Advertiser.

☞ The loss to the Masonic Fraternity by the destruction of the Winthrop House, by fire last week, was very severe, as their hall was magnificently furnished. Several valuable portraits and charters were destroyed, which, of course, cannot be replaced. Among the portraits were those of Paul Revere, Gen. Warren and his brother, Henry Price, who was Grand Master in 1733. Of the charters destroyed were that of the Massachusetts Lodge, signed by Gen. Warren, and the Columbian Lodge, signed by Paul Revere.

☞ Two gentlemen fishing, sharp boy appears. "Well, sir, git any bites?"—"Lots of 'em." "Y-e-s, under your hat." Race between boy and sundry stones—boy a little ahead.

☞ The tomb of Voltaire was recently examined and found to be empty, and no one knows where lie the remains of the Prophet of the French Revolution.

☞ Many of the waves of trouble, like those of the ocean, will, if we await them calmly, break at our feet and disappear.

☞ As riches and favor forsake a man, we discover him to be a fool—but nobody could find it out in his prosperity.

☞ Water is to be brought from the river Jordan to baptize the English Prince.

A LECTURE FOR YOUNG MEN.

Just published, a new edition of Dr. Culverwell's Celebrated Essay on the radical cure (without medicine) of SPERMATORRHŒA, or Seminal Weakness, Involuntary Seminal Losses, IMPOTENCY, Mental and Physical Incapacity, Impediments to Marriage, etc.; also, Consumption, Epilepsy and Fits, induced by self-indulgence or sexual extravagance.

☞ Price, in a sealed envelope, only 6 cents.

The celebrated author in this admirable essay clearly demonstrates from a thirty years successful practice, that the alarming consequences of self-abuse may be radically cured without the dangerous use of internal medicine or the application of the knife—pointing out a mode of cure, at once simple, certain and effectual, by means of which every sufferer, no matter what his condition may be, may cure himself cheaply, privately and radically.

This Lecture should be in the hands of every youth and every man in the land.

Special Notices.

BELL'S SPECIFIC PILLS.—WARRANTED IN ALL CASES.—Can be relied on! Never fail to cure! Do not nauseate! Are speedy in action! No change of diet required! Do not interfere with business pursuits! Can be used without detection! Upward of 200 cures the past month—some of them very severe cases. Over one hundred physicians have used them in their practice, and all speak well of their efficacy, and approve of their composition, which is entirely vegetable and harmless on the system. Hundreds of certificates can be shown.

BELL'S SPECIFIC PILLS are the original and only genuine Specific Pill. They are adapted for male and female, old or young, and the only reliable remedy for effecting a permanent and speedy cure in all cases of Spermatorrhea, or Seminal Weakness, with all its train of evils, such as Urethral and Vaginal Discharges, Gleet, the Whites, Nightly or Involuntary Emissions, Incontinence, Genital Debility and Irritability, Impotence, Weakness or Loss of Power, Nervous Debility, &c., &c., all of which arise principally from Sexual Excesses or Self-Abuse, or some constitutional derangement, and incapacitates the sufferer from fulfilling the duties of married life. In all sexual diseases, as Gonorrhea, Gleet, and Strictures, and in Diseases of the Bladder and Kidneys, they act as a charm! Relief is experienced by taking a single box. Sold by all the principal druggists. Price $1.

They will be sent by mail securely sealed, and confidentially, on receipt of the money, by

J. BRYAN, M. D,
No. 76 Cedar street, New York,

Consulting Physician for the treatment of Seminal, Urinary, Sexual, and Nervous Diseases, who will send, free to all, the following valuable work, in sealed envelope:

THE FIFTIETH THOUSAND.—DR. BELL'S TREATISE on Self-Abuse, Premature Decay, Impotence and Loss of Power, Sexual Diseases, Seminal Weakness, Nightly Emissions, Genital Debility, &c., &c., a pamphlet of 64 pages, containing important advice to the afflicted, and which should be read by every sufferer, as the means of cure in the severest stages is plainly set forth. Two stamps required to pay postage. December 9, 1863—1 yr.

IMPORTANT TO LADIES.—DR. HARVEY'S FEMALE PILLS have never yet failed in removing difficulties arising from obstruction, or stoppage of nature, or in restoring the system to perfect health when suffering from Spinal Affections, Prolapsus, Uteri, the Whites, or other weakness of the Uterine Organs. The Pills are perfectly harmless on the constitution, and may be taken by the most delicate female without causing distress—the same time they act like a charm by strengthening, invigorating and restoring the system to a healthy condition, and by bringing on the monthly period with regularity, no matter from what causes the obstruction may arise. They should, however, NOT be taken during the first three or four months of pregnancy, though safe at any other time, as miscarriage would be the result.

Each box contains 60 Pills. Price $1.

DR. HARVEY'S TREATISE on Diseases of Females, Pregnancy, Miscarriage, Barrenness, Sterility, Reproduction, and Abuses of Nature, and emphatically the Ladies' Private Medical Adviser, a pamphlet of 64 pages, sent free to any address. Six cents required to pay postage

The Pills and book will be sent by mail when desired, securely sealed, and prepaid, by

J. BRYAN, M. D, General Agent,
No. 76 Cedar street, New York.

☞ Sold by all the principal druggists.
December 9, 1863—1 yr.

TERRIBLE DISCLOSURES—SECRETS FOR THE MILLION!—A most valuable and wonderful publication. A work of 400 pages, and 30 colored engravings. DR. HUNTER'S VADE MECUM, an original and popular treatise on Man and Woman, their Physiology, Functions, and Sexual Disorders of every kind, with Never-Failing Remedies for their speedy cure. The practice of Dr. Hunter has long been, and still is, unbounded, but at the earnest solicitation of numerous persons, he has been induced to extend his medical usefulness through the medium of his "Vade Mecum." It is a volume that should be in the hands of every family in the land, as a preventive of secret vices, or as a guide for the alleviation of one of the most awful and destructive scourges ever visited mankind. One copy, securely enveloped, will be forwarded free of postage to any part of the United States for 50 cents in post office stamps or 3 copies for $1. Address, post paid, DR. HUNTER, No. 3 Dvision Street, New York. je 3—1y

HOSTETTER'S
CELEBRATED
STOMACH BITTERS.

A pure and powerful Tonic, corrective and alterative of wonderful efficacy in disease of the Stomach, Liver and Bowels.

Cures Dyspepsia, Liver Complaint, Headache, Debility, Nervousness, Depression of Spirits, Constipation, Colic, Intermittent Fevers, Cramps and Spasms, and all Complaints of either Sex, arising from Bodily Weakness whether inherent in the system or produced by special causes.

Nothing that is not wholesome, genial and restorative in its nature enters into the composition of HOSTETTER'S STOMACH BITTERS. This popular preparation contains no mineral of any kind, no deadly botanical element; no fiery excitant; but it is a combination of the extracts of rare balsamic herbs and plants with the purest and mildest of all diffusive stimulants.

It is well to be forearmed against disease, and, so far as the human system can be protected by human means against maladies engendered by an unwholesome atmosphere, impure water and other external causes, HOSTETTER'S BITTERS may be relied on as a safeguard.

In districts infested with Fever and Ague, it has been found infallible as a preventive and irresistible as a remedy and thousands who resort to it under apprehension of an attack, escape the scourage; and thousands who neglect to avail themselves of its protective qualities in advance, are cured by a very brief course of this marvelous medicine. Fever and Ague patients, after being plied with quinine for months in vain, until fairly saturated with that dangerous alkaloid, are not unfrequently restored to health within a few days by the use of HOSTETTER'S BITTERS.

The weak stomach is rapidly invigorated and the appetite restored by this agreeable Tonic, and hence it works wonders in cases of DISPEPSIA and in less confirmed forms of INDIGESTION. Acting as a gentle and painless aperient, as well as upon the liver, it also invariably relieves the CONSTIPATION superinduced by irregular action of the digestive and secretive organs.

Persons of feeble habit, liable to Nervous Attacks, Lowness of Spirits and Fits of Languor, find prompt and permanent relief from the Bitters. The testimony on this point is most conclusive, and from both sexes.

The agony of BILIOUS COLIC is immediately assuaged by a single dose of the stimulant, and by occasionally resorting to it, the return of the complaint may be prevented.

As a General Tonic, HOSTETTER'S BITTERS produce effects which must be experienced or witnessed before they can be fully appreciated. In cases of Constitutional Weakness, Premature Decay and Debility and Decrepitude arising from OLD AGE, it exercises the electric influence. In the convalescent stages of all diseases it operates as a delightful invigorant. When the powers of nature are relaxed, it operates to re-enforce and re-establish them.

Last, but not least, it is The Only Safe Stimulant, being manufactured from sound and innocuous materials, and entirely free from the acid elements present more or less in all the ordinary tonics and stomachies of the day.

No family medicine has been so universally, and, it may be truly added, deservedly popular with the intelligent portion of the community, as HOSTETTER'S BITTERS.

HELMBOLD'S
GENUINE PREPARATIONS.

COMPOUND FLUID EXTRACT BUCHU, a Positive and Specific Remedy for diseases of the Bladder, Kidneys, Gravel, and Dropsical Swellings.

This Medicine increases the power of Digestion, and excite the Absorbents into healthy action, by which the Wtaery or Calcareous depositions, and all Unnatural Enlargements are reduced, as well as Pain and Inflammation.

—:o:—

HELMBOLD'S EXTRACT BUCHU.

For Weaknesses arising from Excesses, Habits of Dissipation, Early Indiscretion of Abuse, attended with the following symptoms:—

Indisposition to Exertion, Loss of Power,
Loss of Memory, Difficulty of Breathing,
Weak Nerves, Trembling,
Horror of Disease, Wakefulness,
Dimness of Vision, Pain in the Back,
Universal Lassitude of the Muscular System,
Hot Hands, Flushing of the Body,
Dryness of the Skin, Eruptions on the Face,
Pallid Countenance.

These symptoms, if allowed to go on, which this medicine invariably removes, soon follows

Impotency, Fatuity, Epileptic Fits,

In one of which the patient may expire.

Who can say that they are not frequently followed by those "Direful Diseases,"

"INSANITY AND CONSUMPTION."

Many are aware of the cause of their suffering, BUT NONE WILL CONFESS THE RECORDS OF THE INSANE ASYLUMS.

And Melancholy Deaths by Consumption bear ample witness to the Truth of the assertion.

The Constitution once effected with Organic Weakness requires the aid of Medicine to Strengthen and Invigorate the system,

Which HELMBOLD'S EXTRACT BUCHU invariably does. A Trial will convince the most skeptical.

—:o:—

FEMALES—FEMALES—FEMALES.

In many Affections peculiar to Females the EXTRACT BUCHU is unequalled by any other remedy, as in Chlorosis or Retention, Irregularity, Painfulness, or Suppression of Customary Evacuations, Ulcerated Schirrous state of the Uterus, Leuchorrhœa or Whites, Sterility, and for all complaints incident to the sex, whether arising from indiscretion or Habits of Dissipation, or in the

DECLINE OR CHANGE OF LIFE.

—:o:—

Take no more Balsam, Mercury, or unpleasant Medicines for unpleasant and dangerous diseases.

HELMBOLD'S EXTRACT BUCHU AND IMPROVED ROSE WASH CURES

SECRET DISEASES

In all their Stages, At little Expense.
Little or no change in Diet. No inconvenience.
And no Exposure.

It causes a frequent desire and gives strength to Urinate, thereby Removing Obstructions, Preventing and Curing Strictures of the Urethra, allaying Pain and Inflammation, so frequent in this class of diseases, and expelling all Poisonous, Diseased and wornout Matter.

Thousands upon Thousands who have been the Victims of Quacks, and who have paid heavy fees to be cured in a short time, have found they were deceived, and that the "POISON" has, by the use of "Powerful Astringents," been dried up in the system, to break out in an aggravated form, and perhaps after Marriage.

Use HELMBOLD'S EXTRACT BUCHU for all affections and diseases of the URINARY ORGANS, whether existing in MALE or FEMALE, from whatever cause originating and no matter of HOW LONG STANDING.

Diseases of these Organs requires the aid of a DIURETIC. HELMBOLD'S EXTRACT BUCHU IS THE GREAT DIURETIC, and is certain to have the desired effect in all Diseases for which it is Recommended.

Evidence of the most reliable and responsible character will accompany the medicine.

STURGIS'S
ELECTRIC COMPOUND!
AN EFFECTUAL CURE FOR
NEURALGIA AND RHEUMATISM.

Also, invaluable for Spinal Irritation, Hip Complaints, Ague in the Face, Tooth Ache, Pain in the Side, Back, Limbs, Ear Ache, Lumbago, &c.

The proprietor, in offering this medicine to the public, desires to state that this preparation does not belong to the class called patent medicines. Its value has been tested for many years, and it has been found fully adequate to the removal of many obstinate cases of the above complaints, which other celebrated remedies had failed to reach, and which had baffled the skill of eminent physicians. The proprietor does not claim that it will cure but one class of disease. All persons who are afflicted with any of these complaints are earnestly requested to try this Compound and judge for themselves.

AMONG THE ADVANTAGES OF THIS MEDICINE ARE THE FOLLOWING:

Its effect is very rapid—in most cases instantaneous.
It is external in its application, and the patient runs no risk in using it. It does not strike to the stomach.
It reaches the nerves and muscles, as it is believed no other medicine does.
It has cured some of the most violent and obstinate cases of Neuralgia ever known.
It can be used on a child or on an aged person alike.
While it is very powerful, it is perfectly harmless.

The proprietor has been allowed to publish the names of many persons who have used the Compound with the most beneficial results. He inserts here a few of them. They are among the most respectable citizens of Boston, and their residences and places are given:

And many others.

The proprietor is permitted to publish the following letter from O. C. Pitkin, Esq., Principal of the High School in the city of Chelsea, and well known as one of the most successful teachers in New England:

CHELSEA, April 30, 1863.

FRIEND WILLIAMS:—Yours of the 26th is received. My wife was troubled with severe Neuralgia in the face. She tried your Compound with decidedly good effect. I think it is an excellent article, and have recommended it in one instance, where it also produced good effect. You certainly have the liberty to refer it to me.

With much respect, yours truly,
O. C. PITKIN.

THE MONROE DOCTRINE.

In 1823 President Monroe, in his annual message to Congress, wrote as follows:

"We owe it, therefore, to candor and to the amicable relations existing between the United States and those powers [the allied powers of Europe] to declare, that we should consider any attempt on their part to extend their system to any portion of this hemisphere as dangerous to our peace and safety. With the existing colonies or dependencies of any European power, we have not interfered, and shall not interfere. But with the governments who have declared their independence, and maintained it, and whose independence we have, on great consideration and just principles, acknowledged, we could not view any interposition for the purpose of oppressing them, or controlling in any other manner their destiny, by any European power, in any other light than as the manifestation of an unfriendly disposition towards the United States. * * * It is impossible that the allied powers should extend their political system to any portion of either continent without endangering their peace and happiness; nor can any one believe that our southern brethren [the South American States] if left to themselves, would adopt it of their own accord."

This was the sentiment of our country in 1823. And if there has been any political sentiment more generally entertained and more constantly announced by the leading statesmen of our country, of all parties, than this, we don't know what it is.

Free government is indigenous to the American continent. Republicanism is its natural growth. Monarchical governments are foreign and unnatural. They cannot be acclimated. Every experiment has failed. It is perfectly natural that the European powers, whose polity is in direct antagonism with ours, should, from the start, look with jealousy upon the achievements of republicanism here. The successful establishment of our Republic was regarded by many of the wisest statesmen in the old world, as well as in the new, as the grand moral cause of the French Revolution and of the devastating wars that sprang from it.

The same principle of prudence and self-preservation that determined England to embark in the allied war against France, would determine her to seek to hinder and discourage the growth of democracy everywhere. The difference in the course England might actually take in opposing republicanism in France and republicanism in America results only from the greater proximity of the political disease and the consequent greater danger of contagion, of the one country over the other.

From the time of the first James, the reigning house of England has thought it necessary for the security of their sceptre to keep a constant surveillance over the growing principles of democracy. And only by watching its growth and yielding occasionally, though sparingly, to its demands, have they been enabled to keep their power. So it is not only natural, but it is actually indispensable that the crowned heads of Europe should stand together in opposition to the growing disbelief on the part of their subjects in the "Divine right of kings to rule." If the people of England should, some pleasant morning, or bloody night, pull down the House of Brunswick, the people of Austria would straightway pull down the House of Hapsburg, and Napoleon the Little would soon come tumbling after. Now, what President Monroe said was this, the European powers may take care of Europe, but we, the American powers, will take care of America. In this Mr. Monroe showed himself a statesman and a patriot.

This doctrine the American people believe in and are determined to maintain. And when we say the American people, we mean the whole people—no political party—no particular administration. For the Fremont party, or the German radicals, or the Democrats, to undertake to claim this doctrine as their own private property, is to attempt to delude the ignorant and play upon the prejudices of the unthinking.

We have so boldly and earnestly reiterated this principle during the past generation, that foreign powers have, until recently, rather taken it for granted that we were right.

Soon after our secession war began, Louis Napoleon, in casting about for something for his army to do to keep them out of mischief at home, found the Republic of Mexico engaged in some civil commotion. Two parties—both Democratic and both Republican—were contesting for the government of the country. He sent a fleet and an army to Mexico, got a foothold upon the country, and from one step to another, finally succeeded in nominally changing the form of government from a republic to an empire. This was in direct conflict with our well known views, and undoubtedly against the wishes of a large majority of the Mexican people.

Shall we assent to this, expressly or by remaining silent? This thing never would have been done,—nor attempted—had we not been engaged in our civil war. Are we in such a stress that we are not able to maintain our position among the nations of the earth, as we did for forty years before the rebellion?

We are glad to see that, whatever the shortcomings of the administration are in this regard, Congress is equal to the occasion and does not hesitate to publish the sentiment of our people upon this flagitious outrage on the part of the French Emperor. We are extremely gratified to learn that the House of Representatives have passed, by a unanimous vote, the following resolution, reported by Mr. Davis, from the Committee on Foreign affairs:—

"Resolved, That the Congress of the United States are unwilling by silence to leave the nations of the world under the impression that they are indifferent spectators of the deplorable events now transpiring in the Republic of Mexico; therefore they think it fit to declare that it does not accord with the people of the United States to acknowledge a Monarchical Government erected on the ruins of any Republican Government in America under the auspices of any European power."

In contrast with this noble and patriotic expression of the public sense of our country upon a great international question which may affect the liberty of millions for centuries to come, we are pained to see in some of our Republican journals the most pusillanimous suggestion as to our inability to contend with France, coupled with ill-natured flings at Congress. Any one would suppose from reading the comments of such papers—for instance, the Boston Traveller and Salem Gazette,—that the passage by Congress of this resolution would be sure to plunge the country instantly into war with France. We see no ground for this apprehension. The refusal of one government to acknowledge another is not by the law of nations a casus belli.

The time may come when we shall want a reckoning with France—a settlement of accounts. We may wish to bring into investigation her invasion of Mexico, and we ought to take such a position now as will place us right on the record, so that neither France nor any other nation can have any ground for supposing, or pretending to suppose, that this murder of a sister republic was done with our consent or acquiescence. This protest which Congress has passed, or proposes to pass, will do it—and place us where our position cannot be misunderstood, and will leave the question open for future adjustment when circumstances shall bring it before us for final judgment. We thank the House of Representatives for passing this resolution.

JOHN B. GOUGH.—This world renowned orator lectured at Gothic Hall, in Danvers, on Friday evening, the 8th inst, before an audience of about six hundred persons. His subject was Temperance, and though he did not do so well as we have sometimes heard him, yet so persuasive, so pathetic, and so eloquent a lecture could have been given by no other man than Gough. One minute the whole audience would be in tears, and the next all would be laughing as heartily as if they were witnessing some comic play. Mr. Gough's lectures have undoubtedly been the means of saving hundreds of young men from the drunkard's grave; and it would certainly seem that no young man could become habituated to the use of intoxicating liquors after hearing the evils of intemperance portrayed by him. We think that his lecture of the 8th instant will have a good effect, and there has been no time for many years past, when there was so much need of renewed action in the the temperance cause, as at present.

Many young men who, but a few years since, were earnest workers in that cause, are gradually becoming victims of that deadly poison, which sooner or later ruins both the mind and body of him who uses it. We hope our friends of temperance in Danvers will once again put their shoulders to the wheel, and, if possible, in some degree stay the awful tide of intemperance—that evil which is bringing ruin to the doors of so many families, and which carries with it wherever it goes sorrow, poverty, disgrace and misery. Let us to the work again.

OUR CONGRESS TO BE LIKE UNTO PARLIAMENT.—A bill is now pending before Congress authorizing the members of the Cabinet to hold seats upon the floor of the House and to participate in debate, upon matters relating to their respective departments. This proposed innovation is advocated upon the ground of its being similar to the English system, and upon the further ground, that it will be conducive to the convenience of Congress to have somebody representing the Cabinet constantly in attendance to answer inquiries that may need to be made in the course of legislative business. In the better days of our republic, the first reason, namely: consonance with British custom — would have militated against such a proposed change, and the second reason would have been overruled on the ground that the convenience of members of Congress was of no importance compared with the preservation of the great organic principle of our Constitution, that the Legislative, judicial and executive departments of our government should be kept separate and independent.

CORN.—The corn crop fell short last year 130,000,000 bushels.

PEABODY HIGH SCHOOL.

The annual examination of candidates for admission to the Junior Class of the High School, took place on Tuesday of week before last. Thirty pupils from the first classes of our Grammar Schools presented themselves for admission, and one more subsequently, who was in ill health at the time of the examination. Twenty-three were found qualified, agreeably to the standard adopted by the committee. The average number of correct answers by those admitted was at the rate of about 70 to the hundred.

The school commenced on Monday of last week, at which time Miss ADELAIDE E. SOMES, of North Chelsea, assumed her position as Assistant Teacher, she having previously been appointed to that situation by the committee. The school this year begins under very favorable auspices, having in a large degree the confidence and good will of the people, as well as of the parents of the pupils. During the vacation the room has been renovated and improved by carpeting the aisles and platform, tinting the walls and hanging of historical pictures.

The following is a list of the Junior Class, with the Districts from which they enter the school. One is a resident of Felton District No. 6, but at the time of admission attended the Bowditch Grammar School:

SOUTH DANVERS BAND OF HOPE.—Many of our citizens will be glad to know that a temperance association, called the South Danvers Band of Hope, was formed on Saturday afternoon, April 16th. The object of this association is to encourage the young to abstain from intoxicating liquors, tobacco and profanity. There was a large gathering, mostly of children and youth. Rev. Edwin Thompson of Walpole was present, and, in his usual interesting style, so fully set forth the evils of intemperance that 220 of the children were induced to sign their names to the Pledge. May this association receive the hearty co-operation of all true friends of temperance. It will hold semi-monthly meetings, the next of which will be in the vestry of the Congregational Church, on Wednesday afternoon, April 20th, at 2 1-2 o'clock, and all are invited to be present to aid in the good work.

GREAT ARMIES. — Wilkes' Spirit, speaking of the army under Gen. Grant, says it is greater than the fabled hosts of Xerxes. This careless way of stating facts, or alleged facts, practiced by many newspaper writers, leads to wide spread errors concerning well established historical matters. We once knew a fool who put up and lost a considerable wager upon the bet that McClellan's Peninsular army (158,000) was the largest ever commanded in the field by a single general in modern days. He found newspaper authority enough for it, although, in fact, Napoleon started upon his Russian Campaign with 420,000 men and crossed the Niemen with 325,900. Xerxes' "fabled hosts" amounted to 5,000,000, including 2,000,000 fighting men. Again it is hardly right in this connection to call the whole Federal force under Grant, an army. It really consists of a great number of armies, under different department commanders.

We have large armies it is true, but they do not begin to compare with ancient armies, and they fall far short of many modern ones.

SMUGGLING.—A despatch in the Tribune seems to confirm the statement made in the rebel press that Mrs. WHITE, the President's wife's sister, did pass through our lines with three large trunks containing medicines and merchandise. If this is really so, we think it one of those little things that tend to weaken the confidence of the people in the administration, and therefore ought not to have been allowed.

POTATO ROT.—Dr. Tremble has read a paper before the American Institute making known his alleged discovery of the potato rot. He says it is caused by an insect that is propagated with the seed. He has taken out a patent right for the remedy.

☞ We learn from the Army and Navy Journal that Lieut. Horace Poole, formerly of South Danvers, has been appointed by the President, Assistant Adjutant General with the rank of Capt. on the staff of Gen. Banks.

TEMPERANCE CONVENTION.—The Essex South District Temperance Union held their Quarterly meeting at the Vestry of the Old South Church last Thursday, continuing through the day and evening. Mr. ISAAC HARDY acting as Chairman, and Mr. M. B. MANSFIELD as Secretary. The attendance, although not crowded, was very fair.

In the forenoon remarks were made by Messrs. Thompson of Walpole, McCurdy of Marblehead, Morgan of Wenham, Berry of Lynn, and Hardy of South Danvers.

In the afternoon an address was delivered by Rev. Mr. Kelley of Lynn, preceded and followed by a general discussion.

In the evening brief and interesting remarks were made by Messrs. Barrows and Hardy of South Danvers, Cummings and Johnson of Lynn, and Thompson of Walpole. As a meeting for general exhortation to duty it seemed to be very satisfactory to speakers and hearers.—But in point of practical measures, for resisting the tide of intemperance which seems to be rolling up in such alarming height among us, it was lamentably deficient.

☞ The Rev. M. DWIGHT, who has been two years pastor of the Methodist E. Church in this place, has been appointed pastor of the M. E. Church in Swampscott, and Rev. S. B. SWEETSER of Westboro' is his successor.

We are pleased to learn that, through the agency of Mr. DWIGHT, the heavy debt on the Methodist Church edifice, amounting to $4,680, has been reduced $3,320, so that the debt now on the church is only $1,360.

About one half of the above amount was contributed by members and friends of the church on Boston and Lynn Districts. Many of the citizens of South Danvers, not of the Methodist communion, have kindly and generously assisted in this good work.

The church, at present, is in an unusually prosperous state. On the last Sabbath of March, five persons were admitted to her fellowship, and a number became probationary members.

"NATCHITOCHES UNION."—We have received from an old friend at the Headquarters of Gen. Banks' army, a copy of the "Natchitoches Union," printed on common room paper, and coarsely done at that. We also have an "Extra" of the same paper, printed on the thinest kind of brown wrapping paper. This new periodical was got up in a Rebel printing office by some typos in General Banks' army, the staff officers acting as editors and contributors. It nominates Banks for President, and Wade of Ohio for Vice President, and is filled with loyal sentiments and loyal news, all printed with rebel types. It is a rollicking sheet and does not object to a joke at the expense of the departed proprietor of the office, G. DUPLEX, who made a "Duplex movement" when our army took possession of the town. The Extra has some pictorial illustrations after the manner of Phœnix of the "San Diego Herald."

IMPORTANT TO FARMERS.—The Commissioner of Internal Revenue has announced a decision of importance to dairy farmers. Persons who carry on farm and keep cows—selling milk, butter and cheese, as an incident to their farming operations—are considered as farmers, and exempt from license for the sale of their products.

This is as it should be. We have ever thought that it was a narrow view of the law to hold that because a farmer who sells milk from his farm, does occasionally, when short of supply, buy milk to furnish his customers, he must pay ten dollars for a trader's license.

MUSICAL.—We would announce to the citizens of Danvers, that Mr. J. B. WATTS, the popular and successful teacher, will open a class at Gothic Hall next Saturday afternoon, at 5 o'clock, for the instruction of youths and misses, from the ages of three to sixteen years, in the rudiments of vocal music. Terms 50 cents for twelve lessons. Should Mr. W, be successful, he will give a concert at the end of the term.

IDAHO.—This new territory is represented to be rich in gold mines. Multitudes are flocking there in pursuit of the precious metal. A despatch dated March 31, says that about 200 wagon loads of emigrants leave St. Joseph daily for the gold regions. Capt. Fiske, who has generally been considered a reliable man, states that fifteen millions of gold now await shipment.

SUPREME JUDICIAL COURT. — The Spring term of this court commenced in Salem yesterday, Judge Metcalf presiding. The jurors from South Danvers are Joseph W. Fornis, Amos Osborne, 2d; Danvers, James M. Perry.

THE DRAFT.—It is now said the draft has not been postponed, but is soon to be enforced. The deficiency of Massachusetts is not far from 8000.

POLITICS.—The four Ohio delegates at large to the Chicago Convention are all McClellan men.

TOBACCO.—We think that certain great agricultural men and institutions might be in better business than advising our northern farmers to give more attention to the raising of tobacco! When potatoes are a dollar and a half a bushel, butter fifty cents a pound, hay twenty-six dollars a ton, and all other produce of prime necessity equally high and scarce, it seems to us something like giving aid and comfort to the enemy, to advise the raising of tobacco.

SALEM WATER WORKS.—We hear it reported that the Legislative Committee have decided to grant a bill to the city of Salem allowing them to take water from Wenham Pond, or the South Danvers ponds, as the city may elect, for aqueduct purposes.

GROUND BONE.—Mr. Timothy Walton, as will be seen by referring to his advertisement, is now manufacturing this valuable article for farming purposes.

EAGLE.—A splendid eagle, uncommonly well stuffed and prepared, may be seen, with the other interesting objects, at the window of Mr. John S. Ives's seed and book store, No. 281, Essex street. It was recently shot on Dr. Loring's farm.—Gazette.

When the carved image of the eagle for the capitol was presented by the artist to Congress for inspection, one of the members objected to it from its resemblance to what he called the dindon, or turkey, more than a bald eagle, which brought Dr. Franklin to his feet, who remarked that it should have been the turkey, which was not only a true American bird, but that all countries were indebted to America for it. His objection to the eagle was mainly for its bad character as a thief. I, myself, have seen the bald eagle upon the edge of the ice in Salem harbor, watching the gulls, and as soon as they took a fish, give chase and oblige the poor gulls to relinquish their prey. The bald eagle, when young, is called a sea eagle. The white head and tail are not seen until they are at least three years old.

SENTENCED TO BE SHOT.—Augustus Peabody, son of Benjamin W. Peabody of Middleton, has been condemned by Court Martial (near Washington) to be shot on Friday next, for desertion. This fact did not come to the knowledge of Mr. Alley till Wednesday last; since which time, however, our indefatigable Representative has exerted his influence to have the sentence of Peabody commuted, with hopeful prospect of success, although he meets with the strenuous opposition of Peabody's officers.

We learn that Peabody did not desert at all. He merely left camp under the influence of one Rum, who had him in charge. As Rum left him, and he was about to return to duty, he was arrested, tried by court martial and condemned to be shot. Peabody was condemned to be shot, not Rum. Rum still has entire freedom of the Camp, and large influence with officers and men.—Reg.

HARPER'S MAGAZINE, for May, has been received from A. Williams & Co., by R. W. Wilkinson at his periodical depot, in this town. It contains illustrations of Life with the Esquimaux, Psyche, A Visit to the Convent of Sittna, etc., and a large variety of interesting miscellany. This number completes the 28th volume. In the next a new novel by Dickens will be commenced, Thackeray's Denis Duval will be continued, and Trollope's Small House will be concluded.

We are also indebted to Mr. E. B. Waitt of Danvers, for a copy of the same; also for many other favors.

FIRE.—About a quarter past 11 o'clock last Sunday night, fire was discovered by two of our city Watchmen in a two story building in Forrester street, formerly occupied by Mr. Leavitt as a school house. They gave an immediate alarm, and the fire department was promptly on hand. The building was nearly destroyed, and the Wm. Penn Hose house, in the immediate vicinity, was slightly damaged. The fire is believed to have been the work of an incendiary.—Salem Register.

RAILROAD ENGINEER SHOT.—As the 4 P. M. train from Boston was passing through North Chelsea on Saturday afternoon, Mr. William W. Robinson, engineer of the train, received a gunshot wound in his arm, a number of small shot lodging in the flesh. The firing was probably from some careless gunner. Upon arriving in Salem, the shot were extracted and Mr. Robinson's wound was dressed.—Reg.

☞ The last rebel device is said by the New South to have been practised near Jacksonville. A dead negro was found floating in the water, anchored out with a torpedo—an odd mixture of infernal malice and grim humor must have moved the rebel who thought of that decoy.

☞ Very touching and beautiful were the words of the old schoolmaster, as life passed away: "It is growing dark—the school may be dismissed." Down to the very gates of an unseen world he carried his love and regard for the children whom he had trained.

☞ The iron-clad frigate Ironsides has fired since she has been in service 4,361 rounds; has been hit 241 times; has only had one man killed; has not been seriously injured, and is probably the best iron-clad vessel in the world.

☞ On the war democrat question, Mr. Whaley of West Virginia says that there are war democrats enough in his State to go to New York and drive out the traitors with Wood at their head.

☞ A recent letter from an officer in the department of the gulf said: We leave in two hours: but only the Lord and Gen. Banks know where we are going. That's the way to do it.

☞ A Mrs. Carey of Canada West, a colored woman, is engaged in the recruiting business, and reached New Haven a day or two since with twenty-nine men, who were all accepted.

☞ Our armies are now feeding more than 150,000 rebel citizens. Come on, rebs, we'll give you a belly-full of food or a belly-full of fight—just as your appetites may be.—Prentice.

☞ The late John C. Rives was a practical patriot. He gave in the early part of the war $12,000 to recruit a regiment.

GIBRALTAR.

A few weeks ago we published an account of this famous fortress, probably the strongest in the world, on which immense sums of money have been expended and enormous labors by the Moors, Spaniards and English, as they have severally held it. It is an elevated rocky projection, connected to Spain by a narrow neck of low land. Anciently it was known as one of the pillars of Hercules; the other standing upon the opposite side on the African shore.—Into this rock huge fortifications have been hewn, the most remarkable of which is a gallery two or three miles long, from which a thousand guns frown upon the waters below.—It commands the entrance into the Mediterranean; and the improvement in its guns may fully make up for the protection given ships by iron covering, so that relatively it is as strong as it proved to be in the last century when it withstood the severest cannonading from Spaniards and Frenchmen, known in history. It is held by England as a menace, though it is the rightful property of Spain and long since should have been given up. But England has seized upon such points, as naval and military posts in different parts of the world, and has seldom relaxed her grasp when once she has fastened upon a place.

Of late she has given up her possessions on the upper Mediterranean to Greece; and probably she may one day restore Gibraltar and also Monorca to Spain. This has been urged by liberal statesmen and journals in England, and it has been demanded from abroad, while its possession is of little real importance to England. Spain feels the humiliation of a foreign fortress upon her soil threatening her coast; and it is well known that the restoration of Gibraltar is in the plan of Napoleon III. for rectifying territorial limits and boundaries in Europe. Mr. Bright, the Radical leader, in a speech made some three years ago, declared "that from the great changes which had taken place in naval architecture and in other respects, Gibraltar had ceased to be of especial value to England, and that it was simply a monument of a senseless war and a dishonorable peace. It was discreditably taken from Charles the Third, the lawful sovereign of Spain. Our allies were duped in the treaty of Utretcht, in permitting us to obtain Gibraltar and Minorca." He wound up by declaring that "if England would be more moral and more just, she would have more influence among other nations;" a corollary to which, it is inferred, is that a manifestation of it would be to restore Gibraltar to Spain. England holds it now more from pride than because it gives power; and a little magnanimity in its surrender would be justice and policy.—Newburyport Herald.

☞ Gen. George W. Bickly claims in his diary to have been the father of the rebellion. We hear nothing about its mother. In truth it never was worth a dam.—Prentice.

☞ They have fined a man nearly six dollars in Washington for using profane language. A great many boys who play marbles would be in danger of the law were it applied here.

☞ Eight or nine black regiments — over eight thousand men and nearly all slaves—have been raised for our army in Maryland.

☞ Photographic albums are to be sent through the mails at the same postage rates as books, according to Postmaster General Blair.

☞ Hazell Magruder, a wealthy planter of Maryland, is sentenced to Fort Lafayette for one year, for harboring rebel spies.

☞ The spiritualists in the United States are said to number five millions of persons.

BOSTON—Amusements.—At the Boston Theatre, Mlle. Zoe, from New York, appeared as the French Spy, on Monday last. She is a fine actress, and deservedly popular. Manager Marshall is untiring in his efforts to please the public.

At the new Tremont, Mrs. Barrow's excellent Company are playing "The Bull in a China Shop," a piece that has had an extensive run everywhere it has been produced. It is well worthy of a visit.

At the Tremont Temple, Simmons, the greatest magician of modern times, commenced an engagement on Monday last. His stay is short.

Miss Ettie Henderson is at the Howard. She is a pleasing actress.

☞ There are probably no diseases that at the present time are so common as Neuralgia and Rheumatism. Almost every person we meet is complaining of one or the other. The ordinary remedies seem to fail, and patients are seeking in every direction for something to relieve them of the terrible pain. It is gratifying to be able to state that there is one medicine which has recently been discovered that cures this disease. There seems to be no doubt of this, and we cordially recommend our readers to try it. We refer to "Sturgis's Electric Compound," which is for sale by all the druggists.

May Day Fair in Salem.

An invalid lady of Salem has been collecting articles for a May Day Fair, for the benefit of sick and wounded soldiers, to be held at Mechanic Hall, May 2d. Great attractions are provided, and Major Alfred Little, old Father Cleveland, now in his 92d year, and Carleton, the war correspondent of the Journal, will be there. Other novelties will be introduced.—Contributions are solicited, and may be sent to the residence of Moses G. Farmer, 12 Pearl St., Salem. 2w

OFF AND CONCERNING GENTLEMEN.

BY H. O., ESQ.

One very notable thing in modern society is the paucity of good conversationalists—of fine talkers. To be sure we have talkers enough—such as they are—upon the stump, in the pulpit, in the lecture-room — wherever men harangue that great thing called the public. But of private talkers—such as can instruct, entertain and amuse a small circle at a dinner party—men of the sort that gave so much life to the London clubs in the good old days—of these there is a lamentable scarcity—indeed an utter dearth. However brilliant we may be otherwhere, at home, in our houses, we are dull dogs. The most we ever attempt is a poor pun, or the repetition of a stale joke. This is bad enough, but what makes the matter worse, nobody seems to desire it should be otherwise. We think we enjoy ourselves; and some of us really talk about going into society, just as though there was such a thing. Society, indeed! You might as well call a regiment of army horses society! They are just about as sociable. Originality, wit, animal spirits, are at a discount—almost as bad as Government scrip, while staid, respectable dullness is good as gold. At our private entertainments we get up dumb shows, or we invite a few singers, and have what we call music—and all to save ourselves the trouble of talking.

The truth is, we have no capital with which to do this business of carrying on society. We are poverty-stricken. We have each of us just that amount of goods which the law allows us to get along with from day to day. Our furniture is all of the same pattern, made for the market by machinery; and what a world of trouble we take to conceal from one another the fact that what we exhibit is all we have. Don't be ashamed,—you are poor, intellectually, my friend, as Job's cat, but your neighbor, and your neighbor's neighbor, are as poor as you are. They, neither of them, ever had a thought in all their lives. What they have to say of yesterday's events, they got from to-day's paper,—just exactly where you got your notions, such as they are. In religion and politics they have their ideas made and dressed for them by the Rev. Mr. Sham and the Hon. Mr. Shuffle,—the very individuals, for all the world, who furnish you with the same articles. What, then, have you to exchange with Smith, or Smith with you? What have you to say to one another more important than the commonplace talk of the weather, or the price of butter? One knows just what the other knows, which is exactly nothing. The worst part of the matter, however remains to be told. If you, my friend, or Smith, did know anything, or think anything—which haply you never did—you wouldn't dare to tell of it, through fear that it might injure your chances of being elected Fence Viewer at the next town meeting.

We are not only very poor, my dear madam, but we are very cowardly, which is worse.

It is not a very comforting reflection, but one who looks the matter squarely in the face must feel constrained to admit that we are about the most stupid generation of men that ever lived upon the face of the earth. With all our creature comforts and material improvements, one of the good livers in times past would kick us out of doors as a set of incorrigible boors. With all our reforming, inventing and improving, we do not know so well the art of living rational human lives as our fathers did. We are fed well, lodged well and clothed well, and go through the dreary round of trying to make ourselves think we are having a good time. We work hard and work long to earn for ourselves a little ease—to attain a position where we can enjoy ourselves—and yet a day without labor is, to nine out of ten, the most dreary thing in the world. We are terribly dull company to ourselves and every body else. We have thought out nothing, and we have nothing we can call our own. For everything we are indebted to books, to newspapers, or periodicals. They do the thinking, and they do the talking; we sit in groups and read—at best, only repeat what we have read. Formerly men used to ask, "What is the news?" Because each man expected every other man would tell him something. Now no man expects this, and the question is, "Have you seen the last edition?" Formerly men used to meet in society for the purpose of exchanging thoughts and comparing views. There was then variety and versatility. All men had not been moulded down to the same pattern. Now, in these more blessed days of free schools and uniformity of education, when thought runs in its regular channels, and all men are as like as bricks—all we have to do to learn what one's opinions are, and the reasons upon which they are based, is to enquire what party he belongs to and what newspapers he reads. The art of discourse is unnecessary—everthing is in print.

It reminds me of a story I once heard, of a poor gentleman who was very pious and very lazy. Every night, after going to bed, he thought it his duty, before going to sleep, to offer up a long prayer. As the good man was of a sleepy turn, he would sometimes get to dozing before he had finished his prayer. To avoid this, and to save himself trouble in the future, he wrote out a long prayer, in which he prayed for all sorts of earthly and heavenly good things, and nailed it up upon the foot-board of his bed. After this, as he retired o' nights, he would settle himself quietly in bed, point his finger toward this prayer and say, "There, Lord, them's my sentiments!" and go to sleep.

THE HORSE CARS.

Your readers will probably recollect the story of a person, male, of course, as the sequel will show, who desired his tailor to make him a pair of pants, as tight as his skin, as "tight legs"—limbs I mean—were then in fashion. The tailor done as ordered, and when completed, sent them home. Soon, in came the gentleman, pants in hand, complaining of the "tight fit." "Why," exclaimed the tailor, "I done as you ordered, you said make them as tight as your skin." "Yes, yes," replied customer "I know it, but you have made these more so, for I can sit down in my skin, but it is impossible for me to do so in these pants." Whether you wear tight legged pants or not it is impossible for you to sit down in a Metropolitan Horse Car, especially morning and early evening. As it is impossible to obtain standing room at times, we often wonder where all the folks come from. Why, five or six years ago, two or three omnibusses used to run to Roxbury about once an hour, and there was always "room for one more." Now the cars run every five minutes and full nearly every trip. These Horse Cars are an institution, and a big one. By the way we hear a rumor of an extension of the Quincy road to Weymouth, and perhaps to Hingham. We hope so.

AN ANECDOTE.

At a social party, the other evening, the following anecdotes, which have never before been in print, were told by one of the ladies present. As they are too good to be lost, I send them to you for publication:

A gentleman who had a lazy, sleepy servant, had an occasion to stop a short time at a public house and directed his servant to hold his horse until he returned. As soon as his master was out of sight, he sat down on the steps and went to sleep, holding the reins of the bridle in his hand. A wag came along, and seeing his position, slipping the bridle off the horse's head, mounted him and rode away. Thereupon the bystanders set up a loud laugh, which awoke the servant, who in much apparent surprise, exclaimed, "Am I Peter Martin, or am I not? If I am Peter Martin, I've lost a horse; but if I am not Peter Martin, I've found a bridle."

The above anecdote reminds us of a laughable accident which took place not a thousand miles from Boston. A countryman, by the name of Rhodes, went into the city to buy some articles of furniture, and among the rest a rocking chair. Having, as he supposed, safely deposited them in his vehicle, and taken a couple of glasses of liquor, he mounted his cart, and seating himself in the rocking chair, he started for home. The soothing operation of the liquor with the rocking of the chair by the motion of the cart, soon shrouded him in a sound slumber. The chair gradually worked itself out at the hind end of the vehicle, when, by a sudden jolt, the chair and its occupant both slid into the street. This started the horse, which was soon out of sight. The concussion, however, awoke Rhodes, who exclaimed, "Halloo! just as sure as my name is John Rhodes, I've lost my team!" Then pausing a moment, he said, "But perhaps I aint John Rhodes! and if I aint John Rhodes, by gosh! I've found a rocking chair."

ANOTHER.

A very wealthy but eccentric man, of Boston, upon his death-bed, summoned two lawyers of his acquaintance, whom he had often employed to transact his business, and who, with rapacious greed, had, as duly, "bled" his purse in extorting immense fees. With all possible haste, the legal gentlemen responded to the call, and, entering the sick chamber, placed themselves upon either side of the bed—each expecting to receive instructions to draw up the last will and testament of their moneyed friend. Raising himself upon his pillow, the sick man said, faintly,—

"My good friends, you have BOTH served me long and faithfully, and now, desiring to follow the example of our blessed Saviour, I wish to make some acknowledgment of your services."

Visions of golden legacies danced before the mental eyes of the two followers of Coke and Blackstone. But both veiled their joy under a show of sorrow for their friend's low state, and protested that they had only done their duty.

"Ah, my friends," responded the sick man, feebly, "I cannot forget your kindnesses. In my last hours, its memory rises fresh before me; and, as I said before, I am about to follow the example of our blessed Saviour, who, also, DIED BETWEEN TWO THIEVES."

It is needless to add, that the brace of legal sharpers immediately vanished; and that some other functionary of the law drew up the last will and testament of the eccentric old joker.

EXETER, N. H.

A few days since, the iron horse set us down in the depot of quiet, classic Exeter. Somehow, there is a charm about this old town that we cannot resist. Old Exeter—with its quiet streets and quiter citizens, its refinement and literary worth, will ever occupy a large corner in our heart. For one, we dislike the pretensions and glare of new towns. Give us old friends, old wives, and old country towns. Even the very elms of old Exeter have an exclusive, aristocratic air—boasting, doubtless, of the "old families" they have shaded.

Exeter has many flourishing business firms—book stores, etc., and among the periodical depots, we note the firm of Fogg & Fellowes pre-eminent.

The Phillips Academy still holds its own of prosperity; and, when spending a half day in the old town, we encounter scores of youthful students who daily construe Latin verbs and dig for Greek roots in the venerable old institution.—Such men as Daniel Webster, Edward Everett, the Peabodys, Lewis Cass, and others, once daily went to and from this academy, and "the oldest inhabitants" still relate stories, anecdotes, etc., of the boy "Dan," the embryo orator and statesman. Here, on Cass street, still stands—though lately modernized and altered—the old house where Cass was born; and the Town House occupies the site of the old mansion where Webster boarded when a student here.

After dinner we spent an hour in the old grave-yard, pondering over "old mortality" and the records that mark their resting places. Upon the monuments in this venerable yard, I found one of the Rogers family of great antiquity, dating back to the earliest settlement of the town, they being the lineal descendants of John Rogers, the martyr, who was burnt at Smithfield, England, in the days of persecution.

Exeter has much that would attract the sojourner there; and in summer, when it is arrayed in its garniture of green, the old town is particularly inviting. The Exeter News Letter still rejoices in the prosperity which has attended its many years of publication, and may its shadow never be less.

THE LIBRARY CHAIR.

BY S. D. PEABODY.

That library chair—that library chair,—
O where is he, that loved one—where—
Who used to fill that seat?
We listen for his footsteps oft,
And seem to hear him enter, soft,
His favorite retreat.

Alas! his form we ne'er shall see,
Where his delight it was to be,
In that secluded spot—
His books, unopened, stand around,
And many a manuscript is found
Begun, but finished not!

How little thought he, when last there,
That he no more should take that chair,—
There, meet his friends no more;
That his allotted course was run,
His arduous labors all were done,
And time with him was o'er!

And has he passed away so soon,
And has his sun gone down at noon
No more on earth to rise?
Well may his widowed mother weep—
His wife—her mournful vigils keep,—
Their strong staff broken lies!

Nor they alone—a circle wide
Of friends and relatives beside
Lament the dear one gone!
Noble and generous and true,
Affectionate and gentle, too,
He made all hearts his own.

But oh! if he has found a seat
Where all the just, made perfect, meet,
We could not wish him back.
It seems as if Life's summit gained,
He gazed around on what remained,
Then chose the upward track!

And with his God we leave him now,
And pray submissively to bow,
And still his name adore!
We know "He doeth all things well,"
But more than this no tongue can tell,
Nor need we ask for more.

Topsfield, April, 1864.

THE ENGLISH LANGUAGE 55 B. C., 1066 A. D.—NO. I.

Julius Cæsar invaded Britain 55 B. C., and from this date we can, with some degree of accuracy, trace the origin and progress of the English language, but all accounts previous to this are too indefinite to receive more than a mere mention. Aristotle is the first writer who mentions the British islands by name.—He says: "In the ocean, beyond the Pillars of Hercules, are two very large islands, called Bretannic, namely, Albion and Ierne;" the former being England and Scotland, and the latter Ireland.

Considerable trade seems to have been carried on with Britain by the colonists on the shores of the Mediterranean. The first inhabitants were Celts, of a similar origin with those of Gaul, as is shown by their religion. They leave few traces of their language in the present English. They were easily overpowered by the Romans, and the country assumed an aspect of considerable prosperity, but they continued to speak their own language, and only a few Latin words found a permanent place in the language at that time, such as caster (from Latin castra) in Lancaster; street (from L. stratum) and coln (from L. colona) seen in Lincoln.—The Roman Empire was then declining, and Britain was finally abandoned, little benefitted by the Roman conquest.

The people were still in a very low state, although under the Roman power for five hundred years. As yet the English language had no existence, but now comes a new era. The Saxons were called in by the Britains to expel the Picts and Scots, in 449. They came from Lower Germany and were followed or accompanied by the Angles, hence we have the familiar term Anglo Saxon.—After a varied warfare of nearly a century and a half, they not only conquered their enemies, but the Britains themselves, and possessed the whole island. The form of their language cannot now be accurately known. It was a dialect of the Gothic or Teutonic, the parent of nearly all the tongues of northern Europe. They are thus described by Sidonius: "They overcome all who have the courage to oppose them; when they pursue, they inevitably overtake; when they are pursued, their escape is certain. They despise danger; they are insured to shipwreck. Tempests, which to others are so dreadful, to them are subjects of joy." Such were the Anglo-Saxons. Their language forms the basis of the present English. Here we bid adieu to the Celts, the ancient inhabitants of Britain. Unable to oppose the onward tide, they and their language disappear from history.—Their descendants may be still found in Ireland, Wales and a part of Scotland. So complete was the conquest by the Saxons that not more than 150 words of Celtic origin are found in the whole English language.

The Anglo-Saxon language was converted into English by a slow process after several centuries. It is seen in its purest state in King Alfred's writings.—The following is the Lord's Prayer in that language:

"Faeder ure, thu the eart on heofenum.

Si thin mama gehalgod.

To becume thin rice.

Geweorthe thin willa on eorthan, swa swa on heofenum.

Urne daeghwamlican hlaf style us todaeg.

And forgyf us ure gyltas, swa swa we forgifath urum.

And ne gelaede thus us on costnunge, [gyltendum.

ac alys us of yfle: Sothlice."

A BATTLE SCENE.

[The following description of a battle, written by B. F. TAYLOR, has never been excelled by the best efforts of the masters of the poet's arts:]

Then the rattle roll of the musketeers,
And the muffled drums and the rallying cheers,
And the rifles burn with a keen desire,
Like the crackling whips of the hemlock fire,
And the sighing shot and the shrieking shell,
And the splintered fire of the shattered hell,
And the great white breath of the cannon smoke,
As the growling guns by the batteries spoke
In syllables cropped from the thunder of God—
The throb of the cloud where the drummer-boy trod,
And the ragged gaps in the walls of blue,
Where the iron surge rolls heavily through,
That the colonel builds with a breath again,
As he cleaves the din with "Close up, men!"
And the groan torn out from the blackened lips,
And the prayer doled slow with the crimson drips,
And the beamy look in the dying eye,
As under the cloud the stars go by!
"But his soul is marching on," the captain said,
"For the soldier in blue can never be dead!"
And the troopers sit in their saddles all,
As the statues carved in an ancient hall,
And they watch the whirl from their breathless ranks,
And their spurs are close to the horses' flanks,
And the fingers work, of the sabre hand—
Oh, bid them to live, and to make them grand!
And the bugle sounds to the charge at last,
And away they plunge, and the front is passed,
And the jackets blue grow red as they ride,
And the scabbards, too, that clank by their side;
And the dead soldiers deaden the strokes iron-shod,
As they gallop right on o'er the plashy red sod—
Right into the cloud, all spectral and dim,
Right up to the guns, black-throated and grim,
Right down on the hedges bordered with steel,
Right through the dense columns, then "right about wheel!"
Hurrah! a new swath through the harvest again!
Hurrah for the flag! to the battle amen!

A RIDDLE.

My number's seven, yet to thousands belong,
And often am chanted in romance and song;
I'm courted and worshipped by men and by maids,
Though often uncouth and of various shades—
Though sometimes unseemly, dirty and grim,
I adorn the dandy who dresses so trim;
I have such a taste of dressing about me,
That ladies of fashion can't do without me.
A veil for the lowly, a show for the proud,
I'm used in the bridal and used with the shroud!
I fall in great anger, I rise in great fear,
And change in appearance when danger is near!
And those who read the Holy Book
Will see the course I sometimes took;
Parentuides is brought to view,
And how I caught and hung them too.
A mighty man of Bible fame
Did all my power and virtue claim;
Yet he that power and virtue lost
Before he stopped to count the cost!
Cost? What did it cost him? Say, who can—
How was it done—by whom and when?

☞ A curious discovery has been made in the Isle of Man, where it has been ascertained that certain old guns, long used as posts on the quay at Peel, were rifled. Government has ordered them to be transferred to Woolwich, where they are to be preserved as the earliest specimens of rifled ordnance.

☞ "Put violets for me on the coffin of our dear friend who sleeps." Thus touchingly and beautifully telegraphed Mrs. Jessie Fremont to a friend in San Francisco, after hearing of the death of Rev. T. Starr King.

☞ London has a population of 2,803,089; Glascow, 394,864; Edinburg, 168,221; Dublin, 258,328; Liverpool and Birkenhead, 495,587.

SOME FACTS ABOUT TOBACCO.—Which those who use it will read and forget.—Ree's Cyclopedia says a drop or two of the oil, placed on the tongue of a cat, produces convulsions and death in the space of a minute.

A college of physicians has said that not less than twenty thousand, in our land, annually die by the use of this poison.

Dr. Shaw names some eighty diseases, and says they may be attributed to tobacco.

Gov. Sullivan says, "My brother, Gen. Sullivan, used snuff, and his snuff lodged him prematurely in his grave."

Bocarme, of Belgium, was murdered in two minutes and a half by a little nicotine, or alkali of tobacco.

Dr. Twitchell believed that sudden deaths and tobacco, among men, were usually found together, and he sustained this opinion by an array of facts altogether conclusive.

Three young men formed a smoking club, and they all died within two years of the time they formed it. The doctor was asked what they died of. He said they were smoked to death.

HUMAN NATURE.—Some wise man sagely remarked, "there is a good deal of human nature in man." It crops out occasionally in boys. One of the urchins in the School Ship Massachusetts, who was quite sick, was visited by a kind lady. The little fellow was suffering acutely, and his visitor asked him if she could do anything for him. "Yes," replied the patient, "read to me." "Will you have a story?" asked the lady.—"No," answered the boy; "read from the Bible; read about Lazarus;" and the lady complied. The next day the visit was repeated, and again the boy asked the lady to read. "Shall I read from the Bible," she inquired. "Oh! no," was the reply, "I'm better to-day; read me a love story."—New Bedford Standard.

☞ An American agent went to a town in England not long since to engage factory help for American manufacturers. He found no difficulty in obtaining all the females he wanted, and in fact had to disappoint a large number who were anxious to go with him. One young married woman expressed an earnest desire to make one of the party, and the agent finally consented. Her husband was at work in a neighboring town, and she went home, collected her neighbors together at her house, disposed of her furniture at auction, pocketed the proceeds and joined the immigrats within a few hours from the time she had made the bargain with the agent. All she left for her husband was a bed, a three-legged stool, four muffins and a ragged bone.

DISCOVERIES AT POMPEII.—Among the articles recently discovered at Pompeii, says the Chronique des Arts, is a small head of Juno, in silver, of exquisite workmanship; also the body, in silver, but broken; a bridle-bit in bronze; a lamp in the same metal, complete, with cover, suspending chain, and extinguisher; a patera; a large and handsome vase, with the handles terminated by winged genii holding a cornucopia; other small vases in bronze; and a seal in that metal, bearing the name of the master of the house in which the articles were found—Lucio Cornelio Diadumeno.

A POISONOUS TONGUE.—A celebrated lady once said of a censorious neighbor, "His mouth costs him nothing, for he always opens it at the expense of others. I wish that some day he would bite his tongue, for then he would poison himself."

☞ It would have astonished the naval heroes of the last war to have told them that fifty years afterwards the fuel required for the United States navy would cost over four millions and a half of dollars. Yet such is the case.

☞ It is perhaps needless to say that the following epitaph, which we cut from an old magazine, is of Milesian origin. It speaks for itself: "Here lies the body of David Young, and all his posterity for fifty years backwards!"

CHURCHES.—There are 38,183 houses of worship in the United States, of which 12,814 or about thirty-three per cent, are in the States in rebellion.

☞ Frank Pierce has acknowledged the authorship of the Davis letter.

Special Notices.

BELL'S SPECIFIC PILLS—WARRANTED IN ALL CASES.—Can be relied on! Never fail to cure! Do not nauseate! Are speedy in action! No change of diet required! Do not interfere with business pursuits! Can be used without detection! Upward of 200 cures the past month—some of them very severe cases. Over one hundred physicians have used them in their practice, and all speak well of their efficacy, and approve of their composition, which is entirely vegetable and harmless on the system. Hundreds of certificates can be shown.

BELL'S SPECIFIC PILLS are the original and only genuine Specific Pill. They are adapted for male and female, old or young, and the only reliable remedy for effecting a permanent and speedy cure in all cases of Spermatorrhea, or Seminal Weakness, with all its train of evils, such as Urethral and Vaginal Discharges, Gleet, the Whites, Nightly or Involuntary Emissions, Incontinence, Genital Debility and Irritability, Impotence, Weakness, or Loss of Power, Nervous Debility, &c., &c., all of which arise principally from Sexual Excesses or Self-Abuse, or some constitutional derangement, and incapacitates the sufferer from fulfilling the duties of married life. In all sexual diseases, as Gonorrhea, Gleet, and Strictures, and in Diseases of the Bladder and Kidneys, they act as a charm! Relief is experienced by taking a single box. Sold by all the principal druggists. Price $1.

They will be sent by mail, securely sealed, and confidentially, on receipt of the money, by

J. BRYAN, M. D.,
No. 76 Cedar street, New York,

Consulting Physician for the treatment of Seminal, Urinary, Sexual, and Nervous Diseases, who will send, free to all, the following valuable work, in sealed envelope:

THE FIFTIETH THOUSAND.—DR. BELL'S TREATISE on Self-Abuse, Premature Decay, Impotence and Loss of Power, Sexual Diseases, Seminal Weakness, Nightly Emissions, Genital Debility, &c., &c., a pamphlet of 64 pages, containing important advice to the afflicted, and which should be read by every sufferer, as the means of cure in the severest stages is plainly set forth. Two stamps required to pay postage. December 9, 1863—1 yr.

IMPORTANT TO LADIES.—DR. HARVEY'S FEMALE PILLS have never yet failed in removing difficulties arising from obstruction, or stoppage of nature, or in restoring the system to perfect health when suffering from spinal affections, Prolapsus Uteri, the Whites, or other weakness of the Uterine Organs. The Pills are perfectly harmless on the constitution, and may be taken by the most delicate female without causing distress—the same time they act like a charm by strengthening, invigorating and restoring the system to a healthy condition, and by bringing on the monthly period with regularity, no matter from what causes the obstruction may arise. They should, however, NOT be taken during the first three or four months of pregnancy, though safe at any other time, as miscarriage would be the result.

Each box contains 60 Pills. Price $1.

DR. HARVEY'S TREATISE on Diseases of Females, Pregnancy, Miscarriage, Barrenness, Sterility, Reproduction, and Abuses of Nature, and emphatically the Ladies' Private Medical Adviser, a pamphlet of 64 pages, sent free to any address. Six cents required to pay postage.

The Pills and book will be sent by mail when desired, securely sealed, and prepaid, by

J. BRYAN, M. D., General Agent,
No. 76 Cedar street, New York.

☞ Sold by all the principal druggists.

TERRIBLE DISCLOSURES — SECRETS FOR THE MILLION!—A most valuable and wonderful publication. A work of 400 pages, and 30 colored engravings. DR. HUNTER'S VADE MECUM, an original and popular treatise on Man and Woman, their Physiology, Functions, and Sexual Disorders of every kind, with Never-Failing Remedies for their speedy cure. The practice of Dr. Hunter has long been, and still is, unbounded, but at the earnest solicitation of numerous persons, he has been induced to extend his medical usefulness through the medium of his "Vade Mecum." It is a volume that should be in the hands of every family in the land, as a preventive of secret vices, or as a guide for the alleviation of one of the most awful and destructive scourges ever visited mankind. One copy, securely enveloped, will be forwarded free of postage to any part of the United States for 50 cents in post office stamps or 3 copies for $1. Address, post paid, DR. HUNTER, No. 3 Division Street, New York. je 3—1y

HOSTETTER'S
CELEBRATED
STOMACH BITTERS.

A pure and powerful Tonic, corrective and alterative of wonderful efficacy in disease of the

Stomach, Liver and Bowels.

Cures Dyspepsia, Liver Complaint, Headache, Debility, Nervousness, Depression of Spirits, Constipation, Colic, Intermittent Fevers, Cramps and Spasms, and all Complaints of either Sex, arising from Bodily Weakness whether inherent in the system or produced by special causes.

Nothing that is not wholesome, genial and restorative in its nature enters into the composition of HOSTETTER'S STOMACH BITTERS. This popular preparation contains no mineral of any kind, no deadly botanical element; no fiery excitant; but it is a combination of the extracts of rare balsamic herbs and plants with the purest and mildest of all diffusive stimulants.

It is well to be forearmed against disease, and, so far as the human system can be protected by human means against maladies engendered by an unwholesome atmosphere, impure water and other external causes, HOSTETTER'S BITTERS may be relied on as a safeguard.

In districts infested with Fever and Ague, it has been found infallible as a preventive and irresistible as a remedy and thousands who resort to it under apprehension of an attack, escape the scourage; and thousands who neglect to avail themselves of its protective qualities in advance, are cured by a very brief course of this marvelous medicine. Fever and Ague patients, after being plied with quinine for months in vain, until fairly saturated with that dangerous alkaloid, are not unfrequently restored to health within a few days by the use of HOSTETTER'S BITTERS.

The weak stomach is rapidly invigorated and the appetite restored by this agreeable Tonic, and hence it works wonders in cases of DYSPEPSIA and in less confirmed forms of INDIGESTION. Acting as a gentle and painless apperient, as well as upon the liver, it also invariably relieves the CONSTIPATION superinduced by irregular action of the digestive and secretive organs.

Persons of feeble habit, liable to Nervous Attacks, Lowness of Spirits and Fits of Languor, find prompt and permanent relief from the Bitters. The testimony on this point is most conclusive, and from both sexes.

The agony of BILIOUS COLIC is immediately assuaged by a single dose of the stimulant, and by occasionally resorting to it, the return of the complaint may be prevented.

As a General Tonic, HOSTETTER'S BITTERS produce effects which must be experienced or witnessed before they can be fully appreciated. In cases of Constitutional Weakness, Premature Decay and Debility and Decrepitude arising from OLD AGE, it exercises the electric influence. In the convalescent stages of all diseases it operates as a delightful invigorant. When the powers of nature are relaxed, it operates to re-enforce and re-establish them.

Last, but not least, it is The Only Safe Stimulant, being manufactured from sound and innocuous materials, and entirely free from the acid elements present more or less in all the ordinary tonics and stomachics of the day.

No family medicine has been so universally, and, it may be truly added, deservedly popular with the intelligent portion of the community, as HOSTETTER'S BITTERS.

HELMBOLD'S
GENUINE PREPARATIONS.

COMPOUND FLUID EXTRACT BUCHU, a Positive and Specific Remedy for diseases of the Bladder, Kidneys, Gravel, and Dropsical Swellings.

This Medicine increases the power of Digestion, and excite the Absorbents into healthy action, by which the Wtaery or Calcareous depositions, and all Unnatural Enlargements are reduced, as well as Pain and Inflammation.

—:O:—

HELMBOLD'S EXTRACT BUCHU.

For Weaknesses arising from Excesses, Habits of Dissipation, Early Indiscretion of Abuse, attended with the following symptoms:—

Indisposition to Exertion, Loss of Power,
Loss of Memory, Difficulty of Breathing,
Weak Nerves, Trembling,
Horror of Disease, Wakefulness,
Dimness of Vision, Pain in the Back,
Universal Lassitude of the Muscular System,
Hot Hands, Flushing of the Body,
Dryness of the Skin, Eruptions on the Face,
Pallid Countenance.

These symptoms, if allowed to go on, which this medicine invariably removes, soon follows

Impotency, Fatuity, Epileptic Fits,

In one of which the patient may expire.

Who can say that they are not frequently followed by those "Direful Diseases,"

"INSANITY AND CONSUMPTION."

Many are aware of the cause of their suffering, BUT NONE WILL CONFESS THE RECORDS OF THE INSANE ASYLUMS.

And Melancholy Deaths by Consumption bear ample witness to the Truth of the assertion.

The Constitution once affected with Organic Weakness requires the aid of Medicine to Strengthen and Invigorate the system,

Which HELMBOLD'S EXTRACT BUCHU invariably does. A Trial will convince the most skeptical.

—:O:—

FEMALES—FEMALES—FEMALES.

In many Affections peculiar to Females the EXTRACT BUCHU is unequalled by any other remedy, as in Chlorosis or Retention, Irregularity, Painfulness, or Suppression of Customary Evacuations, Ulcerated or Schirrous state of the Uterus, Leuchorrhœa or Whites, Sterility, and for all complaints incident to the sex, whether arising from indiscretion or Habits of Dissipation, or in the

DECLINE OR CHANGE OF LIFE.

—:O:—

Take no more Balsam, Mercury, or unpleasant Medicines for unpleasant and dangerous diseases.

HELMBOLD'S EXTRACT BUCHU AND IMPROVED ROSE WASH CURES

SECRET DISEASES

In all their Stages, At little Expense,
Little or no change in Diet. No Inconvenience.
And no Exposure.

It causes a frequent desire and gives strength to Urinate, thereby Removing Obructions, Preventing and Curing Strictures of the Urethra, allaying Pain and Inflammation, so frequent in this class of diseases, and expelling all Poisonous, Diseased and worn out Matter.

Thousands upon Thousands who have been the Victims of Quacks, and who have paid heavy fees to be cured in a short time, have found they were deceived, and that the "POISON" has, by the use of "Powerful Astringents," been dried up in the system, to break out in an aggravated form, and perhaps after Marriage.

—:O:—

Use HELMBOLD'S EXTRACT BUCHU for all affections and diseases of the URINARY ORGANS, whether existing in MALE or FEMALE, from whatever cause originating and no matter of HOW LONG STANDING.

Diseases of these Organs requires the aid of a DIURETIC. HELMBOLD'S EXTRACT BUCHU IS THE GREAT DIURETIC, and is certain to have the desired effect in all Diseases for which it is Recommended.

Evidence of the most reliable and responsible character will accompany the medicine.

STURGIS'S
ELECTRIC COMPOUND!
AN EFFECTUAL CURE FOR
NEURALGIA AND RHEUMATISM.

Also, invaluable for Spinal Irritation, Hip Complaints, Ague in the Face, Tooth Ache, Pain in the Side, Back, Limbs, Ear Ache, Lumbago, &c.

The proprietor, in offering this medicine to the public, desires to state that this preparation does not belong to the class called patent medicines. Its value has been tested for many years, and it has been found fully adequate to the removal of many obstinate cases of the above complaints, which other celebrated remedies had failed to reach, and which had baffled the skill of eminent physicians. The proprietor does not claim that it will cure but one class of disease. All persons who are afflicted with any of these complaints are earnestly requested to try this Compound and judge for themselves.

AMONG THE ADVANTAGES OF THIS MEDICINE ARE THE FOLLOWING:

Its effect is very rapid—in most cases instantaneous.

It is external in its application, and the patient runs no risk in using it. It does not strike to the stomach.

It reaches the nerves and muscles, as it is believed no other medicine does.

It has cured some of the most violent and obstinate cases of Neuralgia ever known.

It can be used on a child or on an aged person alike.

While it is very powerful, it is perfectly harmless.

The proprietor has been allowed to publish the names of many persons who have used the Compound with the most beneficial results. He inserts here a few of them. They are among the most respectable citizens of Boston, and their residences and places are given:

The proprietor is permitted to publish the following letter from C. C. Pitkin, Esq., Principal of the High School in the city of Chelsea, and well known as one of the most successful teachers in New England:

CHELSEA, April 30, 1863.

FRIEND WILLIAMS:—Yours of the 26th is received. My wife was troubled with severe Neuralgia in the face. She tried your Compound with decidedly good effect. I think it is an excellent article, and have recommended it in one instance, where it also produced good effect. You certainly have the liberty to refer it to me.

With much respect, yours truly,
C. C. PITKIN.

FOR NEW YORK.
Norwich Steamboat Train.
The only Boats Landing at Jersey City.

CABIN Passage, $5.00; Deck Passage, $4.00. The new and elegant sixteen wheel cars of the steamboat express train leave the Boston & Worcester Railroad Station, Albany Street., at 5¼ P. M., daily, connecting with the new steamers, (built expressly for this line,) CITY OF BOSTON, Capt. WILCOX, Mondays, Wednesdays, and Fridays; CITY OF NEW YORK, Capt. JEWETT, Tuesdays, Thursdays and Saturdays, which (before proceeding to their Pier, No. 39 North River,) will touch at the wharf of the New Jersey Railroad at Jersey City, (Sundays excepted) thus enabling Southern Passengers to make sure connections with the First Southern Train, and at the same time avoid the great annoyance of the Ferry and Hack transportation in the crowded streets of New York. This insures ample time for Breakfast before the trains leave. Conductors D. F. WALLER and W. F. BARTON accompany the passengers through.

Tickets, Berths and Staterooms secured at the Railroad Station, and at the Office of the line, 79 Washington Street, Boston.

Through tickets to Philadelphia, Baltimore and Washington can be had at 79 Washington Street, Boston.

ALWAYS SUCCESSFUL!

TO ALL THOSE WHO SUFFER FROM

DEBILITY AND SEMINAL WEAKNESS.

DRS. CARSWELL & HUNTER, regularly educated, highly eminent and successful practitioners, after a very extensive practice in Boston, for over twenty years, need hardly speak of their medical qualifications, or remind strangers not to class them with a set of uneducated men, who fill the papers with their boasting advertisements. Drs. C. & H. caution the public against quackery in all its forms, pretending, as some self-styled doctors, to cure all the most difficult and chronic diseases, without knowledge of the human system, or of the modus operandi of the most simple drugs.

Drs. C. & H., since 1840, having confined their whole attention to an office practice for the cure of Private Diseases and Female Complaints, they acknowledge no superiors.

CONSTITUTIONAL DEBILITY OR SEMINAL WEAKNESS.

Drs. C. & H. are pre-eminently successful in the treatment of the above most difficult and perplexing of all diseases, this complaint being the result of a secret habit in youth; if neglected or improperly treated, it proves one of the greatest evils that can befall a human being. Dr. H. has given particular attention to the above disease for years, and so thoroughly has he become acquainted with the pathology and treatment, that he will warrant a perfect cure under forfeiture of $500; in fact, he will, in the cure of this complaint, acknowledge no superior in this country, or even in the world. Come, then, all you who are afflicted, come to the Old Stand, where you will in a short time be made to rejoice in perfect health.

SYPHILITIC AND SCROFULOUS AFFECTIONS,—such as Ulcers and Caries of the throat and nose, Running Sores on the legs and arms, Hard Scabs and Scaly Eruptions on the head, back, &c., pains in the bones and joints, and all other forms of venereal diseases—are made to yield and entirely disappear under Drs. C. & H.'s improved and thoroughly eradicating course of treatment.

The primary or first symptoms of disease, whether a simple running, or small pistules, cancers, or ulcers, are cured in a very few days, if immediate application is made to Drs. C. & H.

13 ENDICOTT STREET, BOSTON. 13

Strangers should be particular in the selection of a physician, lest they be deceived by false advertisements.

Ladies troubled with irregularity, weakness, whites, and other complaints peculiar to the female system, will find a speedy cure by calling as above. No mercury used, and no charge for advice. The afflicted are invited to give us a call.

Boston, April 20, 1864.—1 yr.

25 YEARS' EXPERIENCE enables DRS. CARSWELL & HUNTER to cure any diseases of a private nature in a shorter space of time and for a smaller amount of money than any other doctors in this country, and they also treat all female complaints with perfect success, and on the most satisfactory terms. Patients furnished with board if desired. Please give us a call at our office, No. 13 Endicott St., Boston, Mass.

From the army hospital—the bloody battle-field—the mansion of the rich and humble abode of the poor—from the office and the sacred desk—from the mountain top, distant valleys and far-off islands of the ocean—from every nook and corner of the civilized world—is pouring in the evidence of the astonishing effects of DRAKE'S PLANTATION BITTERS. Thousands upon thousands of letters like the following may be seen at our office.

REEDSBURY, WIS., Sept. 16, 1863.

"* * * * I have been in the army hospitals for fourteen months—speechless and nearly dead. At Alton, Ill. they gave me a bottle of Plantation Bitters. * * * Three bottles restored my speech and cured me. * * * *

"* * * One young man, who had been sick and not out of the house for two years with Scrofula and Erysipelas, after paying the doctors over $150 without benefit, has been cured by ten bottles of your Bitters.

EDWARD WOUNALL.

The following is from the Manager of the Union Home School for the Children of Volunteers:

HAVEMEYER MANSION, FIFTY-SEVENTH ST.,
New York, August 2, 1863.

"DR. DRAKE: Your wonderful Plantation Bitters have been given to some of our little children suffering from weakness and weak lungs with most happy effect. One little girl, in particular, with pains in her head, loss of appetite, and daily wasting consumption, on whom all medical skill had been exhausted, has been entirely restored. We commenced with but a teaspoonful of Bitters a day. Her appetite and strength rapidly increased, and she is now well * * Respectfully, MRS. O. M. DEVOE."

"* * * I owe much to you, for I verily believe the Plantation Bitters have saved my life.
REV. W. H. WAGGONER, Madrid, N. Y."

"* * * Thou wilt send me two bottles more of thy Plantation Bitters. My wife has been greatly benefited by their use.
Thy friend, ASA CURRIN, Philadelphia, Pa."

"* * * I have been a great sufferer from Dyspepsia, and had to abandon preaching. * * * The Plantation Bitters have cured me.
REV. J. S. CATHORN, Rochester, N. Y."

"* * * Send us twenty-four dozen more of your Plantation Bitters, the popularity of which are daily increasing with the guests of our house.
SYKES, CHADWICK & CO.,
Proprietors Willard's Hotel, Washington, D. C.

"* * * I have given the Plantation Bitters to hundreds of our disabled soldiers with the most astonishing effect.
G. W. D. ANDREWS,
Superintendent Soldiers' Home, Cincinnati, O.

"* * * The Plantation Bitters have cured me of liver complaint, of which I was laid up prostrate and had to abandon my Business.
H. B. KINGSLEY, Cleveland, O."

"* * * The Plantation Bitters have cured me of a derangement of the kidneys and urinary organs that has distressed me for years. It acts like a charm.
C. C. MOORE, 254 Broadway, N. Y."
&c. &c. &c. &c. &c.

The Plantation Bitters make the weak strong, the languid brilliant, and are exhausted nature's great restorer. They are composed of the celebrated Calisaya Bark, Wintergreen, Sassafras, Roots, Herbs, &c., all preserved in perfectly pure St. Croix Rum.

S.—T.—1860—X.

Persons of sedentary habits troubled with weakness, lassitude, palpitation of the heart, lack of appetite, distress after eating, torpid liver, constipation, &c. deserve to suffer if they will not try them.

They are recommended by the highest medical authorities, and are warranted to produce an immediate beneficial effect. They are exceedingly agreeable, perfectly pure, and harmless.

NOTICE.—Any person pretending to sell Plantation Bitters in bulk or by the gallon is a swindler and impostor. It is put up only in our patent log cabin bottle Beware of bottles refilled with imitation deleterious stuff for which several persons are already in prison. See that every bottle has our private United States Stamp over the cork unmutilated, and signature on steel plate side label.

Sold by respectable dealers throughout the habitable globe.

A SUNBEAM AND A SHADOW.

I hear a shout of merriment,
A laughing boy I see;
Two little feet the carpet press,
And bring the child to me.
Two little arms are round my neck,
Two feet upon my knee:
How fall the kisses on my cheek!
How sweet they are to me.

That merry shout no more I hear,
No laughing child I see;
No little arms are round my neck,
Nor feet upon my knee!
No kisses drop upon my cheek,
Those lips are sealed to me.
Dear Lord, how could I give him up
To any but to thee!

AGRICULTURAL WAREHOUSE.

PARKER, GANNETT & OSGOOD.

Our readers need not to be told that Boston has long had some of the largest and most complete agricultural establishments in the country—quite characteristic of the enterprise of the people. The agricultural interests of the country have received no little of their impetus from the energy and inventive skill of New England. Of late years, however, other portions of the country—the great and growing States of the West, which still largely depend upon Massachusetts for their best implements—have contributed to the great and accumulating apparatus of husbandry. In this connection we have to call attention to the enlarged establishment of Messrs. PARKER, GANNETT & OSGOOD, who have just removed from Blackstone street to the large building on North Market street, fronting Merchants Row, lately occupied by Manning & Glover. In this building ample room is afforded for the arrangement and display of the Implements and Tools of Agriculture and Seeds of every description, American and Foreign. It would require a pamphlet to enumerate by name only the contents of this establishment—all of which are intended for the various pursuits and operations of the farmer and the horticulturist. Among some of their more considerable implements for extensive operations in husbandry may be named the Buckeye Mowing machine, Reaping machine, Horse Rakes and Horse Pitch Fork,—articles which on a great farm are equal to the labor of nearly one hundred men for the time their service is required. The city resident, who has such an imperfect idea of the extent of farming operations and so little notion of the way in which they are performed, looks at these things with surprise and wonders who will buy such ponderous machines and how they can be used with horse power. The idea for example of loading and unloading hay with a horse pitch fork! Next to these great implements come the planting machines, for seed of all kind that can be sowed in drills or straight lines, and these are operated either by horse-power or by man-power, and besides doing the work better than it can be done by hand, are great labor-savers. They cover the seed as well as drop it.

It will occur to the reader that the implements and tools in this establishment, almost infinite in kind and variety, are made either of wood or iron or of the two combined—and it is found that the wood of adjoining States differ in their suitableness for certain purposes.—Among the wooden implements may be mentioned hand rakes, churns, ox-yokes and bows, ladders, &c., by the thousand; among the iron articles are immense cauldrons, pumps and tools in endless variety, having handles or other parts of wood. To indicate the variety of form and size in which some of these articles are made we may mention that there are no less than three hundred iron castings, each of them forming some part in the various kinds of ploughs sold at this establishment.

Every kind of implement or tool known to the art of husbandry, from a "Buckeye Mower" to a pair of pruning scissors or a butter stamp, is to be found here, in such diversity of form and size as will suit any taste or any purpose.

In the Seed Department, the accumulations and results are still more surprising, and the varieties more numerous. Here are found heaps of bags of the most minute seeds, as of grass and clover, of tons weight; grains of all sorts and varieties, enough in quantity, one would think, to plant over the whole Commonwealth. Vegetable and garden seeds occupy numerous barrels, boxes, bins and drawers, and are of almost endless variety, adapted to different purposes and various soils.

In short, there may be found at this wonderful establishment every article requisite for farming on a large scale—excepting the farm, and we think it probable that this could be furnished at short notice. The proprietors have their implements and tools made expressly for their trade, and their seeds are raised to order. All these articles are of the best kinds made or to be produced by careful cultivation. To the uninitiated the collection forms an extensive museum and a visit to the establishment will afford a wide field for thought and speculation to all who are interested in the progress of the great primitive art of all arts—Husbandry.

FIGHTING AND PRAYING.

There was a time, and not very long ago, when the majority of people in civil life took their notions about military men from the prurient English comedies of George III's period; when, to be an officer of the army implied a code of morals offensive to public taste and domestic happiness, in which code, if to love your neighbor was not inculcated, to love your neighbor's wife was. According to that code, religion was at a discount, and a praying soldier was a "canting hound."

Caricature, as this undoubtedly was, of English society, it has been in all time, absolutely false of the American army. A better set of men than our old army, could not be found in equal number taken at random from any other profession, and among them some of the very best officers have been devoutedly religious. But it is not of such men we mean to speak. Our present purpose is to point out the prevalence of the religious element among all classes of fighting men; the fact that those who hold their lives in their hands, leaving "senseless bigots" to fight "for forms of creed," recognize the God of battles, and pray for themselves and their country in the midst of danger. The simplest expression of the relations of "praying and fighting" was, perhaps, the blunt order—"Put your trust in God, and keep your powder dry."

It is easy to prove what we have said by reference to modern history. The Mussulman humbly obeys the muezzin's call before he plunges into the fight to reap glory, or gain Paradise and the Hooris. Indeed he rather outstrips the Christian in regularity of prayer.

Cromwell and his praying Puritans were dangerous men to meet in battle. The "Sword of the Lord and of Gideon" was exceeding sharp, tempered as it was with hourly prayers.

Nor were the Cavaliers wanting in prayer, although despising the so-called cant of the Roundheads. The King's men repeated their collects for Church and King. "Boys, my brave boys," said Major Shippen, "pray well and fight well, and God will certainly give us the victory." "Oh Lord!" said another, "if I forget Thee, as in the press of battle I may, do not Thou forget me."

There is something sublime in the spectacle of Gustavus Adolphus and his vast army, on the eve of the battle of Lutzen, in which he fell, praying on bended knee, and then chanting—

> "Be of good cheer—your cause belongs
> To him who can avenge your wrongs;
> Leave it to Him, our Lord."

The King fell, and the battle was gloriously won.

It is related of the celebrated soldier La Hire, that when about to go into battle, he sent for the priest to obtain absolution. He was told to confess. He had no time to go into detail, he said, but he confessed "all the usual sins of a soldier's life." Upon receiving absolution, he made his prayer as follows: "Oh Lord, do unto me this day, as I would unto Thee if I were God and thou wast La Hire." It sounds harsh to us now, but the proud old Frenchman thought he was very devout.

Who can ever forget the touching colloquy between my Uncle Toby and Corporal Trim, concerning the prayers of soldiers. It is eloquent, patriotic and true. Find it, oh reader, in the inestimable Tristram, and enjoy it again. If it speaks volumes for my uncle and the Corporal, it says much also for "our army in Flanders," especially considering that other accounts may make them "swear terribly."

All the world knows that Stonewall Jackson struck harder blows because he prayed so much. He was evidently of the fanatical stamp, and his prayers were rather dervish-like than intelligible Christian petitions, and yet they fired the man who fought better than any other rebel.

Rosecrans, a devout Roman Catholic, just before his designed attack on Chattanooga, had masses said in all the churches of Cincinnati for the success of his arms. The same solemn spirit pregnant with results!

And so it must always be. Before going into battle the foolish, wicked, unmeaning oath is silent; with the bracing of the nerves, there goes up a silent prayer for strength and valor and deliverence. The wounded pray to be saved from death; the dying recall the words of old petitions learned in their childhood, and in these broken accents commit their souls to God.

On the battle-field of Gettysburg were found, broad-strewn, Bibles and prayer books. Carried in coat bosoms or pockets, they came forth in the bitter moment, a solace to the wounded and dying, and a proof that soldiers pray as well as fight. All honor and thanks to the worthy chaplains who foster this noble spirit and to the philanthropic men who care for the soldier's interest at home, taking with them, in timely visits on battle-field, and in crowded hospitals, comforts for the poor suffering mortal bodies, and holy books and words of prayer for the well-being of immortal souls.—Army and Navy Journal.

WOMAN'S DEVOTION.

History is full of sublime instances of the devotion of the sex. We will note one or two in passing, and choose those of ancient times, partly to do justice to the ancients, and partly because those of our own times are so familiar to our readers, that it is scarcely necessary to mention them.

We learn from the pages of Tacitus that Pompeia Paulina, the wife of Seneca, the philosopher, furnishes one of the most notable examples of the ancient world. While she was young and beautiful, and her husband drooping with age, she refused to survive him, when Nero, his former pupil, condemned him to death. After he had bid her an affectionate farewell, she said:

"No, Seneca, I am not a woman to suffer you to go alone on such a journey; I will not have you to think that the virtuous examples of your life have not yet taught me how to die; and when can I ever better, or more becomingly do it, or more to my own desire, than with you."

Nor was this any idle promise. She subjected herself to the same means of producing death that her husband had. That is, she had her veins opened; and she finally survived, only because the tyrant, afraid of the effects of her youth, beauty, and great family influence, caused her wounds to be bound up, while she was insensible from loss of blood.

Of a character equally noble was the wife of Pliny the younger. We have the testimony of her husband, who knew her best, in proof of this. "Her affection for me," he says, "has given her a turn for my books and my compositions, which she takes a pleasure in reading, and even getting by heart, are continually in her hands. How full of tender solicitude is she when I am entering on any cause! How kindly does she rejoice with me when it is over! While I am pleading she places persons to inform her from time to time how I am heard, what applause I receive, and what success attends the cause. When at any time I recite my works, she conceals herself behind some curtain, and with secret rapture enjoys my praises. She sings verses to her lyre, with no other master but love—the best instructor—for her guide."

It is true that all the great Romans do not speak with equal enthusiasm in favor of the sex; but, on the contrary, none have passed a harsher judgment than the countrymen of Seneca and Pliny. Thus, for example: "Metellus Numidius, the censor, declared to the Roman people in a public oration, that, had kind Nature allowed us to exist without woman, we should be delivered from a very troublesome companion; and he could recommend matrimony only as the sacrifice of private pleasure to public duty."

But Metellus Numidius had met with the worst specimens. We have no authentic account of his having been married; but it is clearly proved that he was severely jilted by more than one of the Roman beauties. Be this as it may, his stock of gallantry must have been very slight;—his conduct was very different from that of his brother censor, honest old Cato, or Mark Antony, each of whom allowed more liberty to his wife than the most liberal "model husband" even of the present day would be willing to grant. But whether he was right or not—no matter what cause he may have had to dislike the sex—sufficient testimony remains in the history of even pagan Rome, to show that self sacrificing devotion and fidelity are no new attributes of woman. That her best qualities have been improved, however, by the humane and gentle spirit of Christianity, far be it from us to deny. On the contrary, none are more willing to render homage to its ennobling influence, although we believe that as long as the world lasts, there will be Xantippes.

Without departing from our prescribed plan of passing over instances that are sufficiently familiar, we may note the case of a Christian lady of the seventeenth century; one as much distinguished for piety as for her devoted affection for her husband. Thus, we are told that when the famous Grotius was condemned to prison for life, he owed his liberation to the tenderness and solicitude of his wife, after a captivity of little more than two years. On pretence of removing books which she said proved injurious to her husband's health, she was permitted to send away a small chest of drawers, three feet and a half in length, in which the author of "De Jure Belli et Pacis" was concealed. Thus he was carried by two soldiers from the fortress. The chest was then removed to a distance on horseback; and the illustrious captive was set at liberty, pursuing his flight afterward in the guise of a mason, with a rule and trowel.

KEEP YOUR EYE ON YOUR NEIGHBORS.

Take care of them. Do not let them stir without watching. They may do something wrong if you do. To be sure, you never knew them to do anything very bad, but it may not be on your account they have not. Perhaps if it had not been for your kind care, they might have disgraced themselves and families a long time ago. Therefore do not relax any effort to keep them where they ought to be; never mind your own business, that will take care of itself. There is a man passing along—he is looking over the fence—be suspicious of him; perhaps he contemplates stealing something some of these dark nights; there is no knowing what queer fancies he may have got into his head. If you find any symptoms of any one passing out of the path of duty, tell every one else you can see and be particular to see a great many. It is a good thing to circulate such things, though it may not benefit yourself or any one else particularly. Do keep something going—silence is a dreadful thing; though it is said there was silence in heaven for the space of half an hour, do not let any such thing occur on earth; it would be too much like heaven for the inhabitants of this mundane sphere. If after all your watchful care, you see nothing out the way with any one, you may be sure it is not because they have not done anything bad; perhaps, in an unguarded moment, you have lost sight of them; throw out hints that they are no better than they should be—that you should not wonder if people found out what they were after a while, then they may not carry their heads so high. Keep it agoing and some one will take the hint and begin to help you after a while—then there will be music, and everything will work to a charm.

HONORABLE CONDITIONS.—Many years ago, in what is now a flourishing city in this State, lived a stalwart blacksmith, fond of his pipe and his joke. He was also fond of his blooming daughter, whose many graces and charms had ensnared the affections of a susceptible young printer. The couple, after a season of billing and cooing, "engaged" themselves, and nothing but the consent of the young lady's "parient" prevented their union. To obtain this, an interview was arranged, and typo prepared a little speech to astonish and convince the old gentleman, who sat enjoying his favorite pipe in perfect content. Typo dilated upon the fact of their long friendship, their mutual attachment, their hopes for the future, and like topics; and, taking the daughter by the hand, said—"I now, sir, ask, your permission to transplant this lovely flower from its parent bed"—but his "pheelinx" overcame him, he forgot the remainder of his oratorical flourish, blushed, stammered, and finally wound up with—"from its parent bed into my own." The father keenly relished the discomfiture of the suitor, and, after removing his pipe and blowing a cloud, replied—"Well, young man, I don't know as I've any objection provided you will marry the girl first!"

☞ An industrious fellow is Mr. Holiday of the Cass County (Iowa) Gazette, who sets his own editorial at the case without copy, does all his press work, mailing, job work, wood cutting, sweeping, etc. Few holidays for such a chap.

☞ Jones complained of a bad smell about the post office, and asked Brown what it could be. Brown didn't know, but suggested that it might be caused by "the dead letters."

INVISIBLE ARMOR.

General Schuyler was one of the American officers in the army which fought for our freedom. He figured largely in those stirring scenes which took place on the Hudson and Mohawk rivers, when the English Generals hired the Indians to come and fight on their side. Gen. Schuyler had great influence with red men. They loved and feared him; so the English wished he was out of the way; and as he did not get shot on the field of battle, a plot was hatched to waylay and murder him.
